Union Officials Seek Quick End To Dock Strike

By MALCOLM STEPHENSON

NEW YORK (AP) — Top officials of the longshoremen's union, seeking a quick end to the Atlantic and Gulf Coasts dock strike, have launched a campaign to get members in the Port of New York to vote again and approve a contract they rejected by a slim margin.

The rejection triggered the strike by 60,000 members of the AFL-CIO International Longshoremen's Association in ports from Maine to Texas.

An estimated 200 ships are tied up in ports. More are expected to arrive today.

Estimates of losses to the national economy, including effects on related industries, range from $20 million to $25 million a day.

Union leaders and Asst. Secretary of Labor James J. Reynolds say the contract was rejected here last Friday because the rank-and-file misunderstood the contract.

A campaign to sell the contract to the men was decided on at an ILA executive council meeting Monday, first day of the strike.

Union officials went to ILA locals here to find out the reasons for rejection, to explain the advantages of the contract and to get a new vote among the 24,000 longshoremen.

ILA President Thomas W. Gleason said he had heard reports of "agitators telling lies to the men." He said he did not know who the agitators were.

Gleason spoke of "fear of automation" among the union members. This was a reference to a clause in the proposed contract for gradual reduction of the size of work gangs from 20

New Judges And Officials Are Sworn in

The swearing-in ceremony for new judges and officials for the new term was held today in District Court No. one.

The ceremony was conducted by the presiding judge for the forthcoming term, David W. Enoch. Judges William M. Calvert, G. Russell Miller and Hunter D. Hardeman were also present.

Judge Enoch addressed the audience which more than filled the courtroom, explaining the recent revision of the court system.

This day, he said, marked not only a new term for the District judges, but was also the start of a "modernized" judicial system, the first change made in the court system since the beginning of the state of Colorado.

Pilot Dies in Avoiding Homes in Plane Crash

FREMONT, Calif. (AP) — Courage and luck were on the side of Navy Cmdr. Henry T. Stanley when his T33 jet trainer developed mechanical trouble Monday above a Fremont residential area. But fate was against him.

Cmdr. Stanley passed the courage test. He stayed with his plane past the safety margin — trying to avoid hitting homes. And he died.

But luck placed the crashing jet in a vacant lot, directly in the heart of a bustling neighborhood crowded with hundreds of school children headed home.

The plane exploded, scattering debris. Lou Ann Endicott, 7, was so close she was spattered with mud.

"It took a hell of a lot of guts and a hell of a lot of luck," a Navy spokesman said.

Stanley, 39, had only seconds to make a decision when it was evident the plane would crash.

He ordered his copilot, Lt. Cmdr. Harford Field, 35, of Mobile, Ala., to bail out at 2,500 feet. Field saw Stanley aim the aircraft toward Mission Peak, a mountainside with no homes,

Wider Science Education Urged by Speaker at CC

"Unless there is a general understanding of science, there will be a scientific hierarchy in our country," said Dr. I. I. Rabi, University Professor of Columbia University, at Colorado College Monday night.

Dr. Rabi was speaking on "The Two Cultures: Can They Be Made One?" at the Colorado College Symposium.

Taped remarks by C. P. Snow, who in 1959 charged that there was a gulf between the scientific and literary cultures, preceded the speech. "In the scientific and artistic experience," said Snow, "the act of creation is identical, but the content of the creative process is probably considerably different." The realization of the difficulty of communication is the first step toward solving the problem, however, said Snow.

Dr. Rabi said that Snow also accused the "literary and humanistic culture of indifference, inaction, and insensitivity to moral issues involved in a developing society."

"We need important common elements in our national culture," he continued. There has been tremendous improvement in secondary science education, especially physics, under the leadership of such persons as J. R. Zacharias of M. I. T.

Education, however, has become ever more specialized. "The student's mind is supposed to absorb disparate bits of knowledge and fuse them into a whole person to meet reality," said Dr. Rabi. "To become well-rounded through specialists is difficult."

"Science must be moved to the center of the stage in education," said Dr. Rabi. The scope of study must be intelligently limited, however, so that one acquires not more details, but an understanding of the scientific method.

"We must develop values and goals to fit our times, our goals, and our expanding knowledge," said the speaker, and must concern ourselves with "the maintenance of world peace under the shadow of nuclear annihilation."

"What will interest the student of today?" asked Dr. Rabi. He suggested raising the quality of life in backward areas, lunar and planetary observation, linguistics and communication, electronics, organization of the brain, sub-particle physics, the abstractions of mathematics and philosophy, and the emo-

70 in Fountain Attend Town's Council Meeting

Tension fell with the gavel over some 70 citizens of Fountain Monday night as they jammed the municipal building for the regular meeting of the town's board of trustees.

The unusual amount of interest has been aroused by two separate happenings: First, the circulation of a petition to recall the mayor and council members; secondly, the board's firing of the entire police force in a special meeting Dec. 21.

General business and lengthy discussions of other issues did not dampen the crowd's fervor — in fact it only served to increase the tension.

In general business, the board voted to:

1. Table a motion to award vacation pay to the three discharged police officers.

2. Table a motion to award back clothing allowances to the same.

3. Table any action determining the use of fire trucks outside town limits.

4. Table action on an ordinance concerning raising vested fowl or livestock within town limits.

5. Approved payment of the bills.

The first two motions were

Burch Quits; Bliss Gets GOP Post

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Republican National Chairman Dean Burch today announced he will resign, effective April 1, and that Ray Bliss, Ohio GOP chairman, has consented to become national chairman.

The announcement was made at a joint news conference in Phoenix attended by former Sen. Barry Goldwater, the party's 1964 presidential nominee; Burch; Bliss, and William E. Miller, GOP vice presidential nominee.

Burch said he will submit his resignation at a meeting of the Republican National Committee in Chicago Jan. 22-23 and added that unity cannot be achieved by forcing a vote over his chairmanship in Chicago.

"Even if I won under those circumstances, neither I nor those who opposed my chairmanship would be comfortable and my effectiveness would be impaired," Burch said.

Some Republicans have been clamoring for Burch's resignation since the beating the party took in the general election.

Solon Warns Against Sales Tax Increase

One of El Paso County's freshmen legislators wants to go slow on the sales tax increase proposed Friday to the 45th General Assembly.

Gov. John Love in his message to the assembly Friday asked for a one-cent sales tax increase as well as an increase in the cigarette tax.

The legislator was George F. Jackson, Republican member of the House of Representatives. He pointed out that he is not in any way at odds with the governor, but just has a different view of the problem.

Love outlined some of the educational problems facing the state and asked that the extra money be raised to help meet the problems.

Jackson said "I am not in favor of the one-cent sales tax

A hearing in Denver U. S. District Court has been postponed to Jan. 21 on a show-cause order against the incumbent Progressive Party of the International Typographical Union and a Colorado Springs printing firm.

Judge William E. Doyle ordered officials of the ITU and the Gowdy-Printcraft Press, Inc., of Colorado Springs to appear and show cause why they should not be required to produce records dealing with a union election last May 21.

After this election, a union newspaper admitted that election ". . irregularities occurred in the reports of 57 locals with a total of 5,612 votes."

New County-Wide Sales Tax Is Being Sought

City councilmen voted this morning to ask for a two per cent county-wide sales tax.

Final approval of such a tax, in which the city would share, would be up to El Paso County Commissioners.

At present county commissioners have no power to levy sales taxes.

However the Council voted to notify El Paso County legislators to introduce legislation during the present legislative session to make a county sales tax legal.

At present the legislature is considering Gov. John Love's proposal for an additional one per cent state sales tax. Colorado presently has a two per cent state tax.

The Council also voted to ask State Attorney Duke Dunbar if it was legal for a county to levy a sales tax, even with authorization from the state legislature.

Councilman Betty Krouse, during the regular Council session this morning, asked City Attorney Frederick Henry if it was legal to ask the legislature to act before an opinion from Dunbar?

Several councilmen replied that action was needed before the legislative session closes, and Henry told Mrs. Krouse: "If it's illegal we've had it. if the time limit is passed, we've had it."

A two per cent city sales tax was passed by the Council last fall.

However initiative petitions, signed by thousands of registered city voters, forced the Council either to scrap the sales tax or set an election date for the people to vote on the question.

They decided to scrap the sales tax Dec. 10, and at the same time urged consideration of metropolitan government for El Paso County or a county-wide sales tax.

A prepared statement stating the Council's position Dec. 10 said:

"It may be legally possible for the state legislature to adopt legislation which would ease this problem, either by extension of the city limits or by permissive authority for the county to impose a sales tax."

Colorado Springs businessmen said a city sales tax would discriminate against them in favor of shopping areas in El Paso County.

The Colorado Springs Charter Association and other civic groups had urged that the City Council study new ways of revenue raising, including the pos-

LBJ Asks $1.66 Billion For Education Program

By G. K. HODENFIELD

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson sent Congress a record $1.66-billion tots-through-teens education program today, with an open invitation to private and parochial schools to take part.

The proposed program, with heavy emphasis on the children of low-income families, is the heaviest presidential artillery yet in what Johnson calls his war against poverty.

The provisions for non-public schools to share in the benefits seem certain to trigger a bitter fight on Capitol Hill.

Even before the details were laid before Congress, it was learned, the group known as "Protestants and Other Americans United for Separation of Church and State," made known its opposition.

However, it also was learned that the Roman Catholic hierarchy generally approves, and so does the National Education Association, which traditionally opposes the use of public funds for non-public schools.

An administration source was confident: "This is a good bill, and one we believe we can get through the Congress."

The comprehensive program would provide assistance to preschool youngsters in the slums, elementary and secondary school pupils in the nation's pockets of poverty, and college scholarships and other help for worthy and needy high school graduates.

Johnson said the one-year cost in excess of $1.5 billion "is a small price to pay for developing our nation's most priceless resource."

"Poverty has many roots," the President said, "but the tap root is ignorance."

The presidential program would provide for fiscal 1966:

—Public schools: $1 billion for elementary and secondary schools serving children from families with less than $2,000 annual income. There are an estimated 5 million such children and 85-90 per cent of the nation's school districts will qualify for assistance. Public and private schools would be urged to cooperate in shared-time programs and other joint use of new facilities.

—Higher education: $260 million to provide 140,000 scholarships, partial payment of interest on guaranteed private loans to college students — perhaps 2 per cent of the usual 6 per cent, assistance to small colleges,

Board Accepts New School Site, Designs

A new school site was accepted and two design concepts for building projects were approved at the January meeting of the school board of District 20, Air Academy.

The board voted unanimously to:

— Accept a tract of 12 acres offered to it for the site of a new grade school, as yet unnamed, by the Cimarron Development Co.

— Approve the design concept of the new school that will go on that site, which it is hoped will be finished about the time school begins for the next school year this September. Cost was estimated at about $145,000.

— Approve the concept of a proposed addition to the Woodmen Valley School which will in many ways be similar to the projected new grade school.

The newly-accepted site is just east off the access highway that runs from the South Academy Interchange to Burgess Road. The lot is off the country road that leads east from the access road.

When the first talk began of the new grade school, it was tentatively sited on the same 22-acre tract of land that the new junior high school building will go on — located east across Cottonwood Creek on Burgess Road.

At that time, it was not known if another site could be acquired, it was explained by Supt. Howard Dunning. Monday night, Dunning told the board that Cimarron had offered the new site, and the board accepted the offer.

The site will have a well, get electricity from Mountain View Electric (REA), and gas from Colorado Springs City Utilities.

The new school will accommodate students from kindergarten through the fifth grade.

It will have six classrooms for regular classes of about 30 students each, and a room used for kindergarten to house about

Justice of Peace System Ends In Colorado

More than 100 years of history in the story of Colorado's judicial system ended at 3:30 Monday afternoon when the last defendant appeared in Justice of the Peace James F. Quine's court.

William C. Eberly, 20, Ft. Carson, was charged with speeding and after he had been fined $14, the two justice of the peace courts in the courthouse, Judge H. C. McShane's and Judge Quine's closed their doors forever. Four others in El Paso County also closed, two in Fountain and two in Manitou.

These courts have a long and ancient history going back to England during the reign of Edward III in 1327 when Parliament passed an act providing that "in every county good men and lawful, which be no maintainers of evil or barrators in the county shall be assigned to keep the peace."

Barratry was the offense of bringing suits in the name of fictitious plaintiffs, stirring up quarrels or spreading false and malicious rumors.

At first these "good men and lawful" acted in a purely executive capacity and it was their task to suppress disturbances and apprehend offenders. They were constables on a large scale.

In 1344 however they were assigned "keepers of the peace" by a further act of Parliament" to hear and determine felonies and trespasses against the peace and to inflict punishment accordingly." Two years later the words "justices of the peace" first appeared.

Today in England the justice of the peace is appointed by the lord chancellor. In this country the appointment is made either by the governor or, as in Colorado by the vote of the people.

The courts appeared early in the history of the state in 1861 when a legislation of Congress entitled "an act to provide temporary government for the territory of Colorado" appeared.

Shortly afterwards the legislature took further action prescribing the powers, duties and procedure of the justices of the peace, much of it borrowed from the state of Illinois.

Since then there has been lit-

Springs Woman Held in Shooting

A woman was being held for investigation of assault with a deadly weapon after a neighbor of hers was shot in the foot Monday, police reported.

George Lowery, 62, 706 N. Corona St., was treated at Penrose hospital for a gunshot wound in his heel. Hospital authorities said the bullet had struck Lowery in the heel approximately an inch and a half up from the sole of his foot, traveling in an upward direction and missing any bones. He was released from the hospital Monday evening.

Lowery told police he had been at a church meeting Monday, and after the meeting he and Walter Newell, Jr., 421 E. St. Vrain St., left church and began walking home. The two men stopped off at a laundromat at St. Vrain Street and Wahsatch Street to wash some clothing. Lowery said Newell left, and after a short time came back and asked Lowery if he would come to his house to explain where they had been to Newell's wife.

Lowery said that at this point

Russia Adds New Marine Corps to Military Force

By ROBERT S. ALLEN and PAUL SCOTT

WASHINGTON —(Special) — Russia is adding a powerful new fighting force to its growing military machine.

A Marine Corps of more than 250,000 elite troops — considerably larger than that of the U.S. — is secretly being organized for future use outside of the Soviet Union.

This unannounced military development, underway since last summer, is believed to be tied closely to an ominous shift in the Kremlin's political-military strategy, according to the latest U.S. intelligence estimates.

In a confidential briefing of U.S., British, French and German experts at a CIA-sponsored intelligence conference in Geneva, Raymond Garthoff, high-ranking State Department adviser on political-military affairs, revealed this revolutionary change in Soviet policy, warning:

"The new Soviet strategy involves a shift from complete reliance on proxy wars in undeveloped countries toward reliance on the capability directly to commit Soviet troops.

"The creation of a Marine Corps during the summer of 1964 is a significant example of increased Soviet interest in providing the capability to intervene with Soviet troops in revolutionary situations in Africa, Asia and Latin America."

Garthoff told the U.S. and European experts that "the Soviets have not rejected, but rather increasingly will emphasize the political role of the advanced weapons they are developing."

He declared that the new role of these advanced nuclear-missile weapons in Soviet strat-

New Judges And Officials Are Sworn in

The swearing-in ceremony for new judges and officials for the new term was held today in District Court No. one.

The ceremony was conducted by the presiding judge for the forthcoming term, David W. Enoch. Judges William M. Calvert, G. Russell Miller and Hunter D. Hardeman were also present.

Judge Enoch addressed the audience which more than filled the courtroom, explaining the recent revision of the court system.

This day, he said, marked not only a new term for the District judges, but was also the start of a "modernized" judicial system, the first change made in the court system since the beginning of the state of Colorado.

"As of this morning," he

Pilot Dies in Avoiding Homes in Plane Crash

FREMONT, Calif. (AP) — Courage and luck were on the side of Navy Cmdr. Henry T. Stanley when his T33 jet trainer developed mechanical trouble Monday above a Fremont residential area. But fate was against him.

Cmdr. Stanley passed the courage test. He stayed with his plane past the safety margin — trying to avoid hitting homes. And he died.

But luck placed the crashing jet in a vacant lot, directly in the heart of a bustling neighborhood crowded with hundreds of school children headed home.

The plane exploded, scattering debris. Lou Ann Endicott, 7, was so close she was spattered with mud.

"It took a hell of a lot of guts and a hell of a lot of luck," a Navy spokesman said.

Stanley, 39, had only seconds to make a decision when it was evident the plane would crash.

He ordered his copilot, Lt. Cmdr. Harford Field, 35, of Mobile, Ala., to bail out at 2,500 feet. Field saw Stanley aim the aircraft toward Mission Peak, a mountainside with no homes,

Wider Science Education Urged by Speaker at CC

"Unless there is a general understanding of science, there will be a scientific hierarchy in our country," said Dr. I. I. Rabi, University Professor of Columbia University, at Colorado College Monday night.

Dr. Rabi was speaking on "The Two Cultures: Can They Be Made One?" at the Colorado College Symposium.

Taped remarks by C. P. Snow, who in 1959 charged that there was a gulf between the scientific and literary cultures, preceded the speech. "In the scientific and artistic experience," said Snow, "the act of creation is identical, but the content of the creative process is probably considerably different." The realization of the difficulty of communication is the first step toward solving the problem, however, said Snow.

Dr. Rabi said that Snow also accused the "literary and humanistic culture of indifference, inaction, and insensitivity to moral issues involved in a developing society."

"We need important common elements in our national culture" he continued. There has been tremendous improvement in secondary science education, especially physics, under the leadership of such persons as J. R. Zacharias of M. I. T.

Education, however, has become ever more specialized. "The student's mind is supposed to absorb disparate bits of knowledge and fuse them into a whole person to meet reality," said Dr. Rabi. "To become well-rounded through specialists is difficult."

"Science must be moved to the center of the stage in education," said Dr. Rabi. The scope of study must be intelligently limited, however, so that one acquires not more details, but an understanding of the scientific method.

"We must develop values and goals to fit our times, our goals, and our expanding knowledge," said the speaker, and must concern ourselves with "the maintenance of world peace under the shadow of nuclear annihilation."

"What will interest the student of today?" asked Dr. Rabi. He suggested raising the quality of life in backward areas, lunar and planetary observation, linguistics and communication, electronics, organization of the brain, sub-particle physics, the abstractions of mathematics and philosophy, and the emo-

70 in Fountain Attend Town's Council Meeting

Tension fell with the gavel over some 70 citizens of Fountain Monday night as they jammed the municipal building for the regular meeting of the town's board of trustees.

The unusual amount of interest has been aroused by two separate happenings: First, the circulation of a petition to recall the mayor and council members; secondly, the board's firing of the entire police force in a special meeting Dec. 21.

General business and lengthy discussions of other issues did not dampen the crowd's fervor — in fact it only served to increase the tension.

In general business, the board voted to:

1. Table a motion to award vacation pay to the three discharged police officers.

2. Table a motion to award back clothing allowances to the same.

3. Table any action determining the use of fire trucks outside town limits.

4. Table action on an ordinance concerning raising vested fowl or livestock within town limits.

5. Approved payment of the bills.

The first two motions were

Burch Quits; Bliss Gets GOP Post

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Republican National Chairman Dean Burch today announced he will resign, effective April 1, and that Ray Bliss, Ohio GOP chairman, has consented to become national chairman.

The announcement was made at a joint news conference in Phoenix attended by former Sen. Barry Goldwater, the party's 1964 presidential nominee; Burch; Bliss, and William E. Miller, GOP vice presidential nominee.

Burch said he will submit his resignation at a meeting of the Republican National Committee in Chicago Jan. 22-23 and added that unity cannot be achieved by forcing a vote over his chairmanship in Chicago.

"Even if I won under those circumstances, neither I nor those who opposed my chairmanship would be comfortable and my effectiveness would be impaired," Burch said.

Some Republicans have been clamoring for Burch's resignation since the beating the party took in the general election.

Solon Warns Against Sales Tax Increase

One of El Paso County's freshmen legislators wants to go slow on the sales tax increase proposed Friday to the 45th General Assembly.

Gov. John Love in his message to the assembly Friday asked for a one-cent sales tax increase as well as an increase in the cigarette tax.

The legislator was George F. Jackson, Republican member of the House of Representatives. He pointed out that he is not in any way at odds with the governor, but just has a different view of the problem.

Love outlined some of the educational problems facing the state and asked that the extra money be raised to help meet the problems.

Jackson said "I am not in favor of the one-cent sales tax

Hearing in ITU Vote Procedure Is Postponed

A hearing in Denver U. S. District Court has been postponed to Jan. 21 on a show-cause order against the incumbent Progressive Party of the International Typographical Union and a Colorado Springs printing firm.

Judge William E. Doyle ordered officials of the ITU and the Gowdy-Printcraft Press, Inc., of Colorado Springs to appear and show cause why they should not be required to produce records dealing with a union election last May 21.

After this election, a union newspaper admitted that election ". . . irregularities occurred in the reports of 57 locals with a total of 5,612 votes."

New County-Wide Sales Tax Is Being Sought

City councilmen voted this morning to ask for a two per cent county-wide sales tax.

Final approval of such a tax, in which the city would share, would be up to El Paso County Commissioners.

At present county commissioners have no power to levy sales taxes.

However the Council voted to notify El Paso County legislators to introduce legislation during the present legislative session to make a county sales tax legal.

At present the legislature is considering Gov. John Love's proposal for an additional one per cent state sales tax. Colorado presently has a two per cent state tax.

The Council also voted to ask State Attorney Duke Dunbar if it was legal for a county to levy a sales tax, even with authorization from the state legislature.

Councilman Betty Krouse, during the regular Council session this morning, asked City Attorney Frederick Henry if it was legal to ask the legislature to act before an opinion from Dunbar?

Several councilmen replied that action was needed before the legislative session closes, and Henry told Mrs. Krouse: "If it's illegal we've had it, if the time limit is passed, we've had it."

A two per cent city sales tax was passed by the Council last fall.

However initiative petitions, signed by thousands of registered city voters, forced the Council either to scrap the sales tax or set an election date for the people to vote on the question.

They decided to scrap the sales tax Dec. 10, and at the same time urged consideration of metropolitan government for El Paso County or a county-wide sales tax.

A prepared statement stating the Council's position Dec. 10 said:

"It may be legally possible for the state legislature to adopt legislation which would ease this problem, either by extension of the city limits or by permissive authority for the county to impose a sales tax."

Colorado Springs businessmen said a city sales tax would discriminate against them in favor of shopping areas in El Paso County.

The Colorado Springs Charter Association and other civic groups had urged that the City Council study new ways of revenue raising, including the pos-

LBJ Asks $1.66 Billion For Education Program

By G. K. HODENFIELD

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson sent Congress a record $1.66-billion tots-through-teens education program today, with an open invitation to private and parochial schools to take part.

The proposed program, with heavy emphasis on the children of low-income families, is the heaviest presidential artillery yet in what Johnson calls his war against poverty.

The provisions for non-public schools to share in the benefits seem certain to trigger a bitter fight on Capitol Hill.

Even before the details were laid before Congress, it was learned, the group known as "Protestants and Other Americans United for Separation of Church and State," made known its opposition.

However, it also was learned that the Roman Catholic hierarchy generally approves, and so does the National Education Association, which traditionally opposes the use of public funds for non-public schools.

An administration source was confident: "This is a good bill, and one we believe we can get through the Congress."

The comprehensive program would provide assistance to pre-school youngsters in the slums, elementary and secondary school pupils in the nation's pockets of poverty, and college scholarships and other help for worthy and needy high school graduates.

Johnson said the one-year cost in excess of $1.5 billion "is a small price to pay for developing our nation's most priceless resource."

"Poverty has many roots," the President said, "but the tap root is ignorance."

The presidential program would provide for fiscal 1966:

—Public schools: $1 billion for elementary and secondary schools serving children from families with less than $2,000 annual income. There are an estimated 5 million such children and 85-90 per cent of the nation's school districts will qualify for assistance. Public and private schools would be urged to cooperate in shared-time programs and other joint use of new facilities.

—Higher education: $260 million to provide 140,000 scholarships, partial payment of interest on guaranteed private loans to college students — perhaps 2 per cent of the usual 6 per cent, assistance to small colleges,

Board Accepts New School Site, Designs

A new school site was accepted and two design concepts for building projects were approved at the January meeting of the school board of District 20, Air Academy.

The board voted unanimously to:

— Accept a tract of 12 acres offered to it for the site of a new grade school, as yet unnamed, by the Cimarron Development Co.

— Approve the design concept of the new school that will go on that site, which it is hoped will be finished about the time school begins for the next school year this September. Cost was estimated at about $145,000.

— Approve the concept of a proposed addition to the Woodmen Valley School which will in many ways be similar to the projected new grade school.

The newly-accepted site is just east off the access highway that runs from the South Academy Interchange to Burgess Road. The lot is off the country road that leads east from the access road.

When the first talk began of the new grade school, it was tentatively sited on the same 22-acre tract of land that the new junior high school building will go on — located east across Cottonwood Creek on Burgess Road.

At that time, it was not known if another site could be acquired, it was explained by Supt. Howard Dunning. Monday night, Dunning told the board that Cimarron had offered the new site, and the board accepted the offer.

The site will have a well, get electricity from Mountain View Electric (REA), and gas from Colorado Springs City Utilities.

The new school will accommodate students from kindergarten through the fifth grade.

It will have six classrooms for regular classes of about 30 students each, and a room used for kindergarten to house about

Justice of Peace System Ends In Colorado

More than 100 years of history in the story of Colorado's judicial system ended at 3:30 Monday afternoon when the last defendant appeared in Justice of the Peace James F. Quine's court.

William C. Eberly, 20, Ft. Carson, was charged with speeding and after he had been fined $14, the two justice of the peace courts in the courthouse, Judge H. C. McShane's and Judge Quine's closed their doors forever. Four others in El Paso County also closed, two in Fountain and two in Manitou.

These courts have a long and ancient history going back to England during the reign of Edward III in 1327 when Parliament passed an act providing that "in every county good men and lawful, which be no maintainers of evil or barrators in the county shall be assigned to keep the peace."

Barratry was the offense of bringing suits in the name of fictitious plaintiffs, stirring up quarrels or spreading false and malicious rumors.

At first these "good men and lawful" acted in a purely executive capacity and it was their task to suppress disturbances and apprehend offenders. They were constables on a large scale.

In 1344 however they were assigned "keepers of the peace" by a further act of Parliament" to hear and determine felonies and trespasses against the peace and to inflict punishment accordingly." Two years later the words "justices of the peace" first appeared.

Today in England the justice of the peace is appointed by the lord chancellor. In this country the appointment is made either by the governor or, as in Colorado by the vote of the people.

The courts appeared early in the history of the state in 1861 when a legislation of Congress entitled "an act to provide temporary government for the territory of Colorado" appeared.

Shortly afterwards the legislature took further action prescribing the powers, duties and procedure of the justices of the peace, much of it borrowed from the state of Illinois.

Since then there has been lit-

Springs Woman Held in Shooting

A woman was being held for investigation of assault with a deadly weapon after a neighbor of hers was shot in the foot Monday, police reported.

George Lowery, 62, 706 N. Corona St., was treated at Penrose hospital for a gunshot wound in his heel. Hospital authorities said the bullet had struck Lowery in the heel approximately an inch and a half up from the sole of his foot, traveling in an upward direction and missing any bones. He was released from the hospital Monday evening.

Lowery told police he had been at a church meeting Monday, and after the meeting he and Walter Newell, Jr., 421 E. St. Vrain St., left church and began walking home. The two men stopped off at a laundromat at St. Vrain Street and Wahsatch Street to wash some clothing. Lowery said Newell left, and after a short time came back and asked Lowery if he would come to his house to explain where they had been to Newell's wife.

Lowery said that at this point

By ROBERT S. ALLEN and PAUL SCOTT

WASHINGTON —(Special) — Russia is adding a powerful new fighting force to its growing military machine.

A Marine Corps of more than 250,000 elite troops — considerably larger than that of the U.S. — is secretly being organized for future use outside of the Soviet Union.

This unannounced military development, underway since last summer, is believed to be tied closely to an ominous shift in the Kremlin's political-military strategy, according to the latest U.S. intelligence estimates.

In a confidential briefing of U.S., British, French and German experts at a CIA-sponsored intelligence conference in Geneva, Raymond Garthoff, high-ranking State Department adviser on political-military affairs, revealed this revolutionary change in Soviet policy, warning:

"The new Soviet strategy involves a shift from complete reliance on proxy wars in undeveloped countries toward reliance on the capability directly to commit Soviet troops.

"The creation of a Marine Corps during the summer of 1964 is a significant example of increased Soviet interest in providing the capability to intervene with Soviet troops in revolutionary situations in Africa, Asia and Latin America."

Garthoff told the U.S. and European experts that "the Soviets have not rejected, but rather increasingly will emphasize the political role of the advanced weapons they are developing."

He declared that the new role of these advanced nuclear-missile weapons in Soviet strat-

Rocketing Birth Rate Worries Health Scientists

By Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (NEA) — Barring general nuclear war, invasion by microbes from outer space, a new ice age or some world calamity, there will be twice as many human beings striving for the good life on this planet in A.D. 2000 as there are today.

At the present growth rate of 2 per cent a year, population could rocket to 50 billion by A.D. 3000, which would be just about the maximum that earth could theoretically sustain.

How to reduce this rate of growth and then to stabilize it has become a top priority task for public health scientists in all countries, for the combination of high birth rates and falling death rates is not only impeding the progress of developing countries but putting strains on the health and welfare facilities of advanced nations.

About 70 concerned scholars from around the world met some months ago at the Graduate School of Public Health of the University of Pittsburgh to discuss the population problem in all its aspects. The 24 scientific papers presented at the meeting have just been released.

As could be expected, many dealth with the biological and physiological factors in conception and birth, and with birth control techniques ranging from sterilzation to pills.

Apparently the most popular and most effective methods of birth limitation are the newly developed pills and an intrauterine device using a coil or spiral of plastic.

Dr. A. S. Parkes, physiologist at the University of Cambridge, England, praised the pill and deplored the taboos and prudery which hampered research until mankind's eleventh hour.

"Until the advent of the Pincus pill," he said, "methods of controlling human fertility were archaic in principle and a disgrace to science."

He noted one possible drawback to the "fantastically effective" pill: It might increase a woman's fertility and extend childbearing ability beyond age 50.

Dr. John Rock controversial Catholic gynecologist, formerly of Harvard, disputed this. Extensive clinical trials had turned up no evidence of such a possibility, he said. Others at the symposium offered evidence that side effects of the pills are more annoying than dangerous.

As for the "rhythm method," currently the only method acceptable to the Roman Catholic Church, Dr. Parkes termed it "a sound principle which is more useful in securing pregnancy than preventing it."

Another English physician, Dr. Thomas McKeown, professor of social medicine at the University of Birmingham, maintained that it is not improved techniques which will lower the birth rate but recognition of the need for reduction in family size.

The problem must be solved, not in the laboratory, but in the native village . . . If illiterate women are to control their reproduction by counting beads, they must first learn to count."

The experts were in general agreement that the birth rate will not be significantly lowered until there is a social climate which encourages the full-family ideal.

One means of achieving this ideal was suggested by Dr. Judith Blake Davis, associate professor of demography (population study) at the University of California School of Public Health.

She advised taking the wife and mother out of the home literally and figuratively, by fashioning a society which is not primarily family centered—a society in which woman are offered other meaningful goals beside the traditional one of motherhood.

One major suggestion coming from the conference was that governments will have to adopt an official public policy favoring small families. In turn, this policy will have to be made possible by scientists, approved by religious leaders and, in the end, accepted and practiced by individual people.

The scientists were agreed that the only possible solution in a civilized and democratic society is for the people themselves to decide to have small families.

But they also agreed that how to convince the people of the desirability and necessity of this is probably the most difficult and complex challenge human society has ever faced.

Panama Guard Rejects New Student Demand

By LUIS NOLI

PANAMA (AP) — Panama's National Guard Monday night rejected a demand by anti-American students, that Panamanian soldiers be removed from the Canal Zone boundary. The students also burned a homemade American flag.

The National Guard so far has prevented student demonstrators from entering the Canal Zone during observance of the first anniversary of the bloody anti-American rioting along the border.

Today is the last day of four days of observances commemorating the 21 Panamanians — mostly students — who died in last year's rioting. Most of the activity has been peaceful, but on Saturday guardsmen used tear gas to turn back students marching toward the U.S. zone.

Labor and student organizations said the final commemorative event would be a mass meeting tonight in Santa Ana Plaza near the Canal Zone.

Student leaders made anti-American speeches Monday from a terrace of the National Institute, Panama City's largest high school across the street from the Canal Zone.

They displayed a homemade paper American flag, set it afire and hurled it into the schoolyard. About 500 of the school's 2,000 students then marched to the Presidential Palace and demanded that President Marco A. Robles withdraw National Guardsmen posted at each of the 15 intersections leading into the U.S. area.

A spokesman for the Guard said the soldiers would remain.

A quiet day of remembrance Saturday in the Canal Zone was the only American observance in honor of the four U.S. soldiers killed in last year's rioting.

Robles otld 29 visiting U.S. editors Monday that the rioting last year resulted from a lack of understanding and attention to Panamanian demands regarding the 1903 canal treaty. He said it was not started by Communists but that they took advantage of the situation.

Robles told the Americans that Panama would like to have the new sea-level Isthmian canal built in this country. He added that if a new canal is built in Panama, Panama will seek compensation for the effect that closing the existing canal will have on Panama's economy, principally on the terminal cities.

Robles said in response to a question that a new treaty for the present canal and a treaty for a sea-level waterway are separate issues.

The president sid he had faith in Preseident Johnson's recent expression of willingness to negotiate a new treaty recognizing Panamanian sovereignty over the Canal Zone.

Young Man in Hurry Honored By U.S. Jaycees

By DAVE SMITH

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Whatever it is you always have wanted to do on that long vacation, if Charles Jackson Wheeler hasn't already done it, forget it. It probably wouldn't be fun anyway.

That's the impression you get as you listen to this student-adventurer-author tick off a string of exploits that have made him, at the venerable age of 21, a world traveler who has seen and done just about everything.

The United States Junior Chamber of Commerce Monday named him one of the ten outstanding young men of 1964.

Wheeler, a senior majoring in anthropology at the University of California at Los Angeles, is now detailing his adventures in an autobiography called "Young Man in a Hurry."

That he is. Of all young men in a hurry, Wheeler is one of the hurriest.

The hurry began, Wheeler says, when he joined the Boy Scouts in grade school. "I devoted most of my time then to working straight through for the rank of Eagle Scout. I made it at 12 — the youngest Eagle in Boy Scout history."

Things were pretty dead for two years, Wheeler goes on, until he went to Switzerland with his father, Jackson Wheeler, former Los Angeles television performer.

"I'd been reading all the adventure books of Richard Halliburton, and I told dad I wanted to climb the Matterhorn. After he recovered from that he arranged it for me. They said I was the youngest person ever to climb the Matterhorn, too," he adds.

After two more slow years, someone suggested that Wheeler should try living among the head-hunting Jivaro Indians of Ecuador. Like a true Dan Dauntless, Wheeler said okay. He spent two weeks with one of the clans.

Wheeler entered UCLA that fall, at 16, and immediately decided to swim the Hellespont. "I wanted to do it before I turned 17," he explains.

So after class on Friday, Nov. 4, 1960, Wheeler flew to New York, Frankfurt, Germany, and thence to Istanbul, Turkey, and a brisk dip across the Hellespont, where it is about two miles wide, on Nov. 5. Wheeler then flew back to Los Angeles in time for a 8 a.m. class on Monday. He observed his 17th birthday quietly Nov. 9.

Next year, on a summer vacation trip to Viet Nam, Wheeler says he shot a cloudy leopard that was terrifying one village, a rogue elephant that was terrorizing another village and a tiger known to Vietnamese natives as the "man-killer of Dalat."

In 1963 came a second trip to Viet Nam, where he collected material for the travel films and lectures with which he finances his exploits.

Wheeler is married and the father of a 2-month-old son.

During the period of Mexico's greatest development, from 1940 to 1960, the population increased nearly 80 per cent, from 1.98 million to 35 million.

Prohibition Brings More Quirks to Mississippi

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mississippi is the last state in the Union to remain legally dry. But it's not too hard to get liquor in the Magnolia State, and this co-existence of alcohol and prohibition has produced some peculiar quirks.

By JAMES SAGGUS

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Sometimes you take the first gravel road to the left and drive to the frame building with a white picket fence. Sometimes you pick up your telephone and make a call. Sometimes you head for a bar.

The way a chap with a thirst wets his whistle in Mississippi depends on where he lives or who happens to be sheriff at the moment.

The situation in the nation's last legally dry state is strange. Some of the 82 counties are bone dry and some are openly wet. Most are somewhere between.

Along the tourist-conscious Gulf Coast resort strip, bars flourish and flashing signs beckon strangers into the many oases. Along the Mississippi River, there are areas where liquor is sold openly in package stores. In most cities, it's readily available by a phone call or quick trip to a little grocery with a big back room.

Rural areas are the real dry spots: whisky may be 30 minutes away even when you know just where to go and whom to meet.

It all dates back to 1909, when the anti-saloon move succeeded in winning passage of a legislative bill outlawing liquor. Gov James K. Vardaman predicted prohibition would end the liquor problem..

Vardaman did a better selling job on the lawmakers than on the liquor dealers. Whisky sales have continued while repeated efforts at legalization have failed.

Since the end of national prohibition, the liquor trade has mounted steadily, but a strange combination of preachers and bootleggers has fought successfully to retain the state prohibition law.

During recent legislative sessions, the preachers invaded the legislative chambers to sit with wavering lawmakers by day and the bootleggers wined them at night.

The motives of the two groups differ, of course. The preachers oppose liquor on moral grounds and the bootleggers on grounds legalization could threaten their businesses if state-owned stores are approved.

Mississippi-style prohibition is peculiar. It is the state which bans liquor, but the state itself has no agency empowered to control liquor, and enforcement is left to the counties. Counties which want liquor simply elect a wet sheriff.

Despite all the legal confusion, the customers happily raise their glasses, giving little thought to the way some things might look to an outsider.

And there have been some peculiar occurrences, such as highway patrolmen stationed at the entrance to a rural bootlegger's place on a big football weekend to keep the cars from getting tangled, law enforcement officers giving confiscated liquor for Christmas presents, and the state borrowing out-of-date Louisiana tax stamps to use for indicating the Mississippi tax was paid.

Since liquor flows so freely in many areas, the state decided to tax it during World War II and it now collects what Mississippians aptly call a black market tax on "tangible property the sale of which is prohibited by law."

During the last fiscal year, there were 361,108 cases of whisky and 124,054 casese of wine taxed. The state collected $3 million. Nobody has any idea how much is brought in from neighboring states untaxed or how much "bottled in barn" moonshine is consumed along with the "bottled in bond" variety.

The tax has given liquor a quasi-legal standing in the minds of many, but others feel the situation is more hypocritical than ever. Efforts to legalize liquor on a local option basis have increased and the 1964 legislative session passed a bill calling for a referendum..

The 1962 legislature passed a bill legalizing sparkling wines but then-Gov. Ross Barnett vetoed it. In his veto message he quoted Bible passages and in his announcement he said, "I cannot move my hand affirmatively and thus make it easier for this cup of devil's brew to be placed before the eyes of our boys and girls and men and women."

Wets, however, argue that liquor in a dry state contaminates law enforcement and lowers respect for the law. They argue that people will drink anyway and liquor traffic should be controlled.

Until things change, Mississippians probably will continue to poke fun at themselves — if a bit bitterly at times — with such barbs as: "I'll vote dry as long as I can stagger to the polls," and "The drys have their prohibition and the wets have their whisky."

Rocketing Birth Rate Worries Health Scientists

By Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (NEA) — Barring general nuclear war, invasion by microbes from outer space, a new ice age or some world calamity, there will be twice as many human beings striving for the good life on this planet in A.D. 2000 as there are today.

At the present growth rate of 2 per cent a year, population could rocket to 50 billion by A.D. 3000, which would be just about the maximum that earth could theoretically sustain.

How to reduce this rate of growth and then to stabilize it has become a top priority task for public health scientists in all countries, for the combination of high birth rates and falling death rates is not only impeding the progress of developing countries but putting strains on the health and welfare facilities of advanced nations.

About 70 concerned scholars from around the world met some months ago at the Graduate School of Public Health of the University of Pittsburgh to discuss the population problem in all its aspects. The 24 scientific papers presented at the meeting have just been released.

As could be expected, many dealth with the biological and physiological factors in conception and birth, and with birth control techniques ranging from sterilzation to pills.

Apparently the most popular and most effective methods of birth limitation are the newly developed pills and an intrauterine device using a coil or spiral of plastic.

Dr. A. S. Parkes, physiologist at the University of Cambridge, England, praised the pill and deplored the taboos and prudery which hampered research until mankind's eleventh hour.

"Until the advent of the Pincus pill," he said, "methods of controlling human fertility were archaic in principle and a disgrace to science."

He noted one possible drawback to the "fantastically effective" pill: It might increase a woman's fertility and extend childbearing ability beyond age 50.

Dr. John Rock controversial Catholic gynecologist, formerly of Harvard, disputed this. Extensive clinical trials had turned up no evidence of such a possibility, he said. Others at the symposium offered evidence that side effects of the pills are more annoying than dangerous.

As for the "rhythm method," currently the only method acceptable to the Roman Catholic Church, Dr. Parkes termed it "a sound principle which is more useful in securing pregnancy than preventing it."

Another English physician, Dr. Thomas McKeown, professor of social medicine at the University of Birmingham, maintained that it is not improved techniques which will lower the birth rate but recognition of the need for reduction in family size.

The problem must be solved, not in the laboratory, but in the native village . . . If illiterate women are to control their reproduction by counting beads, they must first learn to count."

The experts were in general agreement that the birth rate will not be significantly lowered until there is a social climate which encourages the full-family ideal.

One means of achieving this ideal was suggested by Dr. Judith Blake Davis, associate professor of demography (population study) at the University of California School of Public Health.

She advised taking the wife and mother out of the home literally and figuratively, by fashioning a society which is not primarily family centered—a society in which woman are offered other meaningful goals beside the traditional one of motherhood.

One major suggestion coming from the conference was that governments will have to adopt an official public policy favoring small families. In turn, this policy will have to be made possible by scientists, approved by religious leaders and, in the end, accepted and practiced by individual people.

The scientists were agreed that the only possible solution in a civilized and democratic society is for the people themselves to decide to have small families.

But they also agreed that how to convince the people of the desirability and necessity of this is probably the most difficult and complex challenge human society has ever faced.

Eskimo Apparel Marks Wedding

BARROW, Alaska (AP) — The pink, flowered garment which bride Barbara McLean wore was a snowshirt with a wolverine ruff. On her feet were caribou mukluks.

Bridegroom Glen Keck was dressed in a wolf parka and also wore fur mukluks.

Mr. and Mrs. Ken Garrison, who attended the couple in the recent ceremony, were also dressed in Eskimo apparel to keep out the 45-degree-below-zero cold.

The Kecks have set up housekeeping in Anchorage where he is a technician with the Bureau of Indian Affairs, and she is a teacher employed by the bureau.

Panama Guard Rejects New Student Demand

By LUIS NOLI

PANAMA (AP) — Panama's National Guard Monday night rejected a demand by anti-American students, that Panamanian soldiers be removed from the Canal Zone boundary. The students also burned a homemade American flag.

The National Guard so far has prevented student demonstrators from entering the Canal Zone during observance of the first anniversary of the bloody anti-American rioting along the border.

Today is the last day of four days of observances commemorating the 21 Panamanians — mostly students — who died in last year's rioting. Most of the activity has been peaceful, but on Saturday guardsmen used tear gas to turn back students marching toward the U.S. zone.

Labor and student organizations said the final commemorative event would be a mass meeting tonight in Santa Ana Plaza near the Canal Zone.

Student leaders made anti-American speeches Monday from a terrace of the National Institute, Panama City's largest high school across the street from the Canal Zone.

They displayed a homemade paper American flag, set it afire and hurled it into the schoolyard. About 500 of the school's 2,000 students then marched to the Presidential Palace and demanded that President Marco A. Robles withdraw National Guardsmen posted at each of the 15 intersections leading into the U.S. area.

A spokesman for the Guard said the soldiers would remain.

A quiet day of remembrance Saturday in the Canal Zone was the only American observance in honor of the four U.S. soldiers killed in last year's rioting.

Robles otld 29 visiting U.S. editors Monday that the rioting last year resulted from a lack of understanding and attention to Panamanian demands regarding the 1903 canal treaty. He said it was not started by Communists but that they took advantage of the situation.

Robles told the Americans that Panama would like to have the new sea-level Isthmian canal built in this country. He added that if a new canal is built in Panama, Panama will seek compensation for the effect that closing the existing canal will have on Panama's economy, principally on the terminal cities.

Robles said in response to a question that a new treaty for the present canal and a treaty for a sea-level waterway are separate issues.

The president sid he had faith in Preseident Johnson's recent expression of willingness to negotiate a new treaty recognizing Panamanian sovereignty over the Canal Zone.

Young Man in Hurry Honored By U.S. Jaycees

By DAVE SMITH

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Whatever it is you always have wanted to do on that long vacation, if Charles Jackson Wheeler hasn't already done it, forget it. It probably wouldn't be fun anyway.

That's the impression you get as you listen to this student-adventurer-author tick off a string of exploits that have made him, at the venerable age of 21, a world traveler who has seen and done just about everything.

The United States Junior Chamber of Commerce Monday named him one of the ten outstanding young men of 1964.

Wheeler, a senior majoring in anthropology at the University of California at Los Angeles, is now detailing his adventures in an autobiography called "Young Man in a Hurry."

That he is. Of all young men in a hurry, Wheeler is one of the hurriest.

The hurry began, Wheeler says, when he joined the Boy Scouts in grade school. "I devoted most of my time then to working straight through for the rank of Eagle Scout. I made it at 12 — the youngest Eagle in Boy Scout history."

Things were pretty dead for two years, Wheeler goes on, until he went to Switzerland with his father, Jackson Wheeler, former Los Angeles television performer.

"I'd been reading all the adventure books of Richard Halliburton, and I told dad I wanted to climb the Matterhorn. After he recovered from that he arranged it for me. They said I was the youngest person ever to climb the Matterhorn, too," he adds.

After two more slow years, someone suggested that Wheeler should try living among the head-hunting Jivaro Indians of Ecuador. Like a true Dan Dauntless, Wheeler said okay. He spent two weeks with one of the clans.

Wheeler entered UCLA that fall, at 16, and immediately decided to swim the Hellespont. "I wanted to do it before I turned 17," he explains.

So after class on Friday, Nov. 4, 1960, Wheeler flew to New York, Frankfurt, Germany, and thence to Istanbul, Turkey, and a brisk dip across the Hellespont, where it is about two miles wide, on Nov. 5. Wheeler then flew back to Los Angeles in time for a 8 a.m. class on Monday. He observed his 17th birthday quietly Nov. 9.

Next year, on a summer vacation trip to Viet Nam, Wheeler says he shot a cloudy leopard that was terrifying one village, a rogue elephant that was terrorizing another village and a tiger known to Vietnamese natives as the "man-killer of Dalat."

In 1963 came a second trip to Viet Nam, where he collected material for the travel films and lectures with which he finances his exploits.

Wheeler is married and the father of a 2-month-old son.

During the period of Mexico's greatest development, from 1940 to 1960, the population increased nearly 80 per cent, from 1.98 million to 35 million.

Prohibition Brings More Quirks to Mississippi

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mississippi is the last state in the Union to remain legally dry. But it's not too hard to get liquor in the Magnolia State, and this co-existence of alcohol and prohibition has produced some peculiar quirks.

By JAMES SAGGUS

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Sometimes you take the first gravel road to the left and drive to the frame building with a white picket fence. Sometimes you pick up your telephone and make a call. Sometimes you head for a bar.

The way a chap with a thirst wets his whistle in Mississippi depends on where he lives or who happens to be sheriff at the moment.

The situation in the nation's last legally dry state is strange. Some of the 82 counties are bone dry and some are openly wet. Most are somewhere between.

Along the tourist-conscious Gulf Coast resort strip, bars flourish and flashing signs beckon on strangers into the many oases. Along the Mississippi River, there are areas where liquor is sold openly in package stores. In most cities, it's readily available by a phone call or quick trip to a little grocery with a big back room.

Rural areas are the real dry spots: whisky may be 30 minutes away even when you know just where to go and whom to meet.

It all dates back to 1909, when the anti-saloon move succeeded in winning passage of a legislative bill outlawing liquor. Gov James K. Vardaman predicted prohibition would end the liquor problem..

Vardaman did a better selling job on the lawmakers than on the liquor dealers. Whisky sales have continued while repeated efforts at legalization have failed.

Since the end of national prohibition, the liquor trade has mounted steadily, but a strange combination of preachers and bootleggers has fought successfully to retain the state prohibition law.

During recent legislative sessions, the preachers invaded the legislative chambers to sit with wavering lawmakers by day and the bootleggers wined them at night.

The motives of the two groups differ, of course. The preachers oppose liquor on moral grounds and the bootleggers on grounds legalization could threaten their businesses if state-owned stores are approved.

Mississippi-style prohibition is peculiar. It is the state which bans liquor, but the state itself has no agency empowered to control liquor, and enforcement is left to the counties. Counties which want liquor simply elect a wet sheriff.

Despite all the legal confusion, the customers happily raise their glasses, giving little thought to the way some things might look to an outsider.

And there have been some peculiar occurrences, such as highway patrolmen stationed at the entrance to a rural bootlegger's place on a big football weekend to keep the cars from getting tangled, law enforcement officers giving confiscated liquor for Christmas presents, and the state borrowing out-of-date Louisiana tax stamps to use for indicating the Mississippi tax was paid.

Since liquor flows so freely in many areas, the state decided to tax it during World War II and it now collects what Mississippians aptly call a black market tax on "tangible property the sale of which is prohibited by law."

During the last fiscal year, there were 361,108 cases of whisky and 124,054 casese of wine taxed. The state collected $3 million. Nobody has any idea how much is brought in from neighboring states untaxed or how much "bottled in barn" moonshine is consumed along with the "bottled in bond" variety.

The tax has given liquor a quasi-legal standing in the minds of many, but others feel the situation is more hypocritical than ever. Efforts to legalize liquor on a local option basis have increased and the 1964 legislative session passed a bill calling for a referendum..

The 1962 legislature passed a bill legalizing sparkling wines but then-Gov. Ross Barnett vetoed it. In his veto message he quoted Bible passages and in his announcement he said, "I cannot move my hand affirmatively and thus make it easier for this cup of devil's brew to be placed before the eyes of our boys and girls and men and women."

Wets, however, argue that liquor in a dry state contaminates law enforcement and lowers respect for the law. They argue that people will drink anyway and liquor traffic should be controlled.

Until things change, Mississippians probably will continue to poke fun at themselves — if a bit bitterly at times — with such barbs as: "I'll vote dry as long as I can stagger to the polls," and "The drys have their prohibition and the wets have their whisky."

MY ANSWER

by Billy Graham

© 1964 by Chicago Tribune N.Y. News Syndicate, Inc.

QUESTION: When a believer dies are his sins that have been confessed going to be brought out into the open? I'm so upset. I'm scared to die and have people know the many sins I have committed.

—N. S.

ANSWR: The wonderful thing about God's forgiveness is that it is final, unequivocal and complete. We forgive people, but the memory of the deed lingers on. Not so with God. The Bible says: "As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgeressions from us." (Psa. 103:12) The distance from the east to the west is immeasurable. It is as far as we can imagine. In another passage we are told He cast our sins in the depths of the sea, and remembers them against us no more.

God does not forgive as we forgive. We often forgive, but He remembers them against us no more.

So, if you have received Christ· your sins are forgiven, and according to the Scriptures, you need have no concern for them. He has forgiven you, and you need not fear the future. Just make sure that you have forgiven yourself. Self-condemnation, after one has been forgiven by God, can be devastating.

13-Year-Old Invited To Inauguration

By DORIS KLEIN

LAKEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Melissa Lee Baron put in her bid early for an invitation to President Johnson's inauguration. So she isn't surprised she's going.

Her parents are.

Apparently the President couldn't resist the faith of the 13-year-old, blue-eyed blonde who wrote to him even before he was elected, saying: "I know you'll try your hardest."

Melissa's mother, Mrs. Charles Baron, says: "It's fantastic. Her father and I can't believe we're going to the inauguration—and all because of a child!"

Melissa, nicknamed Missy, said that last September she wrote to the President a letter that went something like this:

"Dear President Johnson:

"I have been watching the convention on TV and thought it quite interesting. I know the election is not over, but I'm placing my faith in you that you'll come through.

"To get to the point, I was wondering if I could possibly have an invitation to the inaugural of you being president.

"I know it's something very hard to comply with, but I would rather think positive about it, not negative, and I think I would get someplace.

"I know you'll try your hardest.

"Sincerely yours,
"Missy Baron."

Missy wrote without telling her mother or father, proprietor of a men's clothing store.

On Oct. 12 her mother pulled a letter from the White House from their mailbox.

"The President has received your friendly letter and appreciated your interest in writing," it began. But, wrote presidential assistant Ivan Sinclair, it was a bit early since an inaugural chairman would not be appointed until after the election.

After the election, Missy, unsurprised by its outcome, wrote another letter addressed to "Inaugural Chairman."

On Nov. 27 she received a reply from Dale Miller, inaugural chairman, saying her letter would be referred to the appropriate committee.

On Dec. 3, another letter arrived from Miller:

"Dear Missy:

"This is to acknowledge receipt of your very good letter. I am happy to comply with your request and am placing your name on the list to receive the official inaugural invitation. With best wishes—"

Missy found the invitation in the mailbox when she returned home from junior high school Dec. 8.

Missy and her parents also received invitations to the inaugural concert, receptions, buffet dinners and the inaugural ball.

One hurdle remains for Missy — choosing between her yellow chiffon and orange silk dresses to wear to the ball. She is packing both.

Vic Damone Is Not In Court Contempt

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — A judge says singer Vic Damone was "hasty, impulsive and hot-headed" in removing his son from New York, but was not in contempt of court.

Damone, 35, and his ex-wife, actress Pier Angeli, 32, are engaged in a court battle over Damone's suit to modify custody of their son, Perry, 9.

In turning down Miss Angeli's request for a contempt citation, Superior Court Judge Laurence Rittenband said that Miss Angeli earlier had deprived Damone of his visitation rights by removing the boy from the United States.

Damone brought the boy to California from New York last Sept. 30 while Miss Angeli was at her home in Rome. Miss Angeli contended that constituted contempt of a 1960 court order granting her custody and Damone the right to weekend visiting rights with the boy.

MY ANSWER

by Billy Graham

N.Y. News Syndicate, Inc.

QUESTION: When a believer dies are his sins that have been confessed going to be brought out into the open? I'm so upset. I'm scared to die and have people know the many sins I have committed.
—N. S.

ANSWR: The wonderful thing about God's forgiveness is that it is final, unequivocal and complete. We forgive people, but the memory of the deed lingers on. Not so with God. The Bible says: "As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgeressions from us." (Psa. 103:12) The distance from the east to the west is immeasurable. It is as far as we can imagine. In another passage we are told He cast our sins in the depths of the sea, and remembers them against us no more.

God does not forgive as we forgive. We often forgive, but He remembers them against us no more.

So, if you have received Christ· your sins are forgiven, and according to the Scriptures, you need have no concern for them. He has forgiven you, and you need not fear the future. Just make sure that you have forgiven yourself. Self-condemnation, after one has been forgiven by God, can be devastating.

13-Year-Old Invited To Inauguration

By DORIS KLEIN

LAKEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Melissa Lee Baron put in her bid early for an invitation to President Johnson's inauguration. So she isn't surprised she's going.

Her parents are.

Apparently the President couldn't resist the faith of the 13-year-old, blue-eyed blonde who wrote to him even before he was elected, saying: "I know you'll try your hardest."

Melissa's mother, Mrs. Charles Baron, says: "It's fantastic. Her father and I can't believe we're going to the inauguration—and all because of a child!"

Melissa, nicknamed Missy, said that last September she wrote to the President a letter that went something like this:

"Dear President Johnson:

"I have been watching the convention on TV and thought it quite interesting. I know the election is not over, but I'm placing my faith in you that you'll come through.

"To get to the point, I was wondering if I could possibly have an invitation to the inaugural of you being president.

"I know it's something very hard to comply with, but I would rather think positive about it, not negative, and I think I would get someplace.

"I know you'll try your hardest.

"Sincerely yours,
"Missy Baron."

Missy wrote without telling her mother or father, proprietor of a men's clothing store.

On Oct. 12 her mother pulled a letter from the White House from their mailbox.

"The President has received your friendly letter and appreciated your interest in writing," it began. But, wrote presidential assistant Ivan Sinclair, it was a bit early since an inaugural chairman would not be appointed until after the election.

After the election, Missy, unsurprised by its outcome, wrote another letter addressed to "Inaugural Chairman."

On Nov. 27 she received a reply from Dale Miller, inaugural chairman, saying her letter would be referred to the appropriate committee.

On Dec. 3, another letter arrived from Miller:

"Dear Missy:

"This is to acknowledge receipt of your very good letter. I am happy to comply with your request and am placing your name on the list to receive the official inaugural invitation. With best wishes—"

Missy found the invitation in the mailbox when she returned home from junior high school Dec. 8.

Missy and her parents also received invitations to the inaugural concert, receptions, buffet dinners and the inaugural ball.

One hurdle remains for Missy — choosing between her yellow chiffon and orange silk dresses to wear to the ball. She is packing both.

Vic Damone Is Not In Court Contempt

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — A judge says singer Vic Damone was "hasty, impulsive and hot-headed" in removing his son from New York, but was not in contempt of court.

Damone, 35, and his ex-wife, actress Pier Angeli, 32, are engaged in a court battle over Damone's suit to modify custody of their son, Perry, 9.

In turning down Miss Angeli's request for a contempt citation, Superior Court Judge Laurence Rittenband said that Miss Angeli earlier had deprived Damone of his visitation rights by removing the boy from the United States.

Damone brought the boy to California from New York last Sept. 30 while Miss Angeli was at her home in Rome. Miss Angeli contended that constituted contempt of a 1960 court order granting her custody and Damone the right to weekend visiting rights with the boy.

Board Accepts New School Site, Designs

35 more students, according to Lamar Kelsey, architect.

The building will be corridorless, with the classrooms and other necessary rooms bunched around a large central room that will be used for kindergarten, music, lunches and other activities.

Kelsey explained that the design is similar to that of the Redeemer Lutheran Church School at 2221 N. Wahsatch Ave.

Further, the architect pointed out, a larger school can be done in three increments, with other similar sized buildings being added in the future as the school district finds a need for more classrooms in that area.

The second phase could expand the school potential for students to about 340, and a third increment would give it teaching area for more than 600 pupils, he said.

As plans were projected, the food for the hot lunch program would be prepared at the Douglass Valley School, just as the Pine Valley School now does that work for the Woodmen Valley School. Later, when the new junior high is completed, the food preparations would be done there it was explained by Dunning.

Kelsey said that if the bids are let early in the spring, the building should be ready for fall use.

The addition to the Woodmen Valley School would not cost as much as it would not be as large, measuring about 56 feet by 40 feet, to include six rooms and a central section for kindergarten, lunches and other activities.

It was pointed out that work on that could not start until school was out because of the closeness of the new work to the present school.

It was pointed out that plans call for development of a housing area along the access road in the near future, and soon to come also is a shopping center in the area of the interchange.

The projected child population of those new homes plus the student population in Falcon Estates, and the Tudor development will pretty well fill up the new school the day it opens, Dunning reported.

Dunning also reported that three schools now have clases with more than 35 students in them.

Douglass Valley has three such classes in the third grade and two in the fifth for a total of five.

Woodmen Valley has one fourth grade class over 35.

Black Forest has two sixth grade classes of over 35, making a total in the district of eight oversized classes.

70 in Fountain Attend Town's Council Meeting

tabled until the public hearing for William Soltwedel, discharged police chief, which will be at 7:30 p.m. Jan. 21 in the municipal building.

Action on the use of the fire trucks was postponed until a committee appointed at the meeting could examine the question further.

The board had asked Town Attorney Fillmore Gibson to write ordinance against raising vested fowl or livestock within town limits. But the board voted to table action until a later time. No reason was given.

The board unanimously approved payment of the bills.

Mayor D. J. Hankins then announced that the petitions of recall had been turned over to Town Clerk Mike Rasher before the city office closed at 5 p.m. He said no immediate action will be taken. The board has 15 days to protest the petitions.

The atmosphere in the room fairly crackled when Attorney Gibson rose to answer a question from the floor which was addressed to Major Hankins. Don Reinhard, a Fountain citizen, asked for the reason the board had dismissed Soltwedel. Gibson and the mayor simultaneously answered that the question of Soltwedel's dismissal would be discussed thoroughly at the hearing Jan. 21. ". . .and not until then," Gibson finished. A verbal volley between Reinhard and Gibson followed and the meeting quickly was adjourned.

egy is "the purely political one of deterring any counter-intervention by the U.S. in revolutionary situations" such as those developing in the Congo and Cyprus.

Although intelligence still lacks full information on the Russian Marine Corps table of organization, U.S. military experts say the new amphibious force is being patterned after the U.S. Marine Corps that now has a force of approximately 196,000.

Evidence has been uncovered that the Soviet Navy air arm, which only a year ago numbered 1,200 planes, is being vastly expanded and modernized to include several wings of a new fighter-bomber jet to support the newly created Marine Corps.

Since Russia does not have aircraft carriers, its Navy airforce is being supplied with jets and tanker planes that operate very much like the tactical air wings of the U.S. Air Force's long-range striking force.

Several Russian-made amphibious landing tanks, captured from the Communist Pathet Lao by pro-U.S. forces in Laos, are being carefully examined by Navy and Marine experts in light of the Soviet Marine Corps' appearance.

The Navy is also reviewing reports that the present Kremlin leaders are giving a high priority to the development of a fleet of cargo-landing type vessels similar to those used by the U.S. to invade Europe and the South Pacific during World War II.

Naval intelligence now ranks the Soviet navy as second only to the U.S. fleet in operational warships and submarines. Russia is estimated to have at least a dozen nuclear-propelled submarines.

This switch in Soviet strategy comes at a time when Defense Secretary McNamara has quietly been depreciating the importance of the U.S. Marine Corps in putting out Communist-instigated brushfires.

Instead of using the Marines in South Viet Nam, as recommended by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Secretary McNamara has ruled out a major role for the corps in that strife-torn nation. The Joint Chiefs unsuccessfully proposed that the Marines help in the jungle training of South Vietnamese forces and guard U.S. planes in the area.

Except for a token operation, the Marines also have been cut out of the Johnson administration's counter-insurgency program, which congressional critics contend is developing into a social-action, rice-raising army instead of "fighting" men.

As reported in this column on November 3, Russia is steadily increasing the fire-power and mobility of all branches of its armed forces.

Union Officials Seek Quick End To Dock Strike

to 17 men over the four-year contract term.

Employers have sought for years to get a gang size cut in view of automation of much of the loading and unloading work. The men were guaranteed an annual minimum wage and other benefits in the pact they spurned.

Longshoremen differ widely on the reasons for the rejection.

Gleason said that if the men understood the contract, they would know that the big issue is the job security provided.

The ILA educational campaign is expected to take several days. There were indications that union officials believed a week without pay would have a bearing on the new membership vote.

The deadlock in New York is not the only dispute involved in the walkout.

Contracts reached here between the ILA and the New York Shipping Association, which represents 145 shipping and stevedoring companies, traditionally have set the pattern for agreements in other ports. ILA locals in other ports, however, have to work out their own local settlements. There are a number of disputes in South Atlantic and Gulf Coast ports.

Pilot Dies in Avoiding Homes In Plane Crash

and then eject himself. Stanley's chute never opened.

"Cmdr. Stanley deliberately stayed with his plane until the last minute," the Navy spokesman quoted Field as saying.

Down below, Lyle Nevels, 23, a hatchery worker, looked up when he heard an explosion. He apparently heard the pilot eject himself.

"I saw something that looked like a bird, and it disappeared," Nevels said. "Three of us went to look. We saw something that looked a tractor part. There was a body in it."

Stanley's body was still inside the ejection unit. Nevels estimated the flier was at about 2,000 feet when he ejected.

The jet's canopy was found on a rooftop, half a mile from the crash scene.

The lot where the aircraft crashed was a little larger than a football field.

Fremont policeman William Ehlen watched the plane skim over rooftops, narrowly miss Mission San Jose High School, then nose downward when it lost its speed.

"The plane just seemed to stop in the air, tip nose-down and then crash," Ehlen said.

Stanley, commissioned a Navy flier in 1945, is survived by his widow, Mary, and their three children, Henry T. III, 12, William J., 10, and Barbara, 6. They live in Alameda.

Justice of Peace System Ends In Colorado

tle radical change in the basic structure.

The new judicial amendment dispensing with justice of the peace courts was voted into being in 1962 and makes anumber of sweeping changes.

All former business of the justice courts with the added jurisdiction of civil matters involving sums of $300 to $500 will now go to county court.

Mental health, probate and juvenile matters, formerly the province of county court is transferred to district court.

In the past justices of the peace required no special training in law, but the new amendment stipulates that in counties with a population of 100,000 county court judges must be attorneys. In those with a population of less than 100,000, the judge must have a high school education.

There will be approximately 70 county court judges now in Colorado instead of the former 200 justices of the peace. The new county court judges are not all full-time salaried, but not dependant on the fee system as were justices of the peace.

Under this system maximum salaries of the justices were fixed according to the classification of the counties, but actual salaries were dependent on the fees from business transacted in the courts. The more cases the more salary providing it did not top the specified limit.

In the past El Paso County was paying in excess of $30,000 for justices of the peace, under the new system the taxpayer will shell out around $25,000 for the services of the two new county court judges.

—Pre-school: $150 million to eradicate the handicaps with which slum children start first grade, when many educational experts say they already are two or three years behind. The projects probably would be patterned after the experimental programs now under way in Detroit, Baltimore and New York City. This would be part of the President's budget for the Economic Opportunity Act, not his educational program.

Book purchases: $100 million in grants to states for the purchase of textbooks and library books. This would be for all schools, public and private, and whether or not they were in the pockets of poverty. All books purchased would be those used by the public schools; the purchase of religiously oriented books would be barred.

—Education centers: $100 million for supplementary education centers and services, providing public and private school pupils alike with tutors, programs in remedial reading, science and language laboratories, summer schools, programs and teachers for handicapped children, and accelerated programs for the gifted.

—Educational laboratories: $45 million to strengthen education research and extend it into such fields as history, literature and economics, and to develop new instructional materials in all fields.

—State agencies: $10 million to strengthen state educational agencies, and help them identify emerging educational problems, formulate long-range plans, and expand educational research and development.

The total price tag of $1,665,000,000 is for one year only, although some programs are scheduled for three years and others five. Administration sources declined to forecast what will be asked for in the years ahead, but many Washington sources believe the annual cost will soon be in the $3 billion to $4 billion range.

Although the money will go only to public school districts, he said, "every encouragement will be given the public and private schools to work together.

All new programs, he said, must be designed for the children of the poor, although there inevitably will be a lap-over to the children of some families better off.

And, so long as the program is under public school auspices, he added, it can be made available to students in non-public schools.

said, "the Justice of the Peace courts no longer exist."

Judge Enoch administered the oath to District Judges John F. Gallagher and PatHinton, who then donned the robes of office and took their places at the table with the other judges.

County Judges Jack Roeser and Robert Cole were likewise sworn in.

After swearing in Robert Russel as district attorney, Francis J. Cuckow as Clerk of the District Court and Velma J. Turner as Clerk of the County Court, Judge Enoch explained how judicial matters would be divided among the judges during the forthcoming term.

Judge Hinton, he said, will hear civil matters, Judge Hardeman will hear criminal matters. Judge Calvert would hear matters dealing with juveniles, mental health and the family, Judge Miller would handle probate matters and Judge Gallagher would hear cases from the eastern division, which would include all cases from Lincoln and Kit Carson Counties.

The two newly-elected County Commissioners Rodger M. Fay and Charles Bickley were then sworn in by Judge Enoch.

The men who will serve as assistant district attorneys and deputy district attorneys during the coming term then were sworn in collectively.

$250,000 Coin Museum Is Proposed Here

". . .in a bid for this educational and cultural organization."

He did not represent the Planning Commission.

Hook said the 25,000-member association wanted to "bring together the three most valuable coin collections in the world," would employ 10 to 15 persons and not charge for viewing the collections.

Hook said the 30,000 square-foot structure and parking would require approximately two acres.

He suggested four possible sites on city land:

— Memorial Park, preferably near Pikes Peak Avenue and Union Boulevard.

—Near Zebulon Pike Detention Home along County Farm Road.

— Monument Valley Park immediately adjacent and west of Fine Arts Center property.

— Monument Valley Park, adjacent to Bijou Street either on the north or south side, or possibly both.

Hook reminded the council that "many communities" were making concentrated efforts to acquire the museum. He said free sites were proposed by eight cities and some communities offered cash assistance toward construction of the museum.

Hook asked the council only for land; not cash.

City Manager John Biery pointed out the request affected park property. He said there had been no time to submit the proposal to park officials and the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board.

Councilmen finally voted to work with Hook's committee. They did not promise public land or cash.

The council struck out in three directions to regulate gasoline deliveries.

City Attorney Frederick Henry was authorized to draw up a new regulatory ordinance and prepare to fight the County Court ruling against the earlier ordinance.

The earlier ordinance tried to make it illegal to transport more than 2,200 gallons of gasoline in a tank truck. The council said at that time that large tank trucks filled with gasoline were safety hazards.

Councilmen this morning also said they would plan for a public hearing on any new regulatory ordinance.

"In the interest of safety I hope we can draw up this ordinance in two weeks," said Councilman Harold Hawks. Attorney Henry said this might be possible.

Mayor Harry Hoth remarked that, "The interest of the council is in the safety factor," not economics.

In other action the council granted sewer service to Broadmoor Village, south of city boundaries.

The woman who was being held was identified as Mrs. Willie Mae Newell, 35, 421 E. St. Vrain St.

A "make-shift" communication is achieved when politicians call on educated specialists from the universities for advice, said D. Rabi, but the "language of science must become a part of the culture of man or we will suffer 1984."

The answer is to "Teach the sciences with important humanistic, philosophical and social content," and to consider the "social consequences of scientific discovery," Dr. Rabi concluded.

Solon Warns Against Sales Tax Increase

unless at the same time there is a celing established on the property tax. Any increase in the sales tax should be in good faith in regards to limiting the property tax."

In his speech, Love said that the money raised from the sales and cigarette tax hikes would be used to ease the burden of the property tax.

(The state mill levy of 1.31 on property expired at the first of the year, and this time there is no state property tax.)

Jackson said that he was not so concerned about the proposed tax hike on cigarettes. The cigarette tax was hiked last year, and the price in the vending machines went up five cents so that the money would be there to pay the tax. The additional pennies paid for each package went to the vendors.

Jackson said, "The proposed cigarette tax is not a big one, it would only raise about $5 million, and the vendors took advantage of the other two cents at the time of the last raise."

"But concerning this education problem, I'm in favor of taking a long look at the institutions of higher education. It seems to me that some people may just put figures in a proposed budget without regard to what they really need.

"A coordinating council might be a good idea. I think we need some sort of controlling board to oversee the institutions and colleges, and then let that board decide what kind of a budget those schools need," he said.

He said that it is difficult for a legislative committee to get the facts about the needs of the schools, and so some sort of controlling board ought to be set up with authority over all the colleges and universities.

Jackson came out well on his committee assignments. He was named to the Public Health, Welfare and Institutions Committee, the Fish and GameCommittee, and the Transportation and Highway Committee.

"The committees are pretty well composed and I think we will get some work done," he stated.

The Democrats control the House, and so they have the majority of members on the committees by a 5-2 margin.

Jackson expects to be one of the Repblican co-sponsors on a bill that would establish free-port conditions in the state.

He also expects to co-sponsor and help push some bills concerning the change in ton - mile tax and others that would deal with water pollution and fish and game activities.

It Can Be fun To Be for Freedom

By H. L. HUNT

Patriotism is best served if it becomes profitable and pleasurable. Freedom can exert profound influence by simply being fashionable.

The public may complain but people can maintain control of patriotism and freedom if they move consistently and constructively.

Churches contribute notably to our culture in presenting The Messiah. The contata offers variations and is as truly significant as any story of the Crucifixion.

An afternoon TV showing the day before Christmas of the perennial "The Miracle of 34th Street" had Macy's proving they had a Mr. Kriss Kringle who was an actual Santa Claus.

That Santa creating goodwill and relating the spirit of Christ to Christmas will have a far more constructive influence in the business world than most television shows. It will help counteract the subversive influence of other shows designed to sell their country down the river.

The public can have many more of these patriotic, spiritual entertainment features by speaking out through its patronage.

The public has the ultimate word on where America goes from here. Good men in both parties competing for elective office are. preferable to surly communist leaders quarreling with each other over who will rule us as their slaves. Simplifying it, we must decide which course to take.

It becomes so apparent, there is no danger of oversimplification.

Simple Assault Charges Filed

A charge of simple assault was filed in Justice of the Peace H. C. McShane's court Monday against Benjamin Franklin Moore, 29, Ft. Carson.

He is alleged to have attacked Burford Lee Wyckoff, owner of Lee's Liquor, 512 W. Colorado Ave., early Sunday morning.

According to a police report Moore was in Wyckoff's car when Wyckoff got into it after he quit work sometime after midnight Saturday. Wyckoff jumped out, pulled his gun and Moore then shot at him.

Wyckof, the report continued, then fired four shots at Moore who sped off down the alley on foot. He was picked up a short time later and told police he had been hiding in Wyckoff's car to escape from two men who were chasing him.

Belgian Oil Workers Reject Settlement

BRUSSELS, (AP) — Five thousand striking oil workers rejected wage increases of 15-16 per cent Monday. Their action cast a chill over many fuel-short Belgian homes and sent motorists scurrying for gas.

Janitors informed apartment residents that heat would be turned off at night.

Fuel orders increased sharply with suppliers reporting that their stocks would soon run down at the boom pace.

Oil companies claim they pay salaries ranging from a yearly $2,400 for laborers to $2,800 for skilled workers, plus overtime pay and other benefits.

Board Accepts New School Site, Designs

35 more students, according to Lamar Kelsey, architect.

The building will be corridorless, with the classrooms and other necessary rooms bunched around a large central room that will be used for kindergarten, music, lunches and other activities.

Kelsey explained that the design is similar to that of the Redeemer Lutheran Church School at 2221 N. Wahsatch Ave.

Further, the architect pointed out, a larger school can be done in three increments, with other similar sized buildings being added in the future as the school district finds a need for more classrooms in that area.

The second phase could expand the school potential for students to about 340, and a third increment would give it teaching area for more than 600 pupils, he said.

As plans were projected, the food for the hot lunch program would be prepared at the Douglass Valley School, just as the Pine Valley School now does that work for the Woodmen Valley School. Later, when the new junior high is completed, the food preparations would be done there it was explained by Dunning.

Kelsey said that if the bids are let early in the spring, the building should be ready for fall use.

The addition to the Woodmen Valley School would not cost as much as it would not be as large, measuring about 56 feet by 40 feet, to include six rooms and a central section for kindergarten, lunches and other activities.

It was pointed out that work on that could not start until school was out because of the closeness of the new work to the present school.

It was pointed out that plans call for development of a housing area along the access road in the near future, and soon to come also is a shopping center in the area of the interchange.

The projected child population of those new homes plus the student population in Falcon Estates, and the Tudor development will pretty well fill up the new school the day it opens, Dunning reported.

Dunning also reported that three schools now have clases with more than 35 students in them.

Douglass Valley has three such classes in the third grade and two in the fifth for a total of five.

Woodmen Valley has one fourth grade class over 35.

Black Forest has two sixth grade classes of over 35, making a total in the district of eight oversized classes.

tabled until the public hearing for William Soltwedel, discharged police chief, which will be at 7:30 p.m. Jan. 21 in the municipal building.

Action on the use of the fire trucks was postponed until a committee appointed at the meeting could examine the question further.

The board had asked Town Attorney Fillmore Gibson to write ordinance against raising vested fowl or livestock within town limits. But the board voted to table action until a later time. No reason was given.

The board unanimously approved payment of the bills.

Mayor D. J. Hankins then announced that the petitions of recall had been turned over to Town Clerk Mike Rasher before the city office closed at 5 p.m. He said no immediate action will be taken. The board has 15 days to protest the petitions.

The atmosphere in the room fairly crackled when Attorney Gibson rose to answer a question from the floor which was addressed to Major Hankins. Don Reinhard, a Fountain citizen, asked for the reason the board had dismissed Soltwedel. Gibson and the mayor simultaneously answered that the question of Soltwedel's dismissal would be discussed thoroughly at the hearing Jan. 21. " . . . and not until then," Gibson finished.

A verbal volley between Reinhard and Gibson followed and the meeting quickly was adjourned.

egy is "the purely political one of deterring any counter-intervention by the U.S. in revolutionary situations" such as those developing in the Congo and Cyprus.

Although intelligence still lacks full information on the Russian Marine Corps table of organization, U.S. military experts say the new amphibious force is being patterned after the U.S. Marine Corps that now has a force of approximately 196,000.

Evidence has been uncovered that the Soviet Navy air arm, which only a year ago numbered 1,200 planes, is being vastly expanded and modernized to include several wings of a new fighter-bomber jet to support the newly created Marine Corps.

Since Russia does not have aircraft carriers, its Navy airforce is being supplied with jets and tanker planes that operate very much like the tactical air wings of the U.S. Air Force's long-range striking force.

Several Russian-made amphibious landing tanks, captured from the Communist Pathet Lao by pro-U.S. forces in Laos, are being carefully examined by Navy and Marine experts in light of the Soviet Marine Corps' appearance.

The Navy is also reviewing reports that the present Kremlin leaders are giving a high priority to the development of a fleet of cargo-landing type vessels similar to those used by the U.S. to invade Europe and the South Pacific during World War II.

Naval intelligence now ranks the Soviet navy as second only to the U.S. fleet in operational warships and submarines. Russia is estimated to have at least a dozen nuclear-propelled submarines.

This switch in Soviet strategy comes at a time when Defense Secretary McNamara has quietly been depreciating the importance of the U.S. Marine Corps in putting out Communist-instigated brushfires.

Instead of using the Marines in South Viet Nam, as recommended by the Joint Chiefs of Staff, Secretary McNamara has ruled out a major role for the corps in that strife-torn nation. The Joint Chiefs unsuccessfully proposed that the Marines help in the jungle training of South Vietnamese forces and guard U.S. planes in the area.

Except for a token operation, the Marines also have been cut out of the Johnson administration's counter-insurgency program, which congressional critics contend is developing into a social-action, rice-raising army instead of "fighting" men.

As reported in this column on November 3, Russia is steadily increasing the fire-power and mobility of all branches of its armed forces.

Union Officials Seek Quick End To Dock Strike

to 17 men over the four-year contract term.

Employers have sought for years to get a gang size cut in view of automation of much of the loading and unloading work. The men were guaranteed an annual minimum wage and other benefits in the pact they spurned.

Longshoremen differ widely on the reasons for the rejection.

Gleason said that if the men understood the contract, they would know that the big issue is the job security provided.

The ILA educational campaign is expected to take several days. There were indications that union officials believed a week without pay would have a bearing on the new membership vote.

The deadlock in New York is not the only dispute involved in the walkout.

Contracts reached here between the ILA and the New York Shipping Association, which represents 145 shipping and stevedoring companies, traditionally have set the pattern for agreements in other ports. ILA locals in other ports, however, have to work out their own local settlements. There are a number of disputes in South Atlantic and Gulf Coast ports.

and then eject himself. Stanley's chute never opened.

"Cmdr. Stanley deliberately stayed with his plane until the last minute," the Navy spokesman quoted Field as saying.

Down below, Lyle Nevels, 23, a hatchery worker, looked up when he heard an explosion. He apparently heard the pilot eject himself.

"I saw something that looked like a bird, and it disappeared," Nevels said. "Three of us went to look. We saw something that looked a tractor part. There was a body in it."

Stanley's body was still inside the ejection unit. Nevels estimated the flier was at about 2,000 feet when he ejected.

The jet's canopy was found on a rooftop, half a mile from the crash scene.

The lot where the aircraft crashed was a little larger than a football field.

Fremont policeman William Ehlen watched the plane skim over rooftops, narrowly miss Mission San Jose High School, then nose downward when it lost its speed.

"The plane just seemed to stop in the air, tip nose-down and then crash," Ehlen said.

Stanley, commissioned a Navy flier in 1945, is survived by his widow, Mary, and their three children, Henry T. III, 12, William J., 10, and Barbara, 6. They live in Alameda.

Justice of Peace System Ends In Colorado

tle radical change in the basic structure.

The new judicial amendment dispensing with justice of the peace courts was voted into being in 1962 and makes anumber of sweeping changes.

All former business of the justice courts with the added jurisdiction of civil matters involving sums of $300 to $500 will now go to county court.

Mental health, probate and juvenile matters, formerly the province of county court is transferred to district court.

In the past justices of the peace required no special training in law, but the new amendment stipulates that in counties with a population of 100,000 county court judges must be attorneys. In those with a population of less than 100,000, the judge must have a high school education.

There will be approximately 70 county court judges now in Colorado instead of the former 200 justices of the peace. The new county court judges are not all full-time salaried, but not dependant on the fee system as were justices of the peace.

Under this system maximum salaries of the justices were fixed according to the classification of the counties, but actual salaries were dependent on the fees from business transacted in the courts. The more cases the more salary providing it did not top the specified limit.

In the past El Paso County was paying in excess of $30,000 for justices of the peace, under the new system the taxpayer will shell out around $25,000 for the services of the two new county court judges.

$250,000 Coin Museum Is Proposed Here

". . .in a bid for this educational and cultural organization."

He did not represent the Planning Commission.

Hook said the 25,000-member association wanted to "bring together the three most valuable coin collections in the world," would employ 10 to 15 persons and not charge for viewing the collections.

Hook said the 30,000 square-foot structure and parking would require approximately two acres.

He suggested four possible sites on city land:

— Memorial Park, preferably near Pikes Peak Avenue and Union Boulevard.

—Near Zebulon Pike Detention Home along County Farm Road.

— Monument Valley Park immediately adjacent and west of Fine Arts Center property.

— Monument Valley Park, adjacent to Bijou Street either on the north or south side, or possibly both.

Hook reminded the council that "many communities" were making concentrated efforts to acquire the museum. He said free sites were proposed by eight cities and some communities offered cash assistance toward construction of the museum.

Hook asked the council only for land; not cash.

City Manager John Biery pointed out the request affected park property. He said there had been no time to submit the proposal to park officials and the Parks and Recreation Advisory Board.

Councilmen finally voted to work with Hook's committee. They did not promise public land or cash.

The council struck out in three directions to regulate gasoline deliveries.

City Attorney Frederick Henry was authorized to draw up a new regulatory ordinance and prepare to fight the County Court ruling against the earlier ordinance.

The earlier ordinance tried to make it illegal to transport more than 2,200 gallons of gasoline in a tank truck. The council said at that time that large tank trucks filled with gasoline were safety hazards.

Councilmen this morning also said they would plan for a public hearing on any new regulatory ordinance.

"In the interest of safety I hope we can draw up this ordinance in two weeks," said Councilman Harold Hawks. Attorney Henry said this might be possible.

Mayor Harry Hoth remarked that, "The interest of the council is in the safety factor," not economics.

In other action the council granted sewer service to Broadmoor Village, south of city boundaries.

tional structure of the man and the laws of human organization.

A "make-shift" communication is achieved when politicians call on educated specialists from the universities for advice, said D. Rabi, but the "language of science must become a part of the culture of man or we will suffer 1984."

The answer is to "Teach the sciences with important humanistic, philosophical and social content," and to consider the "social consequences of scientific discovery," Dr. Rabi concluded.

Prof. Wilbur Wright of the department of physics at Colorado College, introduced the speaker.

Solon Warns Against Sales Tax Increase

unless at the same time there is a celing established on the property tax. Any increase in the sales tax should be in good faith in regards to limiting the property tax."

In his speech, Love said that the money raised from the sales and cigarette tax hikes would be used to ease the burden of the property tax.

(The state mill levy of 1.31 on property expired at the first of the year, and this time there is no state property tax.)

Jackson said that he was not so concerned about the proposed tax hike on cigarettes. The cigarette tax was hiked last year, and the price in the vending machines went up five cents so that the money would be there to pay the tax. The additional pennies paid for each package went to the vendors.

Jackson said, "The proposed cigarette tax is not a big one, it would only raise about $5 million, and the vendors took advantage of the other two cents at the time of the last raise."

"But concerning this education problem, I'm in favor of taking a long look at the institutions of higher education. It seems to me that some people may just put figures in a proposed budget without regard to what they really need.

"A coordinating council might be a good idea. I think we need some sort of controlling board to oversee the institutions and colleges, and then let that board decide what kind of a budget those schools need," he said.

He said that it is difficult for a legislative committee to get the facts about the needs of the schools, and so some sort of controlling board ought to be set up with authority over all the colleges and universities.

Jackson came out well on his committee assignments. He was named to the Public Health, Welfare and Institutions Committee, the Fish and GameCommittee, and the Transportation and Highway Committee.

"The committees are pretty well composed and I think we will get some work done," he stated.

The Democrats control the House, and so they have the majority of members on the committees by a 5-2 margin.

Jackson expects to be one of the Repblican co-sponsors on a bill that would establish free-port conditions in the state.

He also expects to co-sponsor and help push some bills concerning the change in ton - mile tax and others that would deal with water pollution and fish and game activities.

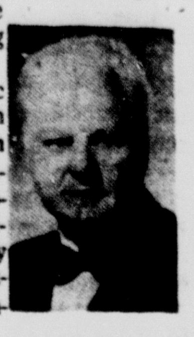
It Can Be fun To Be for Freedom

By H. L. HUNT



Patriotism is best served if it becomes profitable and pleasurable. Freedom can exert profound influence by simply being fashionable.

The public may complain but people can maintain control of patriotism and freedom if they move consistently and constructively.

Churches contribute notably to our culture in presenting The Messiah. The contata offers variations and is as truly significant as any story of the Crucifixion.

An afternoon TV showing the day before Christmas of the perennial "The Miracle of 34th Street" had Macy's proving they had a Mr. Kriss Kringle who was an actual Santa Claus.

That Santa creating goodwill and relating the spirit of Christ to Christmas will have a far more constructive influence in the business world than most television shows. It will help counteract the subversive influence of other shows designed to sell their country down the river.

The public can have many more of these patriotic, spiritual entertainment features by speaking out through its patronage.

The public has the ultimate word on where America goes from here. Good men in both parties competing for elective office are. preferable to surly communist leaders quarreling with each other over who will rule us as their slaves. Simplifying it, we must decide which course to take.

It becomes so apparent, there is no danger of oversimplification.

Simple Assault Charges Filed

A charge of simple assault was filed in Justice of the Peace H. C. McShane's court Monday against Benjamin Franklin Moore, 29, Ft. Carson.

He is alleged to have attacked Burford Lee Wyckoff, owner of Lee's Liquor, 512 W. Colorado Ave., early Sunday morning.

According to a police report Moore was in Wyckoff's car when Wyckoff got into it after he quit work sometime after midnight Saturday. Wyckoff jumped out, pulled his gun and Moore then shot at him.

Wyckof, the report continued, then fired four shots at Moore who sped off down the alley on foot. He was picked up a short time later and told police he had been hiding in Wyckoff's car to escape from two men who were chasing him.

Belgian Oil Workers Reject Settlement

BRUSSELS, (AP) — Five thousand striking oil workers rejected wage increases of 15-16 per cent Monday. Their action cast a chill over many fuel-short Belgian homes and sent motorists scurrying for gas.

Janitors informed apartment residents that heat would be turned off at night.

Fuel orders increased sharply with suppliers reporting that their stocks would soon run down at the boom pace.

Oil companies claim they pay salaries ranging from a yearly $2,400 for laborers to $2,800 for skilled workers, plus overtime pay and other benefits.

Tragedy Leads To More Safety

By DON CARSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Navy says it has acted on 20 safety recommendations aimed at protecting the lives of its men who cruise the ocean depths in submarines.

The recommendations stemmed from an inquiry into the loss of the atomic submarine Thresher, which carried 129 men to their deaths in the spring of 1963.

In a statement released Monday, Secretary of the Navy Paul H. Nitze also declared:

"No expense of (sic) effort has been or will be spared in the correction of any areas of operating procedures, materials or ship construction that are deficient."

The Thresher was lost shortly after undergoing a final overhaul at the Portsmouth, N.H. shipyard.

The Navy statement came after the Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee had said "practices, conditions and standards existing at the time were short of those required to insure safe operation of the Thresher."

The 20 recommendations, most of them highly technical, were made by a Navy court of inquiry. They had been kept secret since the investigation ended in June 1963, two months after the Thresher went down.

The congressional committee called for a "drastic change in the present military technical management concepts," and urged that Navy officers be assigned to technical responsibility as long as necessary to do a thorough job without hampering promotion opportunities.

The Navy statement made no comment on this.

Several of the 20 recommendations dealt with ways to strengthen the piping systems of submarines.

The Navy court had suggested that the Thresher might have gone down because of the failure of piping in a salt water cooling system, thus admitting the ocean into her hull.

It said 14 per cent of the 155 joints checked on the vessel failed to meet the standards of the then experimental ultrasonic inspection program. Such testing now is mandatory.

The shipyard found the Thresher fit by regular inspection standards.

The Navy also said that all critical pipe joints in future submarines will be welded, rather than sealed through a system called silver brazing.

As for existing submarines and others already under construction, ultrasonic testing will be used on all silver-brazed joints a half-inch and larger in what are called hazardous piping systems.

ARAB BLOC MEETS

CAIRO, U.A.R. (UPI) — Premiers of Arab bloc nations gathered Monday to consider relations with countries that deal with Israel.

Economic matters also were to be discussed when the premiers met but the Israeli question held the spotlight.

The leaders have approved a settlement in which Lebanon agreed to permit construction of a pumping station on its territory, for use in a projected diversion of the Jordan River.

The pump is to be located on the Wazzani River, a Jordan tributary. Lebanon initially had objected to the project.

Ladies, this is Walt with a long overdue lecture for you compliment - fighters. You're the misses who make a guy feel like an idiot every time he tries to offer you a compliment

When he tells you, "Gosh, that's a pretty dress," do you blush and say sweetly, "Aren't you nice?" You do not! Not you! You say, "Oh, this old thing? I got it years ago; it only cost $14.89 and it's really out of date, but it's comfortable!"

How does that little speech translate to your would-be admirer? Well, he hears it this way: "Sam, your taste is really out of date. What a dope you are to try and say anything intelligent about women's clothing!"

Isn't that a sweet way to treat a kind guy?

I've never figured out for sure why compliments bring out the worst in the female of the species, but I've got a theory or two.

Maybe the girls are still smarting from the jokes of grade school days. Remember all the "cute" compliments boys used to give you? "Your eyes are like pools — cesspools! Your teeth are like stars — they come out at night!"

Well, maybe you develop such a defensive distrust then that for the rest of your days every time you receive a compliment, you expect a boomerang insult to accompany it. Maybe that's why you go through life ducking every kind word!

Or, perhaps, it's a hangover from all the warnings you've heard about seducers, "They'll say all sorts of beautiful things until a girl loses her head, and then they'll take what they want!"

Dear Ladies, don't let this crush your egos too much, but a man can tell you you're beautiful without having sinister designs on your virtue. Honest!

Look at things a bit from the male side of the fence. From childhood, we fellows are raised on comic strips that tell us that men never notice what woman wear or how they look. Actually, that's far from the truth.

We spend lots of time looking at you, and noticing what you wear. But after our first few adolescent compliments are cruelly lashed by your irate tongues, we give up and never risk rousing your anger with another compliment.

Then what do you decide? That men never notice how you look! "What a paradosical situation!" as jimmy Durante wtuld say!

Isn't it time you stopped insulting the fellows who compliment you? If you sincerely want to reform, you'll follow these four rules the next time a boy gives you a kind word.

Don't try to prove to him that it's undeserved.

Don't accuse him of lying or trying to flatter you!

Don't rush to give him an immediate compliment in return!

Do give him a warm, pleased smile and a simple "thank you," and then sail on with your conversation.

Can you do it? Or will you reward the next guy who says, "You look nice today," with another verbal clotting?

On behalf of battered - mankind, I hope not. Even if you know you're homely as a mud pie, let him tell you that you're "beautiful." What does it matter if he's a poor, myopic, deluded fool? At least he's on your side!

LBJ, Japan's Premier Open Strategy Talks

By SPENCER DAVIS

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson and Japan's Premier Eisaku Sato open strategy talks on U.S. policies in the Far East and Communist China's efforts to cut American influence in Asia.

Because of cold weather, the President arranged a late morning ceremonial welcome for the 63-year-old Japanese leader in the White House East Room.

This was to be followed by a 90-minute conference in the President's office with Secretary of State Dean Rusk and Foreign Minister Etsusaburo Shiina also attending.

Both nations attached high importance to the meeting. Rusk called it an opportunity "to do a lot of wood chopping."

On his arrival from San Francisco Monday night, Sato said, "I feel that it is especially fitting now that this direct personal exchange take place between your president who embarks on a new term of office within a very few days, and myself, so recently come to the helm of a new administration in Japan."

Sato took over from ailing Hayato Ikeda two months ago.

A second Johnson-Sato meeting Wednesday will be followed by a joint communique.

With the Viet Nam situation and Communist China's explosion of a nuclear device last October in mind, Sato said that in the past few months "we have witnessed significant changes and critical developments in areas vitally affecting the conduct of world affairs."

He was expected to elaborate on this in a speech before the National Press Club following the first White House meeting. Sato then was to meet with Rusk before attending a black tie dinner given by the President and Mrs. Johnson in his honor at the White House.

While the China issue overshadowed other questions, Sato also was expected to question Johnson on U.S. control of Okinawa.

HINTS FROM Heloise

By HELOISE CRUSE

Dear Folks:

During the past several years many women have written to me that they stored seldom-used linens such as cutwork table cloths and napkins in their cedar chests.

You all work mighty hard bleaching, taking the stains out and ironing these gorgeous cloths.

I say to you never, "never," NEVER put your cloths in any kind of drawer (cedar-lined, camphor-lined, etc.) Without first lining that drawer or warping the cloth in paper — especially if it's going to be stored for any length of time.

I do keep my seldom-used (once-a-month or so) linens in a cedar chest . . . BUT I make sure that the linens are "thoroughly" dry before I put them away. I do this by laying them (after ironing) on the table or "near" a heating unit for a few days.

Then I fold them and "wrap" them in a nice piece of white paper, or put them on a piece of plastic on the bottom of the chest (please read this again . . . you "only" the plastic on the bottom) where the cloth would touch the wood. You must leave the top of the plastic open in case you still have moisture in that cloth. Then the excess moisture can evaporate, and thus prevent mildew.

Please do not wash and iron a cloth and put it in a chest immediately and close the lid. BE SURE the linen is dry before you close the chest. I don't have a master's degeee in how to keep linens but my way seems to be the answer for me.

Another thing, if you only use a certain cloth once very six months, or once a year, do not starch it. Lots of bugs just love starch!

Put it outside in the sun to dry thoroughly, fold it up, wrinkles and all, then put it away. If it is stored for a long time, you'll probably have to press it anyhow before you use it, so why waste energy ironing it "before" you store it? —Heloise

P. S. This also includes packing away off-season clothes.

Letter Of Laughter

Dear Heloise:

I had problems threading a needle . . . it just wouldn't go in the eye.

I took my hair spray and gave the thread a good squirt. How quickly it straightened out and cooperated with me!

The thread gave me no more trouble. —Mrs. J. M. C.

Dear Heloise:

I never miss your hints if I can help it and now I believe I have come up with a little hint for you.

We gals who type a lot and use the type-erase bits of paper, etc., always have to hunt for the stuff, finding it inside our desk drawers, on the floor, and even mixed in between the papers we work on. My solution: attach a small piece of tape to one end of the typewriter, presto — the type-erase is handy and always where you can find it. —Aurela Alexander

Dear Heloise:

When I don't have a rack to fit the pan I'm using as a roaster or pot roast kettle, I use three or more metal jar rings (the kind used with removable disc tops) according to the size of my roast.

They hold the meat above the pan bottom without interfering with the drop of juices or passage of steam. —Elizabeth M. Ballew

Dear Heloise:

As I receive my bills, I put them away in their envelopes. When the time comes to pay them, I cut the return address from the envelope and tape it on a new envelope to be sent.

No errors in addresses. Saves time, too. —Iris Marr

Dear Heloise:

Many mothers who have children in the baby food range must have the same problem as I—how to keep the foods orderly on shelves.

Line your jars in a row and cover (or cap) them with inverted plastic tomato tubes.

This saves space and keeps baby's goodies all neat. It works for juice cans, too. You can stack them three, or sometimes, four rows up. —Linda Farulli

Dame Rumor is nobody's friend

Dame Rumor has it that Home Furniture carries only the highest furnishings. This untrue whisper is to be regretted especially since she has never been in our store and her verdict of "only the highest prices" has been rendered without evidence.

It is true that if your budget allows it and you are looking for very fine furniture, we do have many beautiful collections in the upper price range . . . all representing the most distinguished names in home furnishings.

It is also true that we have a very large number of collections and pieces in the medium and low price range . . . all wearing equally respected brand names.

Prices are relative, and rarely do you get more than you pay for. People who have become acquainted with us as customers have learned that at Home Furniture no matter what budget, they always get the best that their money can buy . . . and that their purchase is sure to be in the best taste . . . no matter how much or how little they pay. We suggest that you think about this and investigate before you invest.

We invite you to make a leisurely investigation. Visit our newly remodeled Guild Galleries . . . our Colonial Shop . . . our Downtownstairs Shop . . . our Annex of upholstered chairs and sofas. Browse through the beautiful room settings on five floors. You'll see endless handsome collections, unusual occasional pieces, over 250 sofas and 800 chairs, lamps, rugs and accessories . . . of every period, at any price. Take your time; there is no importuning to buy. Our sales people and interior designers will help you with selections if you wish, but you are welcome just to look. You'll realize that you really can afford Home Furniture. Dame Rumor, you'll agree, is nobody's friend . . . and Home Furniture is definitely your store.

Many mothers who have children in the baby food range must have the same problem as I—how to keep the foods orderly on shelves.

Line your jars in a row and cover (or cap) them with inverted plastic tomato tubes.

This saves space and keeps baby's goodies all neat. It works for juice cans, too. You can stack them three, or sometimes, four rows up. —Linda Farulli

Dame Rumor is nobody's friend

Dame Rumor has it that Home Furniture carries only the highest furnishings. This untrue whisper is to be regretted especially since she has never been in our store and her verdict of "only the highest prices" has been rendered without evidence.

It is true that if your budget allows it and you are looking for very fine furniture, we do have many beautiful collections in the upper price range . . . all representing the most distinguished names in home furnishings.

It is also true that we have a very large number of collections and pieces in the medium and low price range . . . all wearing equally respected brand names.

Prices are relative, and rarely do you get more than you pay for. People who have become acquainted with us as customers have learned that at Home Furniture no matter what budget, they always get the best that their money can buy . . . and that their purchase is sure to be in the best taste . . . no matter how much or how little they pay. We suggest that you think about this and investigate before you invest.

We invite you to make a leisurely investigation. Visit our newly remodeled Guild Galleries . . . our Colonial Shop . . . our Downtownstairs Shop . . . our Annex of upholstered chairs and sofas. Browse through the beautiful room settings on five floors. You'll see endless handsome collections, unusual occasional pieces, over 250 sofas and 800 chairs, lamps, rugs and accessories . . . of every period, at any price. Take your time; there is no importuning to buy. Our sales people and interior designers will help you with selections if you wish, but you are welcome just to look. You'll realize that you really can afford Home Furniture. Dame Rumor, you'll agree, is nobody's friend . . . and Home Furniture is definitely your store.

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ

Q. 1—As South you hold:

♠KQ10982 ♡Q ◇K1095 ♣92

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♣	Pass
1 ♠	2 ♡	Pass	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Three spades. A bid of two would not be sufficiently aggressive and might indicate a mere desire to compete for the part score. Some effort should be made to move toward game and the jump bid, in view of your previous pass, is not forcing.

Q. 2—As South you hold:

♠AK63 ♡42 ◇AQ82 ♣KQ4

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—One spade. We sometimes stretch a point to make a jump rebid in no trump with only 18 instead of the prescribed 19 high card points. But we are not inclined to do so when it involves suppressing a good four card major. The risk in rebidding only one spade is ever so slight for, if partner must pass, chances for game may be regarded as negligible.

Q. 3—As South you hold:

♠Q103 ♡AQ5 ◇A983 ♣K42

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Three spades. Up until now you have sounded like a person with a very minimum opening bid, and, while your values do fall within the limits of the one no trump rebid, your points are of the gilt-edged variety and include an excellent fit for both of partner's suits. Game is quite probable even opposite a rather weak hand and a jump bid is necessary to convey this message to partner.

Q. 4—As South you hold:

♠AQ53 ♡KQJ94 ♣8763

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Two spades. The normal procedure at this point would be to announce the club fit by offering a jump raise, but that would interfere with the proper and orderly investigation for bigger things on the hand. In the interests of probing for a slam, therefore, another temporizing call is in order. Partner's next call may clarify the picture considerably.

Q. 5—As South you hold:

♠J ♡AKQJ ◇AKQ65 ♣AQ4

The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
2 ◇	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	3 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Four clubs. The future is slightly uncertain at this stage due to the apparent lack of a fit and another bid is indicated. If partner rebids his suit once more, we recommend a raise to five. If the texture of his suit is good enough this should induce him to contract for slam.

Q. 6—As South you hold:

♠1083 ♡KQ1087 ◇10653 ♣A

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
1 NT	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Two hearts. This is a two way shot. With your unbalanced holding a no trump contract is not especially appealing and, in addition, hopes for game should not be entirely abandoned in spite of partner's mild rebid. If he is able to offer a delayed raise of the hearts you can proceed to four.

Q. 7—As South you hold:

♠A ♡AKJ7 ◇KJ5 ♣107654

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
Pass	1 ♡	Pass	1 NT
Pass	2 ♡	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Double. Your hand figures to take six or seven tricks and anything partner can contribute will be just gravy. This double is clearly for penalties, for, had it been your desire to hear from partner, you would have doubled one heart.

Q. 8—As South you hold:

♠63 ♡J8763 ◇Q10965 ♣A

The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♣	1 ◇	Pass	?

What do you bid?

A.—Four diamonds. This hand presents great potential playing strength for your partner's overcall and strong inducement should be offered him to proceed. The reason for the jump all the way to four is to crowd the opposition right out of the bidding. They might have the cards to score heavily in one of the black suits and now be unable to find that out safely.

Dear Abby--

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Tell Your Mother!

DEAR ABBY: I am a girl of 14. My father died before I was born. About six years ago my mother took in a man who was looking for a room to rent, only we didn't have an extra room so she let him sleep in her room. All my friends know about it because they keep asking me who the man is and, when I say he rents a room from us, they ask how many bedrooms we have.

My biggest problem is that he is always trying to get me alone and touch me. My mother works from 3 P.M. until midnight and I walk the streets so I won't have to stay alone in the house with him. I know I shouldn't be walking the streets alone at night, but I don't want to hurt my mother's feelings by telling her why I'm afraid to stay at home. What should I do — CAN'T SIGN NAME.

DEAR CAN'T: Tell your mother ALL about the man's behavior immediately! And if she doesn't get rid of him at once, call the POLICE DEPARTMENT and tell them exactly what you have told me. I urge you to follow this advice now.

DEAR ABBY: Your advice to widows who wonder what to do about their wedding and engagement rings was a revelation to me. You said, "Widows who would like to start dating again and eventually to remarry should leave their wedding rings at home and wear their engagement rings on their right hands".

My husband died two years ago and recently I started dating. But I felt guilty every time I went out with another man. It was as though I were betraying my deceased husband by wearing his rings with another man. After reading that piece in your column, I put my wedding ring in the drawer and placed my lovely diamond engagement ring on my right hand. I broke into tears, but I realized for the FIRST TIME that I am no longer a married woman, and should not feel guilty. Thank you, Abby. —L. S.

DEAR ABBY: I disagree with you Abby. I think a woman who has lost her husband and who has children should wear her wedding ring at all times.

My father died four years ago (I was 12) and a year later my mother took off her rings. When I saw her bare fingers I asked her please to put her rings back on and to keep them on. I pointed out that although she no longer had a husband, she had a son, and I didn't want people to think I was illegitimate. I would appreciate seeing a retraction in your column —A WIDOW'S SO

DEAR SON: No reasonable person would assume that because a woman wears no wedding ring, her children are illegitimate. Nor would I worry about the oddball who might think so.

DEAR ABBY: Just read your reply to the young woman with braces on her teeth who is getting married and wanted to know if you thought she should have her dentist take her braces off for the wedding. (Her dentist said he would do it, but he would have to put them back on again immediately afterwards.)

I completely disagree with you. I wore braces for years and it is sheer misery to have them taken off, and even worse to have them put back on again. She will probably have a sore mouth for her wedding, unless her braces are removed several weeks bare the event. Then there is always the chance of having her teeth go crooked again and she will only have to wear braces longer.

That girl should be glad she's getting her teeth straightened and as long as her fiance does not mind, she should let well enough alone. —ONE WHO KNOWS

PROVO, Utah AP) — An electronic computer was used at Brigham Young university to match boys and girls with similar interests for a university dance. Out of the 15,000 students at BYU, the machine picked a boy who not only met the description, but had asked for a date with a red-haired girl. He was Richard Mitchell, Bonnie's brother.

Opening lead: Ten of ◇

In his desire to take all 13 tricks, South neglected to provide for the safety of his four spade contract and ended up with a deficit.

North opened with a demand bid of two clubs, and South, of course, made the negative response of two notrump to show less than seven points. When North raised to three notrump, South persisted to four spades. His decision was influenced not only by the void in diamonds, but also by the realization that his holding would produce several tricks in the suit contract.

West opened the ten of diamonds — covered by dummy's jack, East's queen and ruffed by declarer. South led the queen of spades and finessed it, when West did not cover. A trump was continued to the ace, however, East showed out—discarding a club.

South did not dare ruff a diamond in order to continue drawing trump for fear that a third round of diamonds by the opposition would fatally shorten his spade holding. He therefore began to run North's clubs.

West trumped the third club with the five of spades and shifted to the king of hearts in order to kill the dummy's remaining entry. Another club was led and South discarded a heart as West ruffed with the king of trumps. A heart return through the jack netted the defense two more tricks.

South was the victim of his own carelessness. While it is true that his plan would have succeeded if the trumps had been divided three-two, it would have been wiser to abandon the quest for maximum in the interests of safety.

When the queen of spades is led at trick two, if West does not cover, declarer should put up dummy's ace. By rejecting the finesse, he is able to continue drawing trump without giving up control. The ten of spades is continued and overtaken by South's jack. West may take his king whenever he likes; however, declarer can reenter his hand by ruffing a diamond, draw the remaining trump and then run the dummy's clubs to score 12 tricks—five spades, one heart and six clubs.

Adults in the region who are interested in joining Camp Fire Girls as group leaders or committee members are invited to attend the dinner and may call the Council office, 635-2525, for further details.

Dear Abby--

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Tell Your Mother!

DEAR ABBY: I am a girl of 14. My father died before I was born. About six years ago my mother took in a man who was looking for a room to rent, only we didn't have an extra room so she let him sleep in her room. All my friends know about it because they keep asking me who the man is and, when I say he rents a room from us, they ask how many bedrooms we have.

My biggest problem is that he is always trying to get me alone and touch me. My mother works from 3 P.M. until midnight and I walk the streets so I won't have to stay alone in the house with him. I know I shouldn't be walking the streets alone at night, but I don't want to hurt my mother's feelings by telling her why I'm afraid to stay at home. What should I do — CAN'T SIGN NAME.

DEAR CAN'T: Tell your mother ALL about the man's behavior immediately! And if she doesn't get rid of him at once, call the POLICE DEPARTMENT and tell them exactly what you have told me. I urge you to follow this advice now.

DEAR ABBY: Your advice to widows who wonder what to do about their wedding and engagement rings was a revelation to me. You said, "Widows who would like to start dating again and eventually to remarry should leave their wedding rings at home and wear their engagement rings on their right hands".

My husband died two years ago and recently I started dating. But I felt guilty every time I went out with another man. It was as though I were betraying my deceased husband by wearing his rings with another man. After reading that piece in your column, I put my wedding ring in the drawer and placed my lovely diamond engagement ring on my right hand. I broke into tears, but I realized for the FIRST TIME that I am no longer a married woman, and should not feel guilty. Thank you, Abby. —L. S.

DEAR ABBY: I disagree with you Abby. I think a woman who has lost her husband and who has children should wear her wedding ring at all times.

My father died four years ago (I was 12) and a year later my mother took off her rings. When I saw her bare fingers I asked her please to put her rings back on and to keep them on. I pointed out that although she no longer had a husband, she had a son, and I didn't want people to think I was illegitimate. I would appreciate seeing a retraction in your column —A WIDOW'S SO

DEAR SON: No reasonable person would assume that because a woman wears no wedding ring, her children are illegitimate. Nor would I worry about the oddball who might think so.

DEAR ABBY: Just read your reply to the young woman with braces on her teeth who is getting married and wanted to know if you thought she should have her dentist take her braces off for the wedding. (Her dentist said he would do it, but he would have to put them back on again immediately afterwards.)

I completely disagree with you. I wore braces for years and it is sheer misery to have them taken off, and even worse to have them put back on again. She will probably have a sore mouth for her wedding, unless her braces are removed several weeks bare the event. Then there is always the chance of having her teeth go crooked again and she will only have to wear braces longer.

That girl should be glad she's getting her teeth straightened and as long as her fiance does not mind, she should let well enough alone. —ONE WHO KNOWS

Wrong Boy

PROVO, Utah AP) — An electronic computer was used at Brigham Young university to match boys and girls with similar interests for a university dance. Bonnie Mitchell, 18-year old red-haired freshman, asked the machine to pick out a tall boy with dark hair and blue eyes who liked entertainment and looked favorably on marriage.

Out of the 15,000 students at BYU, the machine picked a boy who not only met the description, but had asked for a date with a red-haired girl. He was Richard Mitchell, Bonnie's brother.

Home Sweet Home

JUNCTION CITY, Kan. (AP) —When the Harold Reaumes left Junction City seven years ago for Roseburg, Ore., they sold their longtime family home at 524 West 7th St.

Back here recently on a lengthy visit, they sought a place to set up temporary housekeeping. It just happened that the old homestead was for rent furnished, so they found themselves back "Home" again.

What's New

Telephone dialing is done automatically with a new "computer type" dialing system that goes to work on any of 36 preset numbers. The device has as one of its main selling features the fact that it cannot forget or get wrong numbers.

(Hammacher Schlemmer, 145 E. 57th St., New York, N.Y.).

Tops in a do-it-yourself project: A suspended ceiling. A new metal gridwork system with fiber glass panels is ideal for lowering old fashioned high ceilings or covering exposed pipes and ductwork. The panels, because they are fiber glass, will not rot or mildew from dampness and can be removed easily for access to wiring.

A men's shoe heel that snaps on and off it now being test marketed. It will "reflect an overall savings of up to 70 per cent on re-heeling," the manufacturer says. The detachable heel is made to sell for under $1.

(Union Carbide Corp., 270 Park Ave., New York, N.Y.).

A soft future for closet shelves and drawer linings, jewelry and storage boxes, comes in the form of a new self-adhesive plastic. The material consists of two layers of plastic fluffed with fiberfill.

(Cohn - Hall - Marx Co., 1407 Broadway, New York, N.Y.).

The traditional nailing method of putting things together will be a thing of the past if the makers of a new panel adhesive have their way. The manufacturer used professional installers to panel four walls of a room in the two ways. "Installation time per panel for the adhesive method was 50 percent faster than the nailing method," it reports.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	2♣	Pass	2NT
Pass	3NT	Pass	4♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ten of ◇

In his desire to take all 13 tricks, South neglected to provide for the safety of his four spade contract and ended up with a deficit.

North opened with a demand bid of two clubs, and South, of course, made the negative response of two notrump to show less than seven points. When North raised to three notrump, South persisted to four spades. His decision was influenced not only by the void in diamonds, but also by the realization that his holding would produce several tricks in the suit contract.

West opened the ten of diamonds — covered by dummy's jack, East's queen and ruffed by declarer. South led the queen of spades and finessed it, when West did not cover. A trump was continued to the ace, however, East showed out—discarding a club.

South did not dare ruff a diamond in order to continue drawing trump for fear that a third round of diamonds by the opposition would fatally shorten his spade holding. He therefore began to run North's clubs.

West trumped the third club with the five of spades and shifted to the king of hearts in order to kill the dummy's remaining entry. Another club was led and South discarded a heart as West ruffed with the king of trumps. A heart return through the jack netted the defense two more tricks.

South was the victim of his own carelessness. While it is true that his plan would have succeeded if the trumps had been divided three-two, it would have been wiser to abandon the quest for maximum in the interests of safety.

When the queen of spades is led at trick two, if West does not cover, declarer should put up dummy's ace. By rejecting the finesse, he is able to continue drawing trump without giving up control. The ten of spades is continued and overtaken by South's jack. West may take his king whenever he likes; however, declarer can reenter his hand by ruffing a diamond, draw the remaining trump and then run the dummy's clubs to score 12 tricks—five spades, one heart and six clubs.

Grain Market

CHICAGO (AP)—A strike of dockworkers that halted exports in Atlantic and Gulf ports sent soybeans and grain futures prices tumbling at the opening of the Board of Trade today but the losses later were pared and a few advances were posted.

Soybeans which suffered an opening price break ranging up to four cents a bushel made a good comeback and was fractionally higher near the close.

Carlot receipts were estimated at: wheat 30 cars, corn 297, oats 30, rye none, barley 32, soybeans 38.

BOAT-AUTO SMASHUP

SPCIER, Minn. (AP) — A car and a boat were damaged in a freak accident, when a tandem tire came loose from a rock conveyer being towed down the highway by a truck.

The tire spun down the road, smashed into the back end of a parked car, bounced about 20 feet into the air and came down on top of a new fiber glass boat on display at a marine establishment.

Wall Street Report

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market moved irregularly higher early Tuesday afternoon despite sharp losses among aerospace stocks and some of the gold mining issues. Trading was fairly active.

The aerospace issues reacted sharply to a forecast that Defense Department budgeting for aerospace will sink about 30 per cent in the next five years.

Some gold mining stocks continued to retreat as the price for gold in London eased further and the British pound sterling became firmer.

A generally higher trend prevailed among steels, airlines, building materials, oils, rails, utilities and farm implements.

The cigarette stocks were mostly unchanged following their late rally of Monday. Lorillard added a fraction.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up .5 at 328.0 with industrials up .4, rails up .5 and utilities up .4.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon showed a minor gain of .86 at 884.08.

The averages were braked by minor losses among such pivotal stocks as Du Pont, General Motors, Woolworth, Union Carbide, Baltimore & Ohio and Southern Railway.

Xerox continued to gain, adding nearly 2. Comsat advanced more than 2, Polaroid more than a point.

Prices were generally higher on the American Stock Exchange.

Corporate bonds were mixed. U.S. government bonds showed scant change.

British Forces Are Protecting Malaysian Area

SINGAPORE (AP) — Britain's biggest fleet now is protecting Malaysia from Indonesian attack.

The aircraft carrier Eagle, Britain's most formidable warship, arrived Monday to join the Far East fleet of more than 70 ships. It includes the carrier Victorious, the commando ship Bulwark, guided missile destroyers and frigates.

Defense preparations were being rushed ashore. The current goal was about 9,000 troops in North Borneo, where Indonesia shares a 900-mile jungle border with Malaysia. They include 500 hard-fighting Nepalese Gurkhas being flown from Hong Kong, beginning Wednesday.

Helicopters were to shuttle half the Gurkha battalion to the border as soon as it arrives in Borneo.

The main Indonesian thrust was expected on Borneo, where intelligence sources reported a heavy buildup along the border.

The fleet serves as a safeguard against a major invasion of Singapore or the Malaysian mainland.

"If they come across in the water in any force, they'll be sitting ducks," said a Malaysian official.

But he pointed out that small guerrilla groups can, and do, slip across the Strait of Malacca.

British Army Minister Fred Mulley toured the defense lines in Borneo and assured Malaysian officials of Britain's full support.

Gen. Sir James Cassels, scheduled to take over shortly as Britain's chief of the general staff, was arriving today for a week's tour.

British Commonwealth Secretary Arthur Bottomley said in London: "It would be fatal to peace in the Far East if we permitted small nations to be crushed at will by big nations."

Indonesia's President Sukarno has vowed to crush Malaysia, contending that the federation is a British scheme to keep a colonialist hold on the area.

Indonesian guerrillas have been landing in small numbers on the Malaysian mainland since August. Security forces are still hunting 11 guerrillas who landed Friday in a party of 24. The others were captured.

In line with its announced withdrawal from the United Nations, Indonesia boycotted a session in New York of the U. N. Special Fund's 24-nation governing council. No attempt was made to replace the Indonesian second vice president of the council.

In Manila, Philippine President Diosdado Macapagal's office announced that U.N. Secretary-General U Thant has asked him to try to persuade Sukarno to reconsider his decision to withdraw from the world body. Similar appeals to Indonesia from other world leaders have been fruitless.

Wall Street Report

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market moved irregularly higher early Tuesday afternoon despite sharp losses among aerospace stocks and some of the gold mining issues. Trading was fairly active.

The aerospace issues reacted sharply to a forecast that Defense Department budgeting for aerospace will sink about 30 per cent in the next five years.

Some gold mining stocks continued to retreat as the price for gold in London eased further and the British pound sterling became firmer.

A generally higher trend prevailed among steels, airlines, building materials, oils, rails, utilities and farm implements.

The cigarette stocks were mostly unchanged following their late rally of Monday. Lorillard added a fraction.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up .5 at 328.0 with industrials up .4, rails up .5 and utilities up .4.

The Dow Jones industrial average at noon showed a minor gain of .86 at 884.08.

The averages were braked by minor losses among such pivotal stocks as Du Pont, General Motors, Woolworth, Union Carbide, Baltimore & Ohio and Southern Railway.

Xerox continued to gain, adding nearly 2. Comsat advanced more than 2, Polaroid more than a point.

Prices were generally higher on the American Stock Exchange.

Corporate bonds were mixed. U.S. government bonds showed scant change.

British Forces Are Protecting Malaysian Area

SINGAPORE (AP) — Britain's biggest fleet now is protecting Malaysia from Indonesian attack.

The aircraft carrier Eagle, Britain's most formidable warship, arrived Monday to join the Far East fleet of more than 70 ships. It includes the carrier Victorious, the commando ship Bulwark, guided missile destroyers and frigates.

Defense preparations were being rushed ashore. The current goal was about 9,000 troops in North Borneo, where Indonesia shares a 900-mile jungle border with Malaysia. They include 500 hard-fighting Nepalese Gurkhas being flown from Hong Kong, beginning Wednesday.

Helicopters were to shuttle half the Gurkha battalion to the border as soon as it arrives in Borneo.

The main Indonesian thrust was expected on Borneo, where intelligence sources reported a heavy buildup along the border.

The fleet serves as a safeguard against a major invasion of Singapore or the Malaysian mainland.

"If they come across in the water in any force, they'll be sitting ducks," said a Malaysian official.

But he pointed out that small guerrilla groups can, and do, slip across the Strait of Malacca.

British Army Minister Fred Mulley toured the defense lines in Borneo and assured Malaysian officials of Britain's full support.

Gen. Sir James Cassels, scheduled to take over shortly as Britain's chief of the general staff, was arriving today for a week's tour.

British Commonwealth Secretary Arthur Bottomley said in London: "It would be fatal to peace in the Far East if we permitted small nations to be crushed at will by big nations."

Indonesia's President Sukarno has vowed to crush Malaysia, contending that the federation is a British scheme to keep a colonialist hold on the area.

Indonesian guerrillas have been landing in small numbers on the Malaysian mainland since August. Security forces are still hunting 11 guerrillas who landed Friday in a party of 24. The others were captured.

In line with its announced withdrawal from the United Nations, Indonesia boycotted a session in New York of the U. N. Special Fund's 24-nation governing council. No attempt was made to replace the Indonesian second vice president of the council.

In Manila, Philippine President Diosdado Macapagal's office announced that U.N. Secretary-General U Thant has asked him to try to persuade Sukarno to reconsider his decision to withdraw from the world body. Similar appeals to Indonesia from other world leaders have been fruitless.

Gasoline Pump Struck by Car

A gasoline pump at Clark's service station, 2715 W. Colorado Ave., was knocked over Monday afternoon when struck by a car driven by G. L. Brown, 620 N. Tejon St.

IT'S ALL YOURS—That could be what Dewey Johnson (left), part-owner of the Colorado Springs One Hour Martinizing franchise, is thinking as he hands over keys to a new fourth location to Felix L. Godinez, new store manager. The new Martinizing outlet is holding a grand opening, starting sometime this week, at 9 S. Circle Dr. The new manager, his wife, Juanita, and their son plan to live in Security. They previously lived in Pueblo and Denver where Godinez was associated with One Hour Martinizing for six years.

New Martinizing Store To Open on Circle Dr.

One Hour Martinizing, with three locations in Colorado Springs, will hold a grand opening of a new, fourth city location this week. The actual date for the opening has not yet been announced.

The new home of One Hour Martinizing, at 9 S. Circle Dr., was built by the Joe Campo Construction Co., local builders. Design of the modern, cinder-block structure was handled by Bill Sayre, a Denver architect.

Prizes featured during the Grand Opening, which will run until Jan. 23, include one years free dry cleaning, a boys and a girls bicycle.

Registration for the dry cleaning prize, which is valued at $300, may be made at all four Martinizing outlets. They are located at 317 S. Nevada Ave., 3100 N. Hancock and 9 S. Circle Dr.

A boy's 10-speed French racing bike and a girl's three-speed English bike are being offered as grand prizes at the new store.

Tom Sheehan, of Denver, and Dewey Johnson, of 1217 N. Hancock, local franchise owners; have named Felix L. Godinez manager of the Circle Drive outlet. Godinez, formerly of Pueblo, will live with his family in Security. He has some 11 years in the dry cleaning business, six of which have been spent with One Hour Martinizing.

The new manager previously was associated with Martinizing in Pueblo for five years and in Denver for a year. Of his new position, Godinez says, nothing less than top quality."

The new Martinizing store, which features ample parking around the 1,400 square foot building, is a complete, self-contained dry-cleaning plant which will also handle all types of laundry.

One Hour Martinizing is a national-francise business which features fast service at no extra charge. It is the only nationally franchised dry cleaning operation, giving customers the benefit of nation-wide experience.

Locally, the first Martinizing franchise was opened 10 years ago at the South Nevada Avenue location. Next to open, some nine years ago, was the Platte Avenue store. Then, four years ago, the dry cleaning outlet on Hancock Street was opened.

The four Colorado Springs plants will employ approximately 25 persons.

Letter to President Pleas for Assistance

Dear Mr. President:

I read your speech of Jan. 4, 1965 word for word. It was an eloquent and moving document. One portion in particular may prove of great benefit to me. This was the part along toward the end where you said "A President's hardest task is not to do what is right, but to know what is right."

For you see, sir, my problem is just the reverse of yours. It is easy for me to know what is right, but difficult for me to do it. I am precisely in the same boat with St. Paul who wrote (Romans 7:15) "for what I would, that do I not; but what I hate, that do I."

My trouble, in other words, pertains to the performance of what is right whereas yours pertains to the knowing of what is right. The purpose of this letter, therefore, is to begin a program for mutual understanding. I shall pass along my secret for "knowing" and I hope you will compensate my efforts by giving your secret for "doing."

As to knowing the difference between right and wrong, Mr. President, a man can't rely either on imagination or mere conscience. Imagination runs wild and conscience wavers. So it's best to go to the words of the Creator Himself. After all He set the whole universe up, He ought to know better than anyone else how it should operate.

Take for instance Deuteronomy 5:19. There He tells us "neither shalt thou steal." Since the word "thou" is singular, I figure He's speaking to me. By "steal," it is my opinion, that He means that I ought not to take the property of another without the owner's consent.

As the Lord is perfect and as Psalms 12:6 tells us that "the words of the Lord are pure words" so I believe that the no-stealing commandment is complete, without conflict, and applicable to 100 per cent of all action.

If I should try to get around the commandment by saying that I steal for a good purpose, yet I steal.

If I should combine with others so that I can say that I steal by right of the majority, yet I steal.

If I were to institutionalize the theft by saying that I am part of the government and that the government rightfully steals for me, yet I steal.

If I should liberalize theft by saying that the old rules do not apply to modern situations, yet — in the sight of the Lord who reigns forever — I steal.

Even if I were to plead that I and my companions have authority to give the owner's consent to the theft against his consent and that I personally do not partake of the proceeds, nevertheless that, too, would be theft.

In short, taking property without the owner's consent is theft — whether the act is committed by purloining, by fraud, outright force or taxation — the same is theft. Accepting the Good Book of what it says, without tryint to argue with it or get around it, that is the secret of my success in KNOWING right from wrong.

Now if you will tell me your secret for DOING right without knowing "what is right," I shall be very much obliged.

Wishing you a ew Year that is successful in the deepest sense of the word, I am

Sincerely yours,
Samuel G. Campbell

Columbia Savings 33% Capital Increase in '64

The Columbia Savings statement of condition as of Dec. 31, 1964, released Saturday, reflected a 33 per cent increase in capital and reserves in one year. According to Daniel L. Ritchie, executive vice president and member of the board of directors of the 35-year-old savings institution, Columbia's resources are now in excess of $108,000,000 and Columbia Savings enjoyed another year of substantial growth in 1964.

In releasing the statement of condition, Ritchie said that "Columbia savers continue to enjoy a rate of 4½ per cent in savings, the same rate that has been paid consistently since 1961. Our board of directors reaffirmed its intent to continue to afford Columbia customers the highest prevailing rate of earnings among major financial institutions in Colorado."

The 1964 statement shows a permanent stock, reserves and surplus figure in excess of $7,286,000 as opposed to $5,400,000 in 1963. According to Ritchie, Columbia's capitalization is substantially in excess of usual Federal Home Loan Bank standards and "is added assurance to our customers of Columbia's position of strength."

Although Columbia Savings has shown a steady pattern of growth in the five-year period 1960 through 1964, the greatest growth has been in 1964. Asset growth in this period has been: 1960, $53,115,000; 1961, $63,392,562; 1962, $73,072,740; 1963, $86,846,646; 1964, $108,155,782.

"Columbia's continued growth," said Ritchie, "is testimony of the faith of over 50,000 Colorado families who save with us. Our policy of continuing to pay 4½ per cent plus the strength and safety of our statewide institution are important factors to savers."

Columbia Savings has full-service offices in Denver, Fort Collins, Colorado Springs, Pueblo, Littleton, and Jefferson County. In addition, Mortgage Loan Agencies are located in Greeley, Longmont, Boulder and Grand Junction. "Locating our Columbia offices in the ten largest commercial areas of Colorado enables us to be of better service to Colorado home buyers and to strengthen our home loan portfolio," Ritchie declared.

Kaman Assessing Market for New Coupling

Kaman Aircraft, Bloomfield, Conn., is assessing the market for a revolutionary new type of mechanical coupling.

The coupling, known as the Bossler coupling, for which Kaman has a patent application transmits power between rotating shafts operating at misalignment by distributing loads among members of a monolithic truss. The truss is rigid in torsion and flexible in other directions.

In comparison to the conventional Hooke's universal joint which it could replace, it would weigh half as much, carry more torque, have infinite life, need no maintenance lubrication, and operate over a wide speed range.

An experimental version of the coupling withstood testing of 10 million cycles, carrying 16,000 inch-pounds of torque at 6200 rpm with 0.2 inches of parallel displacement of the joined shafts — equivalent to an angular displacement of about five degrees.

According to company estimates, ten or more units of this new coupling can be manufactured in aircraft quality at half the cost of conventional couplings. In industrial applications the Bossler coupling would be cost competitive in quantities of 1200 or more units.

Dial Finance Co. Proposes Stock Split

Dial Finance Company's board of directors declared today a 30 cent quarterly dividend, payable Feb. 9 to common stock of record Jan. 18, 1965. The 30 cent rate was set Oct. 2, 1963 when the payment was increased from 27½ cents.

At the annual meeting April 7, 1965, stockholders will be asked to amend the company's restated and amended articles of incporation to increase the authorized common stock to 5 million shares from 2 million shares.

If the stockholders approve the proposed increase in the number of shares, the board of directors, at its April 7 meeting, intends to vote a two-for-one split in the company's shares.

Each stockholder of record April 19, 1965 will receive one additional share for each one share held. Certificates representing additional shares will be mailed to stockholders on or about May 11, 1965.

At their meeting on April 7, the directors intend to declare a quarterly dividend of 35 cents per share on the shares outstanding on April 7, payable May 11 to stockholders of record on April 19. This will be equivalent to 17½ cents a share after the split. Based on the number of shares outstanding before the split, the annual dividend rate will be increased to $1.40 from $1.20.

Dial's local office is located at 125½ N. Tejon St. and managed by John A. Gauss.

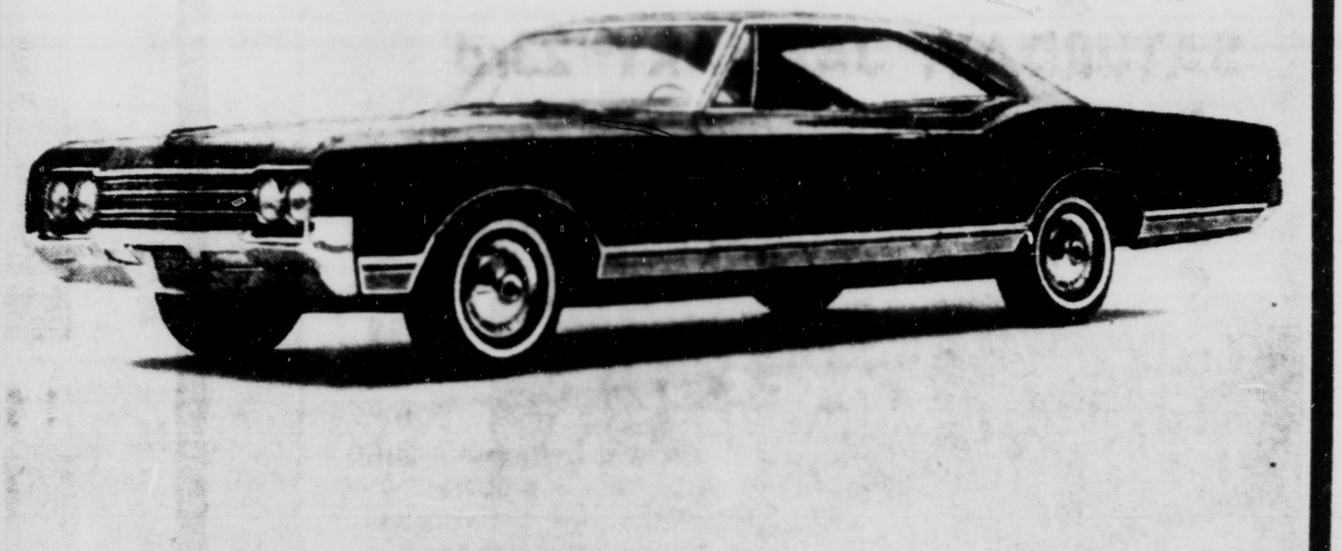
Sure.

You might find another car
as new as the Delta 88.



But not this year.

This is Oldsmobile's Delta 88. It's unique.
Unique because it's new. New clear through.
Styling is new. So new, not a line nor a highlight was borrowed from last year.
Power plant is new. Super Rocket V-8 is the biggest in Olds history: 425-cubic-inches big, up to 370-horses strong.
Transmission is new, too. Turbo Hydra-Matic, available on any Delta 88, provides up to 40% more torque from a standing start, superlative performance at all speeds.
New styling. New engine. New transmission. This year, only Delta 88 lets you have all three, all new.
Other cars have a lot of catching up to do.

Frontier Will Propose New Air Service

Frontier Airlines will propose new service to Grand Canyon National Park and Las Vegas, Nev. in Civil Aeronautics Board hearings getting under way today in Las Vegas. Presiding over the Las Vegas-Grand Canyon Non-stop Service Case is Walter Bryan, hearing examiner from Washington, D.C.

Top officers of Frontier Airlines headed by Lewis W. Dymond, president, will present legal, sales and economic testimony and exhibits proposing new service to extend Frontier's Denver-Flagstaff route beyond Flagstaff to Las Vegas via a new airport being constructed on the south rim of Grand Canyon to serve Grand Canyon National Park.

Frontier proposes to provide direct air service for the first time to Las Vegas, Nevada and Grand Canyon National Park from the Colorado cities of Colorado Springs, Pueblo and Durango and Farmington, New Mexico and additional new service between Las Vegas and the Frontier served cities of Denver, Albuquerque, El Paso Phoenix and Tucson.

The new airport at Grand Canyon is expected to be ready for service in the summer of 1965. It is located nine miles south of the park headquarters on the South Rim of the canyon.

Frontier has been serving Grand Canyon National Park through Flagstaff, Ariz. since 1950.

Gasoline Pump Struck by Car

A gasoline pump at Clark's service station, 2715 W. Colorado Ave., was knocked over Monday afternoon when struck by a car driven by G. L. Brown, 620 N. Tejon St.

A fire was started, but service station employes fought it with a dry powder extinguisher and had it out when city firemen arrived.

The Fire Department received the alarm at 3:40 p.m. Company 5 responded. Although the fire was out when the firemen reached the scene they washed gasoline that had been spilled from the street.

At 4:34 p.m. Monday Companies 1 and 3 went to the residence of Anne Baca, 319 W. Fountain St., where a fire had been started by lint getting into a floor furnace. The fire was extinguished, with no damage.

Company 3, at 11:50 p.m. Monday, went to 2022 W. Pikes Peak Ave. for a smoke investigation. No fire was found.

New Martinizing Store To Open on Circle Dr.

One Hour Martinizing, with three locations in Colorado Springs, will hold a grand opening of a new, fourth city location this week. The actual date for the opening has not yet been announced.

The new home of One Hour Martinizing, at 9 S. Circle Dr., was built by the Joe Campo Construction Co., local builders. Design of the modern, cinder-block structure was handled by Bill Sayre, a Denver architect.

Prizes featured during the Grand Opening, which will run until Jan. 23, include one years free dry cleaning, a boys and a girls bicycle.

Registration for the dry cleaning prize, which is valued at $300, may be made at all four Martinizing outlets. They are located at 317 S. Nevada Ave., 3100 N. Hancock and 9 S. Circle Dr.

A boy's 10-speed French racing bike and a girl's three-speed English bike are being offered as grand prizes at the new store.

Tom Sheehan, of Denver, and Dewey Johnson, of 1217 N. Hancock, local franchise owners; have named Felix L. Godinez manager of the Circle Drive outlet. Godinez, formerly of Pueblo, will live with his family in Security. He has some 11 years in the dry cleaning business, six of which have been spent with One Hour Martinizing.

The new manager previously was associated with Martinizing in Pueblo for five years and in Denver for a year. Of his new position, Godinez says, nothing less than top quality."

The new Martinizing store, which features ample parking around the 1,400 square foot building, is a complete, self-contained dry-cleaning plant which will also handle all types of laundry.

One Hour Martinizing is a national-francise business which features fast service at no extra charge. It is the only nationally franchised dry cleaning operation, giving customers the benefit of nation-wide experience.

Locally, the first Martinizing franchise was opened 10 years ago at the South Nevada Avenue location. Next to open, some nine years ago, was the Platte Avenue store. Then, four years ago, the dry cleaning outlet on Hancock Street was opened.

The four Colorado Springs plants will employ approximately 25 persons.

Letter to President Pleas for Assistance

Dear Mr. President:

I read your speech of Jan. 4, 1965 word for word. It was an eloquent and moving document. One portion in particular may prove of great benefit to me. This was the part along toward the end where you said "A President's hardest task is not to do what is right, but to know what is right."

For you see, sir, my problem is just the reverse of yours. It is easy for me to know what is right, but difficult for me to do it. I am precisely in the same boat with St. Paul who wrote (Romans 7:15) "for what I would, that do I not; but what I hate, that do I."

My trouble, in other words, pertains to the performance of what is right whereas yours pertains to the knowing of what is right. The purpose of this letter, therefore, is to begin a program for mutual understanding. I shall pass along my secret for "knowing" and I hope you will compensate my efforts by giving your secret for "doing."

As to knowing the difference between right and wrong, Mr. President, a man can't rely either on imagination or mere conscience. Imagination runs wild and conscience wavers. So it's best to go to the words of the Creator Himself. After all He set the whole universe up. He ought to know better than anyone else how it should operate.

Take for instance Deuteronomy 5:19. There He tells us "neither shalt thou steal." Since the word "thou" is singular, I figure He's speaking to me. By "steal," it is my opinion, that He means that I ought not to take the property of another without the owner's consent.

As the Lord is perfect and as Psalms 12:6 tells us that "the words of the Lord are pure words" so I believe that the no-stealing commandment is complete, without conflict, and applicable to 100 per cent of all action.

If I should try to get around the commandment by saying that I steal for a good purpose, yet I steal.

If I should combine with others so that I can say that I steal by right of the majority, yet I steal.

If I were to institutionalize the theft by saying that I am part of the government and that the government rightfully steals for me, yet I steal.

If I should liberalize theft by saying that the old rules do not apply to modern situations, yet — in the sight of the Lord who reigns forever — I steal.

Even if I were to plead that I and my companions have authority to give the owner's consent to the theft against his consent and that I personally do not partake of the proceeds, nevertheless that, too, would be theft.

In short, taking property without the owner's consent is theft — whether the act is committed by purloining, by fraud, outright force or taxation — the same is theft. Accepting the Good Book of what it says, without tryint to argue with it or get around it, that is the secret of my success in KNOWING right from wrong.

Now if you will tell me your secret for DOING right without knowing "what is right," I shall be very much obliged.

Wishing you a ew Year that is successful in the deepest sense of the word, I am

Sincerely yours,
Samuel G. Campbell

Columbia Savings 33% Capital Increase in '64

The Columbia Savings statement of condition as of Dec. 31, 1964, released Saturday, reflected a 33 per cent increase in capital and reserves in one year. According to Daniel L. Ritchie, executive vice president and member of the board of directors of the 35-year-old savings institution, Columbia's resources are now in excess of $108,000,000 and Columbia Savings enjoyed another year of substantial growth in 1964.

In releasing the statement of condition, Ritchie said that "Columbia savers continue to enjoy a rate of 4½ per cent in savings, the same rate that has been paid consistently since 1961. Our board of directors reaffirmed its intent to continue to afford Columbia customers the highest prevailing rate of earnings among major financial institutions in Colorado."

The 1964 statement shows a permanent stock, reserves and surplus figure in excess of $7,286,000 as opposed to $5,400,000 in 1963. According to Ritchie, Columbia's capitalization is substantially in excess of usual Federal Home Loan Bank standards and "is added assurance to our customers of Columbia's position of strength."

Although Columbia Savings has shown a steady pattern of growth in the five-year period 1960 through 1964, the greatest growth has been in 1964. Asset growth in this period has been: 1960, $53,115,000; 1961, $63,392,562; 1962, $73,072,740; 1963, $86,846,646; 1964, $108,155,782.

"Columbia's continued growth," said Ritchie, "is testimony of the faith of over 50,000 Colorado families who save with us. Our policy of continuing to pay 4½ per cent plus the strength and safety of our statewide institution are important factors to savers."

Columbia Savings has full-service offices in Denver, Fort Collins, Colorado Springs, Pueblo, Littleton, and Jefferson County. In addition, Mortgage Loan Agencies are located in Greeley, Longmont, Boulder and Grand Junction. "Locating our Columbia offices in the ten largest commercial areas of Colorado enables us to be of better service to Colorado home buyers and to strengthen our home loan portfolio," Ritchie declared.

Kaman Assessing Market for New Coupling

Kaman Aircraft, Bloomfield, Conn., is assessing the market for a revolutionary new type of mechanical coupling.

The coupling, known as the Bossler coupling, for which Kaman has a patent application transmits power between rotating shafts operating at misalignment by distributing loads among members of a monolithic truss. The truss is rigid in torsion and flexible in other directions.

In comparison to the conventional Hooke's universal joint which it could replace, it would weigh half as much, carry more torque, have infinite life, need no maintenance lubrication, and operate over a wide speed range.

An experimental version of the coupling withstood testing of 10 million cycles, carrying 16,000 inch-pounds of torque at 6200 rpm with 0.2 inches of parallel displacement of the joined shafts — equivalent to an angular displacement of about five degrees.

According to company estimates, ten or more units of this new coupling can be manufactured in aircraft quality at half the cost of conventional couplings. In industrial applications the Bossler coupling would be cost competitive in quantities of 1200 or more units.

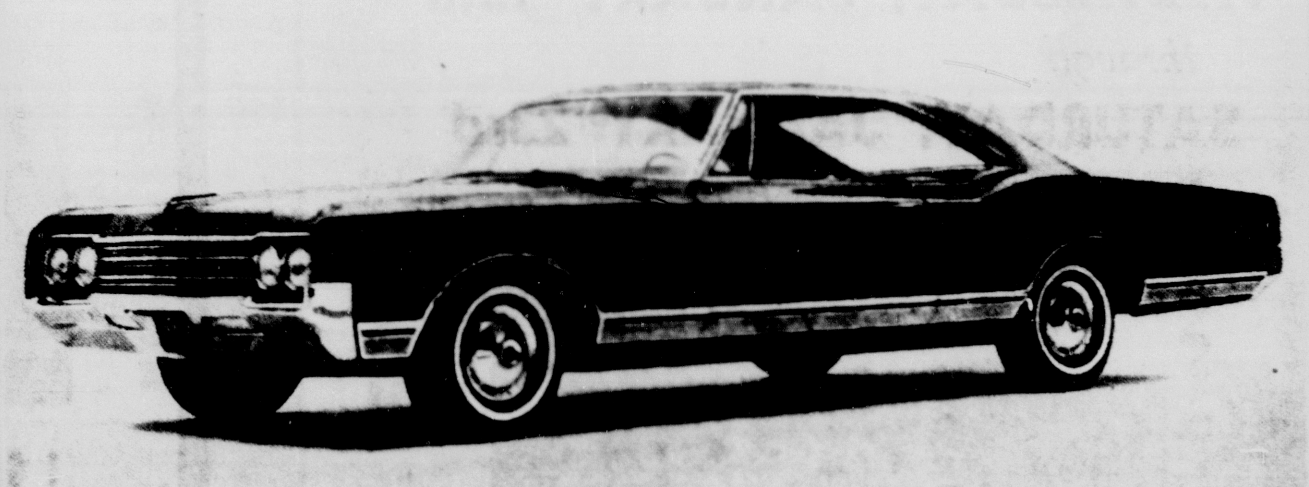
You might find another car as new as the Delta 88.



But not this year.

This is Oldsmobile's Delta 88. It's unique.
Unique because it's new. New clear through.
Styling is new. So new, not a line nor a highlight was borrowed from last year.
Power plant is new. Super Rocket V-8 is the biggest in Olds history: 425-cubic-inches big, up to 370-horses strong.
Transmission is new, too. Turbo Hydra-Matic, available on any Delta 88, provides up to 40% more torque from a standing start, superlative performance at all speeds.
New styling. New engine. New transmission. This year, only Delta 88 lets you have all three, all new.

Window Sills Do Have Some Advantages

NEW YORK (UPI) — Windowsills rank high on the list of all-time household nuisances. In any room, they are dust-catchers and frequently need sanding and repainting. In bathrooms, kitchens and laundries, they are easily damaged by steam and soap.

These annoyances can be reduced or eliminated if you surface your windowsills with ceramic tile. What's more, you can do the job inexpensively and, in the process, have some fun. Here's how:

Measure the sill area that you wish to have covered in tile. Then take the measurements to a tile contractor listed in the Yellow Pages under "Tile-Ceramic." He'll be able to show you an almost unlimited selection of colors, plus various sizes and shapes. If there is any cutting necessary, he'll do that, too.

From the tile contractor you can also purchase the adhesive you'll need to secure the tile to the windowsill and the grout for filling the small joints between the tiles.

You'll find it easy to install tile. The cost for a single window should be around $4, according to the Tile Council of America. If you're planning to surface several windows, the cost will drop to about $2 per window, because there will be no additional expense for the adhesive and grout.

Italians Are Testing New Fog-Snow Machine

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Tests have begun at Milan's airport on an Italian-made machine to turn fog into snow.

Several of the devices were placed along one runway Friday while a dense fog blanket clung to the Milan area and kept the airport closed.

The machines gave off a special gas which caused a freezing effect in the moisture-heavy atmosphere, turning a high percentage of the fog into snow.

South Colorado Is Depressed, Massari Says

DENVER (AP) — State Rep. Phillip Massari, D - Trinidad, says southern Colorado is a forgotten part of the state that has been a depressed area for 40 years, "longer than Appalachia."

He said the area's greatest hope is for completion of the Whiskey Creek road over the Sangre de Cristo Mountains as a tourist stimulus It would shorten the distance from Trinidad on the eastern side to San Luis on the western side by 51 miles.

Massari has asked Lyle Lindesmith, state coordinator of the anti-poverty program, if federal funds can be secured to help build the road. But Lindesmith said he didn't know whether the anti - poverty program covers such projects.

Massari complained at a conference on the anti-poverty program Thursday that southern Colorado's economic problems make it hard to complete with a Redevelopment and other more prosperous sections for Area Redevelopment and other federal assistance.

The conference was sponsored by Democratic legislators. It was the first of a series on topics of interest to lawmakers, open to both parties.

In an interview, Lonnie Pippin, publisher of the Monte Vista Journal, asserted that Rio Grande County is enjoying one of its most prosperous periods in recent years.

Pippin told the Rocky Mountain News that reports that characterize the entire San Luis Valley as a depressed area overlook the varying makeup of the valley's different counties.

(He pointed out that farmers are getting top prices for potatoes, on which much of the economy of Rio Grande County depends.

Communities like Trinidad and Walsenburg lack the money to prepare reports to qualify for federal assistance, said Massari, and larger communities get in ahead of them and use up all the funds. He said San Luis has no water or sewer system, but hasn't been able to do anything about it.

Lindesmith said lightly populated counties lack community leadership and resources to help combat poverty problems. He said Costilla County in south-central Colorado, as an example, probably won't "pull itself up by the bootstraps."

He said Boulder County is richer, but has "far more people in the poverty bracket than Costilla." It has leadership, he said, and a better chance to succeed.

Massari, in an interview, said that when Colordo delegations go outside the state to seek industry, they talk about the Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo areas, but not about southern Colorado.

He said the entire area is depressed, from Pueblo south, and west to the Utah border.

Massari said the area's people migrate to the cities to the north, fail to find work because they lack skills, and get in trouble.

"Every time I pick up a Denver, Colorado Springs or Pueblo paper I see where one of them is in jail for burglary," he said.

He said southern Colorado has magnificent mountain scenery, but lacks the road to provide access. He said the State Highway Department has been asked numerous times to help complete the Whiskey Creek route.

Senate Demos Reflect Gains Of Election

By JERRY T. BAULCH

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Democrats gave each of their six freshmen a choice committee seat Friday, changed the size of 10 committees, and increased the party's ratio on them to reflect the November election gains.

There was considerable shuffling among the veteran senators along seniority lines, with choice new assignments going to Sens. Joseph S. Clark of Pennsylvania and Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island on foreign relations and Sen. Ralph W. Yarborough of Texas on appropriations.

After the Democrats completed their overhaul, their leader, Mike Mansfield of Montana, won formal Senate approval of the decisions. He said the new senators seemed reasonably satisfied.

Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois said the Democrats had been fair in changing the size of the committees even though there had been "a little give and take." He said GOP assignments would be completed soon.

Each of the six freshmen Democrats was given a choice assignment before any other Democrat could have two major committees. This was in line with a rule instituted in 1953 by President Johnson when he was Senate Democratic leader.

Sen. Robert F. Kennedy of New York got the place he requested on the Labor Committee. His brother, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, is a member of that group and another brother, the late President John F. Kennedy, once served there.

Robert F. also was assigned to government operations, for which he once was a subcommittee counsel, and to the District of Columbia Committee, a job he requested.

The Democratic Steering Committee assigned Sen. Joseph D. Tydings of Maryland to aeronautical and space sciences, judiciary and District of Columbia.

Sen. Ross Bass of Tennessee went to agriculture and commerce.

Sen. Joseph M. Montoya of New Mexico was assigned agriculture, public works and small business.

Sen. Walter F. Mondale of Minnesota drew aeronautical and space sciences and banking and currency.

Doctors quit smoking

CHICAGO—According to a University of Chicago National Opinion Research Center survey, 52% of American doctors do not smoke. Many quit recently due, according to the Anti-Tobacco Center of America, to the conclusive evidence linking cigarettes and lung cancer.

Many doctors gave up smoking without use of will power thanks to a new tablet which helps to progressively eliminate the need for nicotine and, as a result, the desire to smoke. Thanks to this tablet, 88,648 heavy smokers have already stopped smoking.

Smokers interested in receiving information (free) about this new tablet are invited to contact directly the Anti-Tobacco Center of America, Dept. 720-C-1, 366 Fifth Avenue, New York 1, New York.

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, M.D., Ph.D.

Donna and her girls' club wonder if complete nudity on the beaches would increase sexual immorality. Scrapbook this case, for the majority of Americans don't understand the basic secret of woman's chief sexual appeal to men. And send for the sex booklet below!

CASE U-480: Donna B., aged 18, is a college coed.

Dr. Crane," she began, our girls' club is debating the topic of whether it is immoral to go swimming in the nude.

You will recall the protests made during the summer about the new one-piece bathing suits for women.

They simply had a couple of straps that went from the trunks to tie around your neck.

Do you think such absence of clothing increases immorality?

And what would be the effect of total nudity on the beaches? I mean from the psychological angle, for the police obviously must arrest such persons nowadays."

Actually total nudity, as evidenced at Nudist Camps, does NOT promote immorality

On the contrary, it repulses sexuality among human beings.

For what stimulates the human male is not the naked body of the female but just the partially undressed figure!

At burlesque shows, for example, where middle-aged men sit down front, applauding the girls and urging them to take off one piece of clothing after another, it is the act of disrobing that excites their passion; not the naked figure at the conclusion of such strip - tease antics

Perhaps the majority of human beings have thus missed the point about the constant clamor for removing clothes.

Nakedness would actually rebuff sexuality instead of inciting it, even if both sexes cavorted entirely nude on the beaches!

And to show you by a quick example why this is true, just observe animals below man.

They are NOT sexy and salacious. Even if they could read, you would not see monkeys or chimpanzees furtively poring over pornographic literature.

Nor do horses, cows, hogs or sheep, and even domesticated dogs and cats, show any concern over the relatively naked bodies of the females of their species.

There would thus be little likelihood of reproduction among all creatures below mankind if God hadn't added a stimulating olfactory scent to offset the lack of anatomical appeal.

Animals thus mate due chiefly to smell, not sight.

And human beings would likewise be repelled by the flabby breasts and fat tummies and "waddling Walrus" torsos of females, if women frequented our beaches in the nude.

Even the slender teen-age girls with good figures will lose much of their seductive allure as soon as they shed ALL their clothing!

For it is the presence of just a little clothing that excites the male.

It is thus his ANTICIPATION of seeing the nude figure and not the naked body itself that is stimulating.

So total nudity would soon repulse sexual excitement and drive women back into a least partially garbed figures to generate man's interest.

Send for my booklet "Sex Problems of Young People," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 20 cents and get the full facts.

Hunting Etiquette Urged by Farmers

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — More and more farmers are posting their land with "no hunting" signs annually because of the hunters' ignorance of farm problems and their refusal to respect them, rather than poor sportsmanship or malicious mischief, according to an article in the Dairymen's League News.

The farmers' chief complaints are that gates are left sprung, and animals are scared by the hunters' dogs.

Hunting etiquette, the article says, should require the visiting hunter to ask permission of the farmer; to park his vehicle near the farm buildings, where it won't require moving and where the farmer can, if necessary, note the license number; to leave gates as he find them, whether open or closed; to keep dogs out of pasture areas; to avoid any fields as requested by the farmer.

The article gives farmers one tip in analyzing a hunter: "How does he carry his shotgun or rifle. If the muzzle is always pointed down with the breach broken, it is a pretty safe bet he'll take as much precaution with your property as he does with the safety of others around him."

Half the population of the country will be 25 years of age or under within two years, according to Census Bureau forecasts.

Quadruplets Reported Born in Wisconsin

KENOSHA, Wis., (AP) — A 23-year-old Kenosha woman gave birth to quadruplets — two boys and two girls — at Kenosha Memorial Hospital Monday night. A hospital spokesman said all were in good condition.

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robin F. Graf, have three other children, a 3-year-old son and a set of twins, boy and girl, who will be a year old Jan. 16.

Graf, 24, is employed by a roofing firm at Waukegan, Ill.

The hospital said the first baby was born at 7:34 p.m. and the fourth at 7:43. The infants weighted 4 pounds 2½ ounces; 3 pounds 8 ounces; 4 pounds 5 ounces; and 3 pounds 12½ ounces. The children were placed in incubators.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Graf come from families where there have been multiple births.

SHUBERT'S BIGGEST HIT

NEW YORK (AP) — To handle avalanching mail orders, a record crew of 14 clerks has been put on at the Imperial Theater, home base for hit musical "Fiddler on the Roof."

A spokeman for the Shubert Theater chain, which operates the house, reports that the show is proving to be the biggest draw since the establishment of the chain 50 years ago. With 52,063 postal orders received during the first month of its run, tickets for "Fiddler" are now being sold through Jan. 1, 1966.

Spinster Invested In Securities, Too

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Miss Rose Williams, 82, spent her life dusting and sweeping other women's homes so, her friends believed, she could indulge a solitary passion for wearing red — red dresses, red hats, red shoes, red nightclothes.

County officials have discovered that the tiny spinster made a few other investments — in securities.

Miss Williams died Dec. 30.

The Public Administrator's office reported Monday that $130,000 in securities was found in her safety deposit box.

"And there may be a lot more in other banks," said an official.

REDUCTIONS WARNED

DENVER (UPI)—A warning that federal resource and conservation programs might be cut was sounded to Colorado agriculturists by Gordon K. Zimmerman, executive secretary of the National Association of Soil and Water Conservation Districts. Zimmerman said there were indications that President Johnson's budget would recommend less funds for most agencies and programs of the Agriculture Department. Resource and conservation programs affecting private lands might "be caught in a meat-ax," he warned.

Senate Demos Reflect Gains Of Election

By JERRY T. BAULCH

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Democrats gave each of their six freshmen a choice committee seat Friday, changed the size of 10 committees, and increased the party's ratio on them to reflect the November election gains.

There was considerable shuffling among the veteran senators along seniority lines, with choice new assignments going to Sens. Joseph S. Clark of Pennsylvania and Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island on foreign relations and Sen. Ralph W. Yarborough of Texas on appropriations.

After the Democrats completed their overhaul, their leader, Mike Mansfield of Montana, won formal Senate approval of the decisions. He said the new senators seemed reasonably satisfied.

Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois said the Democrats had been fair in changing the size of the committees even though there had been "a little give and take." He said GOP assignments would be completed soon.

Each of the six freshmen Democrats was given a choice assignment before any other Democrat could have two major committees. This was in line with a rule instituted in 1953 by President Johnson when he was Senate Democratic leader.

Sen. Robert F. Kennedy of New York got the place he requested on the Labor Committee. His brother, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts, is a member of that group and another brother, the late President John F. Kennedy, once served there.

Robert F. also was assigned to government operations, for which he once was a subcommittee counsel, and to the District of Columbia Committee, a job he requested.

The Democratic Steering Committee assigned Sen. Joseph D. Tydings of Maryland to aeronautical and space sciences, judiciary and District of Columbia.

Sen. Ross Bass of Tennessee went to agriculture and commerce.

Sen. Joseph M. Montoya of New Mexico was assigned agriculture, public works and small business.

Sen. Walter F. Mondale of Minnesota drew aeronautical and space sciences and banking and currency.

Doctors quit smoking

CHICAGO—According to a University of Chicago National Opinion Research Center survey, 52% of American doctors do not smoke. Many quit recently due, according to the Anti-Tobacco Center of America, to the conclusive evidence linking cigarettes and lung cancer.

Many doctors gave up smoking without use of will power thanks to a new tablet which helps to progressively eliminate the need for nicotine and, as a result, the desire to smoke. Thanks to this tablet, 88,648 heavy smokers have already stopped smoking.

Smokers interested in receiving information (free) about this new tablet are invited to contact directly the Anti-Tobacco Center of America, Dept. 720-C-1, 366 Fifth Avenue, New York 1, New York.

It is sufficient to send your name and address. Just a postcard will do. adv.

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, M.D., Ph.D.

Donna and her girls' club wonder if complete nudity on the beaches would increase sexual immorality. Scrapbook this case, for the majority of Americans don't understand the basic secret of woman's chief sexual appeal to men. And send for the sex booklet below!

CASE U-480: Donna B., aged 18, is a college coed.

Dr. Crane," she began, our girls' club is debating the topic of whether it is immoral to go swimming in the nude.

You will recall the protests made during the summer about the new one-piece bathing suits for women.

They simply had a couple of straps that went from the trunks to tie around your neck.

Do you think such absence of clothing increases immorality?

And what would be the effect of total nudity on the beaches? I mean from the psychological angle, for the police obviously must arrest such persons nowadays."

Actually total nudity, as evidenced at Nudist Camps, does NOT promote immorality

On the contrary, it repulses sexuality among human beings.

For what stimulates the human male is not the naked body of the female but just the partially undressed figure!

At burlesque shows, for example, where middle-aged men sit down front, applauding the girls and urging them to take off one piece of clothing after another, it is the act of disrobing that excites their passion; not the naked figure at the conclusion of such strip - tease antics

Perhaps the majority of human beings have thus missed the point about the constant clamor for removing clothes.

Nakedness would actually rebuff sexuality instead of inciting it, even if both sexes cavorted entirely nude on the beaches!

And to show you by a quick example why this is true, just observe animals below man.

They are NOT sexy and salacious. Even if they could read, you would not see monkeys or chimpanzees furtively poring over pornographic literature.

Nor do horses, cows, hogs or sheep, and even domesticated dogs and cats, show any concern over the relatively naked bodies of the females of their species.

There would thus be little likelihood of reproduction among all creatures below mankind if God hadn't added a stimulating olfactory scent to offset the lack of anatomical appeal.

Animals thus mate due chiefly to smell, not sight.

And human beings would likewise be repelled by the flabby breasts and fat tummies and "waddling Walrus" torsos of females, if women frequented our beaches in the nude.

Even the slender teen-age girls with good figures will lose much of their seductive allure as soon as they shed ALL their clothing!

For it is the presence of just a little clothing that excites the male.

It is thus his ANTICIPATION of seeing the nude figure and not the naked body itself that is stimulating.

So total nudity would soon repulse sexual excitement and drive women back into a least partially garbed figures to generate man's interest.

Send for my booklet "Sex Problems of Young People," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 20 cents and get the full facts.

Hunting Etiquette Urged by Farmers

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — More and more farmers are posting their land with "no hunting" signs annually because of the hunters' ignorance of farm problems and their refusal to respect them, rather than poor sportsmanship or malicious mischief, according to an article in the Dairymen's League News.

The farmers' chief complaints are that gates are left sprung, and animals are scared by the hunters' dogs.

Hunting etiquette, the article says, should require the visiting hunter to ask permission of the farmer; to park his vehicle near the farm buildings, where it won't require moving and where the farmer can, if necessary, note the license number; to leave gates as he find them, whether open or closed; to keep dogs out of pasture areas; to avoid any fields as requested by the farmer.

The article gives farmers one tip in analyzing a hunter: "How does he carry his shotgun or rifle. If the muzzle is always pointed down with the breach broken, it is a pretty safe bet he'll take as much precaution with your property as he does with the safety of others around him."

Half the population of the country will be 25 years of age or under within two years, according to Census Bureau forecasts.

Quadruplets Reported Born in Wisconsin

KENOSHA, Wis., (AP) — A 23-year-old Kenosha woman gave birth to quadruplets — two boys and two girls — at Kenosha Memorial Hospital Monday night. A hospital spokesman said all were in good condition.

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robin F. Graf, have three other children, a 3-year-old son and a set of twins, boy and girl, who will be a year old Jan. 16.

Graf, 24, is employed by a roofing firm at Waukegan, Ill.

The hospital said the first baby was born at 7:34 p.m. and the fourth at 7:43. The infants weighted 4 pounds 2½ ounces; 3 pounds 8 ounces; 4 pounds 5 ounces; and 3 pounds 12½ ounces. The children were placed in incubators.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Graf come from families where there have been multiple births.

SHUBERT'S BIGGEST HIT

NEW YORK (AP) — To handle avalanching mail orders, a record crew of 14 clerks has been put on at the Imperial Theater, home base for hit musical "Fiddler on the Roof."

A spokeman for the Shubert Theater chain, which operates the house, reports that the show is proving to be the biggest draw since the establishment of the chain 50 years ago. With 52,063 postal orders received during the first month of its run, tickets for "Fiddler" are now being sold through Jan. 1, 1966.

Spinster Invested In Securities, Too

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Miss Rose Williams, 82, spent her life dusting and sweeping other women's homes so, her friends believed, she could indulge a solitary passion for wearing red — red dresses, red hats, red shoes, red nightclothes.

County officials have discovered that the tiny spinster made a few other investments — in securities.

Miss Williams died Dec. 30.

The Public Administrator's office reported Monday that $130,000 in securities was found in her safety deposit box.

"And there may be a lot more in other banks," said an official.

REDUCTIONS WARNED

DENVER (UPI)—A warning that federal resource and conservation programs might be cut was sounded to Colorado agriculturists by Gordon K. Zimmerman, executive secretary of the National Association of Soil and Water Conservation Districts. Zimmerman said there were indications that President Johnson's budget would recommend less funds for most agencies and programs of the Agriculture Department. Resource and conservation programs affecting private lands might "be caught in a meat-ax," he warned.

Thant Attempts To Break U.S., Soviet Deadlock

By TOM HOGE

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Secretary-General U Thant launched a final effort today to break the U.S.-Soviet deadlock over U.N. peacekeeping dues before the General Assembly returns to work Monday.

Delegates saw little chance of avoiding a showdown which could result in loss of assembly voting rights for the Soviet Union, France and 16 other nations. They are more than two years behind on their U.N. assessments as a result of their refusal to pay peacekeeping costs.

A U.N. spokesman said Thant has turned over to "interested parties" in the dispute a plan the 59-nation Asian-African group has submitted as a basis for solving the financial crisis which has brought the United Nations close to bankruptcy.

The plan calls for voluntary contributions to pay off the peacekeeping deficit of nearly $86 million and suspends Article 19 of the U.N. Charter. The article says any member who is two years behind in its payments shall lose its vote in the assembly.

The Soviet Union has said it would go along with such a plan provided its contribution would not be earmarked for peacekeeping and Moscow would not be required to state in advance how much it was contributing or when.

The United States was reported still determined to invoke the voting penalty unless the Russians gave more than a vague assurance that they would pay some undisclosed amount. The American delegation was reported surprised that Thant was still trying to keep the Asian-African plan alive.

Most delegates feel a showdown is inevitable when the assembly meets Jan. 18 in view of the adamant U.S. stand and the Soviet refusal to make a solid financial commitment.

The United States agreed to a proposal by Thant to operate under a no-vote truce for the three weeks between the assembly opening Dec. 1 and the Christmas recess since that period was mostly devoted to general policy speeches.

Such a procedure would be virtually impossible after the main committees are organized if the assembly hopes to deal with any of its agenda.

The question is whether the United States can muster enough support to invoke Article 19 when the session resumes Monday.

It was believed that the United States had the votes to back up its stand when the assembly opened last month. But a number of neutrals and even some friends of the West are said to have had second thoughts about forcing a move that might prompt the Soviets to carry out their threat to quit the United Nations if deprived of voting rights.

Nationalist China also faced a challenge to its voting rights as a dues delinquent but gave Thant a check for $4,990,500 Monday. The Chinese mission said $4 million was earmarked for the regular U.N. budget. The remainder was sufficient to get the Nationalists off the peacekeeping arrears list.

Disaster Averted As Girl Reports Broken Rail

STILLWELL, Ind. (AP) — A girl who averted a possible train wreck by promptly reporting a broken rail on the Grand Trunk Western Railroad says, "I knew I should tell somebody."

Colleen Gourley, 11, who was honored by the railroad Monday, said: "I'd seen pictures and read in the newspaper about train wrecks by broken tracks."

Colleen had told her mother, Mrs. Clifford Gourley, about the broken rail last Nov. 14. She was crossing the tracks intersecting the driveway at the Gourley farm home, just outside Stillwell, en route to the post office. She noticed that a six-inch length of rail on the tracks had been split off.

Mrs. Gourley called railroad officials, who immediately switched trains to other tracks and sent out a crew to repair the rail split, apparently caused by weather and wear.

The Chicago-Montreal express passenger trains usually go speeding through Stillwell, a village of 280 in northwestern Indiana.

Monday the express slowed to a halt, whistle shrieking, with Colleen, the railroad's heroine of the day, waving out a window of the diesel engine.

She had been a guest in the locomotive cab for the 20-mile ride from Valparaiso, Ind., to her home town. Engineer Howard C. Carmer let her blow the whistle along the way.

When the express stopped at Stillwell, her sixth-grade classmates and members of her Girl Scout troop applauded as she received a $25 U.S. savings bond from J. C. McDonald, a track supervisor.

With the bond was a letter from the railroad's vice president, Harry A. Sanders.

"In this day and age when we hear so much about people refusing to take an interest in the troubles of others, it is refreshing to learn of your actions," the letter read.

Sukarno May Be Approaching Brink of War

By WILLIAM L. RYAN

Indonesia's President Sukarno may be preparing for strong new thrusts against neighboring Malaysia, intended to stop short of provoking general war in Southeast Asia. He could edge perilously close to the brink.

Indonesia's departure from the United Nations and concomitant pronouncements from Jakarta and Peking sent shudders through the world's chancelleries. The danger of broad conflict in Southeast Asia seems to be growing.

Malaysia's Foreign Ministry speculates that the "crush Malaysia" venture has been planned jointly by Indonesia and Red China. Peking's foreign minister, Chen Yi, visited Jakarta last August. Sukarno visited China in November.

The plan may be to create revolutionary chaos in Malaysia without going far enough to provide the country's protectors sufficient provocation for drastic countermeasures against Indonesia. The plan also may be relying on support from many of the huge Chinese minority inside Malaysian territories who can be considered an explosive potential.

Four months ago, Australia issued a warning that "unprovoked aggression in the territories of Malaysia must be countered and will be countered." Foreign Minister Paul Hasluck said Australia has clear commitments regarding the defense of Malaysia in partnership with Britain. Australia regards Sukarno with suspicion and annoyance.

Indonesia's regular army may now be as large as 400,000, equipped with Soviet weapons. In contesting with China for Indonesian support of Soviet aims in Asia, the Russians were reported to have given Indonesia an additional $150 million worth of arms in 1964. In all, building up Indonesia over the years cost the U.S.S.R. well over a billion dollars.

British and Commonwealth forces which can be considered committed to Malaysias defense now probably total about 50,000, plus formidable naval and air support. Malaysia's own regular armed forces total less than 20,000, plus 35,000 in paramilitary forces guarding internal security.

Evidently getting ready for a critical situation, Peking propaganda accuses the United States and Britain of plotting measures against Indonesia. The Peking People's Daily said a few days ago that "should U.S. and British imperialism dare to launch armed provocations against Indonesia, they will not only meet with strong rebuffs by the Indonesian people, but will be firmly opposed by other Asian peoples."

This was short of a pledge of Chinese participation in a showdown, but it did indicate realization that increased Indonesian thrusts against Malaysia could bring strong countermeasures.

Disaster Averted As Girl Reports Broken Rail

STILLWELL, Ind. (AP) — A girl who averted a possible train wreck by promptly reporting a broken rail on the Grand Trunk Western Railroad says, "I knew I should tell somebody."

Colleen Gourley, 11, who was honored by the railroad Monday, said: "I'd seen pictures and read in the newspaper about train wrecks by broken tracks."

Colleen had told her mother, Mrs. Clifford Gourley, about the broken rail last Nov. 14. She was crossing the tracks intersecting the driveway at the Gourley farm home, just outside Stillwell, en route to the post office. She noticed that a six-inch length of rail on the tracks had been split off.

Mrs. Gourley called railroad officials, who immediately switched trains to other tracks and sent out a crew to repair the rail split, apparently caused by weather and wear.

The Chicago-Montreal express passenger trains usually go speeding through Stillwell, a village of 280 in northwestern Indiana.

Monday the express slowed to a halt, whistle shrieking, with Colleen, the railroad's heroine of the day, waving out a window of the diesel engine.

She had been a guest in the locomotive cab for the 20-mile ride from Valparaiso, Ind., to her home town. Engineer Howard C. Carmer let her blow the whistle along the way.

When the express stopped at Stillwell, her sixth-grade classmates and members of her Girl Scout troop applauded as she received a $25 U.S. savings bond from J. C. McDonald, a track supervisor.

With the bond was a letter from the railroad's vice president, Harry A. Sanders.

"In this day and age when we hear so much about people refusing to take an interest in the troubles of others, it is refreshing to learn of your actions," the letter read.

Museum Gets $2,000 Grant In Canon City

A bequest of $2,000 by Mrs. Mary Olive Egbers, a pioneer resident of Canon City who died last May 3 at the age of 88, was presented to the Canon City Museum board Friday afternoon.

Ralph Callaghan, Canon City, executor of Mrs. Egbers' estate, made the presentation at the board's meeting in the museum, which is located on the second floor of the municipal building.

Mrs. Archie Reeves, chairman of the board, accepted the $2,000 check. She said the money would be used for building or other facility improvements.

The bequest was believed to be one of the largest single contributions to the museum.

During her life, Mrs. Egbers and her husband, the late Lloyd Egbers, who with Alf Mitchell established the Palace Drug Store in Canon City, had an active interest in the museum, and its growth. They donated many items to the museum, probably almost as many as Dall DeWeese, famed Canon City sportsman, who turned over many of his trophies.

Mrs. Egbers also served as secretary o fthe local historian society, and served on the museum board of directors.

The museum board is made up of Mrs. Archie Reeves, chairman; John Mains, vice chairman; Glen Custer, secretary; A. V. Wilson; Mrs. Eda Calhoun; Paul Short; Mrs. Adella Archer; Miss Florence Evans; and Marvin Randleman.

A 1960 model car, valued at $800, was stolen from a used car lot over the weekend, police reported.

Donald L. Lane, owner of the Lane Car Lot, 30 W. Colorado Ave., told police he was going to purchase the car from Phil Long Ford, but hadn't closed the deal yet. He said the car was parked at his lot over the weekend, that the doors of the car couldn't be locked, and that there were no keys in the car.

According to Lane, the car was stolen between 7:30 p.m. Saturday and 9 a.m. Monday.

City Adds 129 Miles Of Streets

Colorado Springs' officials report that the city added approximately 129 miles to its street system in the past five years.

The city had 236.5 miles of streets in January 1960 and an unofficial total of 365 miles to start 1965.

The street system increased from the 1960 figure to 329.6 miles in January 1965.

An additional 36 miles of streets were added in 1964 through annexations to bring the total up to 365 miles.

The January 1964 total included 89.1 miles of arterial streets and 240.5 miles of local service streets.

Presently the arterial street total is 101.1 miles and there are 264.5 miles of local service streets.

The City Planning Department is currently computing annexations to arrive at an official street mileage figure, but they say the 365 mile total is close to being correct.

Freedom School 1965 Bulletin Now in Mail

The Freedom School bulletin for 1965 is in the mail to persons who have expressed an interest in the school, it was announced today.

The schedule of classes includes 9 one-week executive sessions, 6 two-week comprehensive courses, a two-week graduate forum and a week-long workshop.

The executive sessions are reserved for executive personnel in business and industry or for professional persons. The comprehensive courses are open to persons 16 years of age and over. The graduate forum and the workshop are open to graduates of either the comprehensive or the executive sessions.

The first session begins April 18. Instead of closing in September, which has been the practice, the school will continue to offer at least one session per month throughout the winter.

"A number of the sessions already are fully enrolled," Miss Ruth Dazey, Freedom School registrar, said. "This is very unusual. Ordinarily we have only a handful enrolled by mid-January and most of those are seeking scholarships.

"The recent acceptance of the philosophy of individual freedom and the concept of the right of the individual to own and manage his own property is higher than ever before."

Persons interested in obtaining a copy of the new bulletin may write to The Freedom School, Box 165, Colorado Springs, Colo.

William J. Donnelly, Rt. 1, Peyton, told Deputy Sheriff Bob Newman that his beagle had been killed with poison.

According to the veterinarian there was no poison in the animal's stomach but it was badly inflamed and probably a poison called 1080 which is used by hunters had been employed.

The second incident was reported by a neighbor of Donnelly's, Nick Manyik, Rt. 1, Peyton.

His dog was found under similar circumstances to the Donnelly's pet.

Brain Research Topic At Symposium Monday

Three prominent authorities on brain research, Monday, assumed the speaker's podium at Colorado College to discuss the "Frontiers of Brain Research."

The three, Dr. Mary Brazier, professor-in-residence at the University of California at Los Angeles; Dr. Robert B. Livingston, associate division chief for program development, National Institutes of Health and Dr. Walter A. Rosenblith, professor of communications at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, were speaking at the annual week-long symposium at the college, this year "The New Science."

Dr. Brazier discussed the background of models of the brain which have been suggested by scientists from John Locke to modern physiologists.

"The first experiments began in the 17th Century," Dr. Brazier said. "John Locke, continuing with some ideas from Descarte, insisted all knowledge came from sensory observations, sensations and reflection of those sensations. He pictured the brain of a new born child as a yet empty cabinet. He also tried to learn about the relationship of the brain and the soul or, if possible to find out if they were one.

"The next serious investigator was a man of the church. Reading Locke's finding provoked him to create his own model. He believed the mind was made up, not only of sensations, but also of considering and reasoning. Also, he thought pleasure and pain were activities of the soul.

"The next researcher who delved into the problem, De Tracey, changed his model to that of a brain and nerves. He believed the nerves could vibrate and send messages by their own movements. He theorized that the same nerve reacted differently to each stimulus—for instance, the disturbance it carried varied with the color blue, a burn or a cut, etc.

"Today modern physiologists have the advantage of experimenting with electrodes. Yet the science of brain research still is in the frontier stage, with much work and study yet to be done."

Dr. Livingston began his discussion by suggesting that one of the prime problems in research today is correctly interpreting events in relation to ourselves.

"Knowledge," Dr. Livingston said, "if for the sake of actions and actions are for the sake of values.

"Knowledge is gathered and stored in the brain through the activities of our sense organs. Action is all that we can do and all that we do do. Values are the internal satisfaction—pleasure and pain—and direct our actions toward more worthy things as our knowledge increases.

"Yet, all experiences are considered in the light of our own past experience and our expectations or what our purposes are. There is a whole new line of thinking and experimentation coming in this entire field."

Dr. Rosenblith explained that the physical structure of the brain and its operation is very difficult to describe.

"For one thing," Dr. Rosenblith said, "the brain is multi-dimensional. I started out as a physicist, became an electrical engineer and later moved into biophysics. Yet all of these are involved in this question of the brain.

"There is no single way of examining the brain. It is a multi-component structure with a vast number of neurons and even more subsystems. Secondly, it has capacity for multi-input and multi - output functions, regulating the temperature of the body, heartbeats, etc. Thirdly, obviously it was not intended as a single-purpose device. Machines deal with energy and matter and usually are designed for one particular job. Now there are computers which can handle several different functions. But the brain, its many functions and capacities, remains difficult for us to communicate about. We cannot explain how it is able to reorganize itself, yet remain fundamentally the same.

"So brain science remains one of the most fascinating frontiers that almost anyone can have a piece of, from the mathematician to the engineer to the psychologist."

Assault Charge Filed Against Man in Jail

Richard M. Gustin who is being held in city jail on a drunk charge had a complaint alleging assault and battery signed against him Monday, the sheriff's office reported.

Gustin, 31, 2354 E. Platte Ave., went to the home of Eva Mae Bailey and her mother, 3006 Texas St., Deputy Sheriff Charles Dietsche said. According to the officer Gustin has been out of work and the Baileys had been trying to help him.

Dietsche said Gustin was drunk when he went to the Bailey residence and after beating up Miss Bailey by beating her with his fists and kicking her about the body, he smashed the television set.

A complaint was then signed against him and he will be transferred to county jail after the city case has been disposed with.

Woman Reports Firearms Taken From Her Home

Two cases of theft were reported to the sheriff's office Monday.

Mrs. Barbar Slagle, 2002 Janitell Rd., told Deputy Sheriff Dave Sturgeon that a single shot pistol and a 6.5 rifle had been stolen from her home.

The guns were found missing Saturday and there were no signs of forced entry.

The second theft happened at the home of Mrs. D. Nixon, 415 S. 11th St. where a brown gabardine coat worth $20 was stolen while the family was absent for two weeks.

Again there was no indication of the house being broken into.

JOHN M. KING

The state will see a dramatic Republican resurgence in 1966, a tp GOP figure in the state predicted.

He was John M. King, Englewood, who is the finance chairman of the GOP party in Arapahoe County, state finance chairman in Colorado and at this time acting national finance chairman in his capacity as vice chairman, as the national chairman resigned a few weeks ago.

King was a strong supporter of Arizona Sen. Barry M. Goldwater during the hot primary and pre-convention activities last year, and lost a race for Colorado in a hard contest at national committeeman from Colorado in a hard contest at the state convention in Pueblo in June.

"Most everyone, and this includes the Democrats, wants a two party system. We all believe that is good. The Republicans will have a phenomenal comeback in the next election—but not just because people believe in a two-party system," King said.

He explained that the Republican party is too well organized and too large to allow itself to be torn up and thrown away as some people have predicted will happen.

"No one will allow the leadership to carry the party down the road to destruction," King stated. "We've got too many dedicated men in the party for that to happen," he explained.

"No one wants a splinter party's he continued, "and we do not want division. All of this will work for us in the next election, giving us more strength," King stated.

While seeking a good year for the GOP in 1966, King did not wish to predict 1968, another presidential year.

However, on the national scene, he did point out that he believes two senators are likely to become strong national figures.

"I can see a great future for Sen. Peter Dominick (Colorado), and Sen George Murphy (California)," he said. Both men are Republicans, Dominick now beginning the third year of a three-year term, and Murphy beginning his first elected term.

He also expects Gov. William Scranton of Pennsylvania to be an important figure in the 1968 year. "Also, you just can't rule out anyone named Rockefeller," he said, referring to New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, who made an unsuccessful run for the GOP presidential nomination last year.

King said that while Scranton will not be in office as governor in 1968, because he can not succeed himself, he will nonetheless find a national platform that will allow him to be heard.

Looking toward the meeting in Chicago later this month of the Republican National Committee, King said.

—"A 'get anyone program' will not succeed, whether it is get Burch or get Goldwater." Palmer Burch, current national chairman was appointed to the job by Goldwater, and some members of the Republican Party have demanded that he resign, which Burch has refused to do.

—"The Republican party is in no position to exclude anyone. The moderates say that Goldwater excluded them, so it would seem that since they claim to have been excluded and are against exclusion, that they can not logically exclude Goldwater."

—"Ultimately we will all wind up in one party, for if we don't we might as well forget it."

Looking back at the election, King said that the party suffered a tragedy. "Right here in this congressional district what happaned to Rep. Chenoweth (J. Edgar Chenoweth, 11-time U. S. representative who lost) was a tragedy, a real tragedy."

King conceded there has been criticism. "There has been criticism of the mechanics of planning the national campaign. There was criticism of issue planning, and there was criticism o fissue presentation on the grounds that it wasn't planned," he explained.

On one charge often made by Goldwater supporters, King said, "I think the Goldwater campaign fared as well in the press in Colorado as did the Johnson (Pres. Lyndon B. Johnson, who won) campaign," he said.

King pointed out that the GOP came through the campaign solvent, and that is a big help toward the next election. "At the end of the Nixon (Richard M. Nixon, who lost in 1960) campaign we were $1.5 million in the red. That is not so this year, we have enough money to carry us through to spring," he said.

Residents Plan Objection to Zoning Request

Residents of the Indian Hills subdivisions plan to object to a mobile home park zoning request at Thursday's meeting of the City Planning Commission.

The meeting will begin at 3 p.m. in City Hall.

The zoning change request was for 20 acres southwest of King Street and 19th Street which is presently zoned R-2 single-family residential and C-4A business.

Petition carriers opposed to the zoning change say all adjacent property owners in Indian Heights Additions 1 and 2 have signed petitions opposing the mobile homes park.

Last Sunday several property owners met in the home of William A. Bartlett, 1816 Pejn Ave. Several objections to the zone change were discussed at that time. A committee of three was appointed to present arguments at the CPC meeting.

Benefit Show Brings 'Profit'

But with the benevolence of the true professional, Bruce decided it wasn't fair to hog all the profits for himself. So he and Douglas decided to stage a benefit.

Advertising that the proceeds from the show would be given to the childern's ward at Penrose Hospital, the boys gathered an audience of 72 into the living-room of Bruce's parents' home last Saturday, and then they gave them the show of their lives.

Everybody clapped and cheered and munched on popcorn and drank punch provided by Bruce's dad, Harold Tenembaum.

The proceeds, which amounted to $3.60 were given to Penrose Hospital, just as they said.

When asked of the possibility of a repeat performance, Harold Tenenbaum said he hoped there wouldn't be one, at least not for a while.

He's very proud of the boys, he said, but the punch and popcorn cost him over $10.

Oh well, that's show biz.

Museum Gets $2,000 Grant In Canon City

A bequest of $2,000 by Mrs. Mary Olive Egbers, a pioneer resident of Canon City who died last May 3 at the age of 88, was presented to the Canon City Museum board Friday afternoon.

Ralph Callaghan, Canon City, executor of Mrs. Egbers' estate, made the presentation at the board's meeting in the museum, which is located on the second floor of the municipal building.

Mrs. Archie Reeves, chairman of the board, accepted the $2,000 check. She said the money would be used for building or other facility improvements.

The bequest was believed to be one of the largest single contributions to the museum.

During her life, Mrs. Egbers and her husband, the late Lloyd Egbers, who with Alf Mitchell established the Palace Drug Store in Canon City, had an active interest in the museum, and its growth. They donated many items to the museum, probably almost as many as Dall DeWeese, famed Canon City sportsman, who turned over many of his trophies.

Mrs. Egbers also served as secretary o fthe local historian society, and served on the museum board of directors.

The museum board is made up of Mrs. Archie Reeves, chairman; John Mains, vice chairman; Glen Custer, secretary; A. V. Wilson; Mrs. Eda Calhoun; Paul Short; Mrs. Adella Archer; Miss Florence Evans; and Marvin Randleman.

City Adds 129 Miles Of Streets

Colorado Springs' officials report that the city added approximately 129 miles to its street system in the past five years.

The city had 236.5 miles of streets in January 1960 and an unofficial total of 365 miles to start 1965.

The street system increased from the 1960 figure to 329.6 miles in January 1965.

An additional 36 miles of streets were added in 1964 through annexations to bring the total up to 365 miles.

The January 1964 total included 89.1 miles of arterial streets and 240.5 miles of local service streets.

Presently the arterial street total is 101.1 miles and there are 264.5 miles of local service streets.

The City Planning Department is currently computing annexations to arrive at an official street mileage figure, but they say the 365 mile total is close to being correct.

Freedom School 1965 Bulletin Now in Mail

The Freedom School bulletin for 1965 is in the mail to persons who have expressed an interest in the school, it was announced today.

The schedule of classes includes 9 one-week executive sessions, 6 two-week comprehensive courses, a two-week graduate forum and a week-long workshop.

The executive sessions are reserved for executive personnel in business and industry or for professional persons. The comprehensive courses are open to persons 16 years of age and over. The graduate forum and the workshop are open to graduates of either the comprehensive or the executive sessions.

The first session begins April 18. Instead of closing in September, which has been the practice, the school will continue to offer at least one session per month throughout the winter.

"A number of the sessions already are fully enrolled," Miss Ruth Dazey, Freedom School registrar, said. "This is very unusual. Ordinarily we have only a handful enrolled by mid-January and most of those are seeking scholarships.

"The recent acceptance of the philosophy of individual freedom and the concept of the right of the individual to own and manage his own property is higher than ever before."

Persons interested in obtaining a copy of the new bulletin may write to The Freedom School, Box 165, Colorado Springs, Colo.

Brain Research Topic At Symposium Monday

Three prominent authorities on brain research, Monday, assumed the speaker's podium at Colorado College to discuss the "Frontiers of Brain Research."

The three, Dr. Mary Brazier, professor-in-residence at the University of California at Los Angeles; Dr. Robert B. Livingston, associate division chief for program development, National Institutes of Health and Dr. Walter A. Rosenblith, professor of communications at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, were speaking at the annual week-long symposium at the college, this year "The New Science."

Dr. Brazier discussed the background of models of the brain which have been suggested by scientists from John Locke to modern physiologists.

"The first experiments began in the 17th Century," Dr. Brazier said. "John Locke, continuing with some ideas from Descarte, insisted all knowledge came from sensory observations, sensations and reflection of those sensations. He pictured the brain of a new born child as a yet empty cabinet. He also tried to learn about the relationship of the brain and the soul or, if possible to find out if they were one.

"The next serious investigator was a man of the church. Reading Locke's finding provoked him to create his own model. He believed the mind was made up, not only of sensations, but also of considering and reasoning. Also, he thought pleasure and pain were activities of the soul.

"The next researcher who delved into the problem, De Tracey, changed his model to that of a brain and nerves. He believed the nerves could vibrate and send messages by their own movements. He theorized that the same nerve reacted differently to each stimulus—for instance, the disturbance it carried varied with the color blue, a burn or a cut, etc.

"Today modern physiologists have the advantage of experimenting with electrodes. Yet the science of brain research still is in the frontier stage, with much work and study yet to be done."

Dr. Livingston began his discussion by suggesting that one of the prime problems in research today is correctly interpreting events in relation to ourselves.

"Knowledge," Dr. Livingston said, "if for the sake of actions and actions are for the sake of values.

"Knowledge is gathered and stored in the brain through the activities of our sense organs. Action is all that we can do and all that we do do. Values are the internal satisfaction—pleasure and pain—and direct our actions toward more worthy things as our knowledge increases.

"Yet, all experiences are considered in the light of our own past experience and our expectations or what our purposes are. There is a whole new line of thinking and experimentation coming in this entire field."

Dr. Rosenblith explained that the physical structure of the brain and its operation is very difficult to describe.

"For one thing," Dr. Rosenblith said, "the brain is multidimensional. I started out as a physicist, became an electrical engineer and later moved into biophysics. Yet all of these are involved in this question of the brain.

"There is no single way of examining the brain. It is a multi-component structure with a vast number of neurons and even more subsystems. Secondly, it has capacity for multi-input and multi - output functions, regulating the temperature of the body, heartbeats, etc. Thirdly, obviously it was not intended as a single-purpose device. Machines deal with energy and matter and usually are designed for one particular job. Now there are computers which can handle several different functions. But the brain, its many functions and capacities, remains difficult for us to communicate about. We cannot explain how it is able to reorganize itself, yet remain fundamentally the same.

"So brain science remains one of the most fascinating frontiers that almost anyone can have a piece of, from the mathematician to the engineer to the psychologist."

Assault Charge Filed Against Man in Jail

Richard M. Gustin who is being held in city jail on a drunk charge had a complaint alleging assault and battery signed against him Monday, the sheriff's office reported.

Dietsche said Gustin was drunk when he went to the Bailey residence and after beating up Miss Bailey by beating her with his fists and kicking her about the body, he smashed the television set.

A complaint was then signed against him and he will be transferred to county jail after the city case has been disposed with.

JOHN M. KING

The state will see a dramatic Republican resurgence in 1966, a tp GOP figure in the state predicted.

He was John M. King, Englewood, who is the finance chairman of the GOP party in Arapahoe County, state finance chairman in Colorado and at this time acting national finance chairman in his capacity as vice chairman, as the national chairman resigned a few weeks ago.

King was a strong supporter of Arizona Sen. Barry M. Goldwater during the hot primary and pre-convention activities last year, and lost a race for Colorado in a hard contest at national committeeman from Colorado in a hard contest at the state convention in Pueblo in June.

"Most everyone, and this includes the Democrats, wants a two party system. We all believe that is good. The Republicans will have a phenomenal comeback in the next election—but not just because people believe in a two-party system," King said.

He explained that the Republican party is too well organized and too large to allow itself to be torn up and thrown away as some people have predicted will happen.

"No one will allow the leadership to carry the party down the road to destruction," King stated. "We've got too many dedicated men in the party for that to happen," he explained.

"No one wants a splinter party's he continued, "and we do not want division. All of this will work for us in the next election, giving us more strength," King stated.

While seeking a good year for the GOP in 1966, King did not wish to predict 1968, another presidential year.

However, on the national scene, he did point out that he believes two senators are likely to become strong national figures.

"I can see a great future for Sen. Peter Dominick (Colorado), and Sen George Murphy (California)," he said. Both men are Republicans, Dominick now beginning the third year of a three-year term, and Murphy beginning his first elected term.

He also expects Gov. William Scranton of Pennsylvania to be an important figure in the 1968 year. "Also, you just can't rule out anyone named Rockefeller," he said, referring to New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller, who made an unsuccessful run for the GOP presidential nomination last year.

King said that while Scranton will not be in office as governor in 1968, because he can not succeed himself, he will nonetheless find a national platform that will allow him to be heard.

Looking toward the meeting in Chicago later this month of the Republican National Committee, King said.

—"A 'get anyone program' will not succeed, whether it is get Burch or get Goldwater." Palmer Burch, current national chairman was appointed to the job by Goldwater, and some members of the Republican Party have demanded that he resign, which Burch has refused to do.

—"The Republican party is in no position to exclude anyone. The moderates say that Goldwater excluded them, so it would seem that since they claim to have been excluded and are against exclusion, that they can not logically exclude Goldwater."

—"Ultimately we will all wind up in one party, for if we don't we might as well forget it."

Looking back at the election, King said that the party suffered a tragedy. "Right here in this congressional district what happaned to Rep. Chenoweth (J. Edgar Chenoweth, 11-time U. S. representative who lost) was a tragedy, a real tragedy."

King conceded there has been criticism. "There has been criticism of the mechanics of planning the national campaign. There was criticism of issue planning, and there was criticism o fissue presentation on the grounds that it wasn't planned," he explained.

On one charge often made by Goldwater supporters, King said, "I think the Goldwater campaign fared as well in the press in Colorado as did the Johnson (Pres. Lyndon B. Johnson, who won) campaign." he said.

King pointed out that the GOP came through the campaign solvent, and that is a big help toward the next election. "At the end of the Nixon (Richard M. Nixon, who lost in 1960) campaign we were $1.5 million in the red. That is not so this year, we have enough money to carry us through to spring," he said.

Residents Plan Objection to Zoning Request

Residents of the Indian Hills subdivisions plan to object to a mobile home park zoning request at Thursday's meeting of the City Planning Commission.

The meeting will begin at 3 p.m. in City Hall.

The zoning change request was for 20 acres southwest of King Street and 19th Street which is presently zoned R-2 single-family residential and C-4A business.

Petition carriers opposed to the zoning change say all adjacent property owners in Indian Heights Additions 1 and 2 have signed petitions opposing the mobile homes park.

Last Sunday several property owners met in the home of William A. Bartlett, 1816 Pejn Ave. Several objections to the zone change were discussed at that time. A committee of three was appointed to present arguments at the CPC meeting.

Present at the meeting were: Stanley Cook, Ralph Brockhausen, John Poynor, Garry Gilmore, Harold Groves, Clay Aslin, Richard Scrogging, Dale Hitchcock, Earl Walth, Walter Eisenberg, James C. MacKrell Jr., Lyle Beaudin, Paul Boucher and William A. Bartlett.

The zoning change was requested by Pleasant Valley Land Co.

NCAA Gets Moonlighting Report

Prothro Gets No. 1 Job At UCLA

CHICAGO (AP) — Tommy Prothro, seeking professional opportunity, is leaving Oregon State to take the head football coaching job at UCLA.

"Financially there's no advantage to the move," said the 44-year-old Prothro, who had assisted the late Red Sanders at UCLA before going to Oregon Staate for a successful 10-year tenure.

"But I feel there is professional opportunity at UCLA," he said Monday night.

Prothro, attending the NCAA convention in Chicago, indicated he would like to move his assistants to UCLA where they would probably receive bigger paychecks.

"I'm not sure about my staff at this time but I hope most of my assistants will go with me," he said. "At UCLA we'll have a chance to be closer to the boys because of the population force. I know that entrance requirements will be a limiting factor but that only means we'll get the best boys to choose from for football."

Prothro, a native of Memphis, Tenn., was a star blocking back at Duke University from 1939-1941. Regarded a brilliant football strategist, his Oregon State teams compiled a 63-37-2 record.

"They've been the happiest 10 years of my life," said Prothro, whose Beavers suffered a 34-7 loss to Michigan in this year's Rose Bowl game.

Disregarding rumors that the one-sided loss in the Rose Bowl would cost him a chance to take over at UCLA, replacing Bill Barnes, Prothro said he was not officially contacted for the UCLA job until after his team was swamped by Michigan.

Prothro said his goal at UCLA would be one in which he hopes to install a successful program in addition to simply winning and losing. He also added that the timing of the change wouldn't have too much effect on his ultimate program at UCLA.

Terrors Brace for Clutch Weekend In South Central Basketball Race

By TOM CUSHMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

This is the week when the South Central League finds out whether or not Palmer is for real — and if last week's results are any indication, the lesson may prove painful!

The Terrors, generally overlooked at the southern stops on the SCL trail before the current campaign got underway, issued a brazen warning last Friday by delivering a 70-49 insult to Pueblo South, a team that is accustomed to having its way in conference hardwood activities.

That feat popped open eyes all around the circuit, but the real moment of truth arrives this weekend. First year coach, Roger O'Neill has his club in familiar quarters for a pair of contests with the teams which received early judgment as most likely to succeed.

The first-half comes Friday night when the Terrors host Pueblo Centennial's balanced quintet. The Bulldogs will arrive flush from an earlier success on the Colorado Springs' floor and still boiling over a final-quarter fold before Central that allowed the Wildcats a 58-51 decision in a bitter intra-city struggle in Pueblo last Saturday.

Central's defending champions then arrive here Saturday and, regardless of Friday's outcome, the Terrors will be in a "must-win" role aginst the Wildcats. Jim Ranson's club is loaded with youthful performers & has not settled into a steady pattern of play yet, but it still gained the big win over Centennial last Saturday. If the 'Cats should follow with a triumph over Palmer on the foreign court, the improvement which they can expect as the season progresses will place them in a formidable early position.

As predicted, however, the race has not settled down to those three clubs — not by a long shot. The "mystery team" of the conference, Pueblo East, created a few anxious thoughts on the part of opposition coaches last Friday by crushing Trinidad 85-47 on the Miners' home court. Despite the fact that the Miners' are obviously down this winter, anyone well-acquainted with the South Central League realizes that such an overwhelming triumph in the southern city is almost unprecedented.

Then there is Pueblo South, the coldest Colt quintet within recent memory against Palmer Friday but a much warmer unit in an 83-58 win over Trinidad the following night. There is also Wasson, an erratic five that is deceptively dangerous. The Thunderbirds committed most of the recognized basketball sins in losing to Centennial 58-47 last Friday, but the game was closer than the final score indicates and Wasson cannot be expected to perform that way every weekend.

And then there is Trinidad — and there's little that can be said for the Miners except that East's embarrassingly-easy triumph in Pueblo cannot be interpreted as a precedent for 1965. Trinidad will still play rough as an opponent on its home floor.

Central's important conquest of Centennial was a tribute to the Wildcats' determination to cling tenaciously to the SCL crown. The Bulldogs' balanced team, with seven-foot sophomore Ron Smith delivering serious damage, waltzed away in the first half and still had what could be considered a commaning lead in the slow-paced game entering the final period.

But the Cats finally struggled to the top and once there, they watched the previously poised Centennial floor game disintegrate. The Bulldogs threw the ball away five straight times and that was enough to give the Wildcats the opportunity for which they had been waiting. Sophomore Terry Snider led the winners with 15 points while Bud Temple of Centennial captured game honors with 16.

Palmer needed little more than Bill McCalvy's magic eye and a smooth offense that torpedoed the famous Colt press. McCalvy hit 35 points, 20 in the first half, and the Terrors were never really extended.

Centennial got excellent work from sophomore Smith, who is rapidly proving more than an item of curiosity, in fighting off Wasson Friday night. Jerry Gutierrez, a fluid-moving guard, paced the attack with 16 points but it was Smith's rebounding and defense that really crippled the Birds.

East enjoyed a 23 point performance from veteran Dan Noll and 18 by Mark Bean in dismantling Trinidad. The Miners then got more of the same Saturday as South used everyone but the popcorn vendors in an 83-58 triumph.

Broadmoor's Skiers Trimph In Slalom Race

Members of the Broadmoor Junior Ski Club captured four first place awards, two second places and a third while participating in slalom races at Red River, N.M., last weekend.

Eighteen members of the local club made the trip, along with their coach Walter Schluter, who heads the Ski Broadmoor ski school. The races were sanctioned by the Rocky Mountain Division of United States Ski Assn.

The slalom course set for the first, second and third classes included 55 gates, and 25 gates were used in the fourth and fifth divisions.

First place winners were: Eddy Frederick, Boys Class 5; Robby Rassmusen, Boys Class 2; Arv Erickson, Boys Class 3; and Debbie Haaser, Girls' Class 2; second place finishers were: Griff Freyschlag, Boys Class 4; and Al Schlafli, Boys Class 1; and third went to: Ken Adams, Boys Class 3.

Assistant Coaches Paid By Pros for Scouting

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN

CHICAGO (AP) — The moonlighting of assistant football coaches who allegedly are being paid on the side by the National and American Football Leagues for keeping tabs on outstanding collegiate players is expected to be an explosive item in a report scheduled for Tuesday before the policy-making council of the NCAA.

The report is to be presented by Jim Corbett, LSU athletic director and chairman of the Professional-Relations Committee of the NCAA.

It was touched off by premature signings of players which terminate their collegiate eligibility and brought the banning of several from participating in bowl games.

Corbett's review is said to put all the cards on the table "for safeguarding the integrity of college athletics."

This would be to the extent of admitting that possibly a large number of assistant coaches are being paid by the pros for specific scouting reports on outstanding prospects.

The pay varies, but rises accordingly for a few who are convincing enough to steer outstanding stars into pro camps.

It is not known if the report immediately will be made public. Any official action by the NCAA convention as a whole will come Wednesday.

Corbett last week met with Pete Rozelle, NFL commissioner. At the NCAA convention site he has talked with Joe Foss, AFL commissioner.

"I can't say anything about the report yet," said Foss. "Corbett's committee will make its recommendations and then I will be happy to comment."

Foss said he does not look with favor on a proposal by some college men that his conference and the NFL hold off their annual drafts until January from now on.

"I think this would be just too tempting for too many people," he said. "The longer you delay the draft, the more opportunity this is for cheating."

Meanwhile, the NCAA-AAU feud over control of amateur sports keeps boiling. The NCAA bacing the federation movement in track and field, basketball, baseball and gymnastics—will take action Wednesday on official restrictions of its members from competition in meets not sanctioned by the federations.

The NCAA Extra Events Committee has received application for sanction of a proposed Santa Claus football bowl game in Atlanta for Dec., 1966.

The surprise card in this shuffle came when Bud Jack of Utah, committee chairman, confirmed that Bill MacPhail, Columbia Broadcasting System vice president in charge of sports, had made the presentation of such a game to the Extra Events Committee.

Jack tried to explain why this connection had not come out earlier.

"We felt there are some implications, some complications that we didn't want to talk about until it was presented to the NCAA Council," he said. "One concerned the game being played on Christmas Day. The second concerned a TV network sponsoring a bowl game."

There also was surprising activity on the football rules floor. The Collegiate Commissioners Association of 11 conferences, including all the major ones, mapped a recommendation for abolishment of platoon football and the "messenger system"—the sending in of plays by coaches.

This stand opposes the concerted move of football coaches for free and unlimited substitution. The recommendation will be presented this weekend at the NCAA Football Rules Committee meeting in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

"I think the recommendation is highly significant and should have considerable impact," said Walter Byers, executive director of the NCAA.

It recommends that the rules be so revised as to guarantee:

1. Elimination of deliberate fouls to circumvent the rules.
2. That in order to develop the player's resourcefulness, the "messenger system" be eliminated.
3. That to fulfill the educational mission of football, college players learn the game of football by playing both ways (on offense and defense)".

Japanese To Wrestle In Springs

The Japanese wrestling team which is currently touring Colorado and battling several of the state's more powerful high school squads, will appear in Colorado Springs Jan. 23 against a combined squad from Palmer and Wasson.

Coach George Kalber of Wasson, who had been working with the officials in charge of the tour for several days, said Monday that plans had been firmed for the local appearance. Matches will be wrestled in eight weights, starting at 115 and continuing through 123, 130, 136, 141, 148, 157, and 168.

This is a deviation from Colorado high school competition which has 12 weights, starting at 95 and going through heavyweight which is over 180. The eight weights to be wrestled here are all three pounds above the Colorado classification which would start at 112 and end at 165 for the same group.

Kalber said the Japanese team will arrive here Fri., Jan. 22 and will appear at an assembly at each of the two local schools involved. The Colorado Springs Junior Chamber of Commerce will act as hosts and will arrange entertainment for the visitors while they are here. Members of the local teams will house the Japanese wrestlers.

Harrison's Tall Players Measure Up to Billing as WLR Loop Favorite

By CHARLIE DREUX
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

Harrison's Panthers measured up to their pre-season billing as the prime candidates for the Will Rogers League basketball championship when the towering Harrison roundballers, displaying outstanding rebounding and reserve strength, stormed past the loop's top challenger, Cheyenne Mountain, to highlight last weekend's slate.

It was sweet revenge for Harrison's new head coach Norm Sullivan and the Panthers because of an earlier non-conference loss to Cheyenne, as the WRL pennant seekers rolled over the Indians, 74-57, last Friday.

This established the Panthers' WRL title bid and even though the two teams will meet again in the double-round league chase, the Harrison team has a considerable edge. It is a considered opinion that Cheyenne is the only team that could defeat the Panthers, but on the other hand, the Indians are not a shoe-in choice to go undefeated against Academy High, Canon City and Widefield.

Sullivan's chargers have an open date this weekend and the Harrison coach is attempting to schedule a non-league game for Friday or Saturday. But at present the Panthers are uncommitted this weekend.

This week's schedule calls for two league games on Friday and two non-league games the following night. Friday's slate has Canon City at Cheyenne Mountain and Academy High at Widefield. Cheyenne travels to Pueblo Catholic and Widefield is the guest of Thornton to round out Saturday's agenda.

In other action last weekend, John Delventhal's small-but-potent Kadets of Academy High posted their second victory of the season as the Big Blue slipped past Canon City, 77-70, in the second WRL game last Friday.

Both Cheyenne and Widefield succumbed to their northern opponents on Saturday. Cheyenne lost to Mapleton, 85-77, while the Gladiators failed to post their second win in seven outings as Brighton dumped Widefield, 61-46.

In reviewing the Cheyenne-Harrison game, the Panthers over-all team height and field goal shooting proved fatal to the Indians. Despite a brilliant performance by their ace gunner and rebounder, Ron Graham who pumped in 25 points, the Cheyenne aggregation couldn't contain the taller Panters in the second half.

The Tribe managed to deadlock the contest on two occasions in the second period but the Panthers took a 42-39 lead at intermission. The Panthers jumped to a 19-point lead in the 3rd period and put the game on ice in the final period. For the Harrison five, 6-4 John Dalton paced the winning team with 16 points and 11 rebounds.

There were four other Panthers scoring in the double figures including Larry Gagnon with 15 points, Dick Rauschkolb with 13 points, Mike Obert with 11 points, and Eddie Hoook with 10 points. Harold Oldham added nine points and Jerry Williams scored one point to round out the seven players contributing to the WRL win.

In the Academy High-Canon City game, this was the second win over the Tigers for Academy's Big Blue cagers. And this was only the second victory for the Kadets in eight games. But the Kadets have played a rugged schedule, playing larger Triple-A schools.

Although Ray Wheeler's Tigers managed to contain the Kadets leading gunner Bert Spear to a mere seven points, the Academy roundballers put forth a team effort which saw all 10 players scoring at least four points apiece.

Roger Karolick, the Academy High's former fullback standout, pumped in 13 points to pace the victory.

BETWEEN THE LINES

by Loy Holman

Alphabetical Epithets

Just as though they had no problems of their own .

That's the attitude the powerful National Collegia Athletic Association is taking in regard to its infamous w of words against the Amateur Athletic Union. And aft taping their own mouths shut for at least a few months that some sort of unity could weld a team together for the latest Olympics, the fight is beginning to flare again.

This time, however, the NCAA is being surprised by a lack of cooperation among its own members. Seeing the light and realizing that they can take only so much dictation from this far-flung group are a few schools that have taken a stand against the ruthless grab for control.

It was good news a few weeks ago when a quartet from the ancient and still influential Ivy League went on record of opposing the ban of collegians from track meets which were not sanctioned by the NCAA-backed National Track and Field Federation. Now a few more are joining their ranks, including cinder rich New York University and Manhattan.

More power to 'em. Too long the schools listing membership with the NCAA have tagged along with most anything the group's exclusive committees have decided or ignored. Maybe now all the members can rip a page from the nation's history and realize it's better to rule as a whole rather than be ruled.

On this current squabble between the NCAA and the AAU, it's the opinion here that there certainly is a place for both, although each could take a long look in the mirror and try to eliminate many of the mistakes of the past. There is a clear division between college athletes and post-grads or non-collegians and the AAU has no more business meddling in the school affairs than the NCAA has in wrapping its tentacles around those who have left the campus.

Outside of track, and a few sports which draw little attention other than during international competition, there are few crossings between the two groups. But if only the leaders of both organizations would act like adults for a change, there is no reason why cooperation can't be accomplished.

It's plainly a struggle for power—and both are likely to come out losers.

As far as the annual convention and meetings of the NCAA now going on in Chicago, instead of tossing epithets at their rivals these overgrown boys in men's clothing would do well to take a peek at their own house. They wouldn't have to look very hard to see several places where dirt has been swept under the rug.

Of major concern to the NCAA right now is the business of trying to stop the professional leagues from premature signings of players, such as tho off the Oklahoma team just b fore the Gator Bowl. I agr that it's deplorable to snat players away from a squad ju before the payoff game of th college careers, but haven't t schools bred this sort of acti by their own high pressure r cruiting and under-the-tab payments?

Typical of the short-sighte ness of the NCAA is their qu for a ruling that players ca be signed by the pros until aft they have completed their eli bility in the sport in questio That would make it fine a dandy to those under-the-go post signatures at bowl gam which have become so popula

But why stop there? Is t purpose of college athletics rea ly to provide a training cam for pro rookies? I think not.

Wouldn't it be more logical discourage signing of professio al contracts until after gradu tion in June? Or perhaps it of little significance whether not an athlete does graduat If the facts were ever ma public, it would be flabbergas ing to find the number of at letes in major universities a colleges who never finis school.

Too often they leave the classes in basket weaving or course in inflating footballs co veniently taught by one of th members of the coaching sta as soon as the last game their senior season. And wha think you then of the high pu pose of the athletic grant-in-aid

Ah, but this practice amon nearly every major school i the land is ignored by the NCA . . . and even the schools in volved. A far more worthwhil project for those smoke-fille rooms in Chicago this wee would be an investigation the drop-outs by tuition-pa slaves of the shower room.

That, of course, is but one thousands of problems that hav long existed within the frame work of the NCAA's own mem ber schools. And yet they woul rather blindfold themselves their own dirt and issue insinua tions of wrong doing at the cousins of the AAU.

It's the easy way out for the would have to admit some their own failings to acknow ledge the filth of collegiate ath letics which goes disguised a "amatuer" activities.

The NCAA is supposedly bui on a code of morals. But ho 'bout:

The "slush fund" of man schools which pays for inciden als over and above the salar of scholarships. The "letter intent" described by one scrib as "promissory notes on th bodies of young athletes." Th practice of "red shirting" whic actually costs a boy a year his life all for the good of th stadium receipts. Or how abou the use of certain athletes (suc as in hockey) who have admi ted being paid to play and ye are hid behind a guise of a amatuer.

There are many more corner to look into. But it's much easie to call the pot black while th kettle soaks in its own grime.

NCAA Gets Moonlighting Report

Prothro Gets No. 1 Job At UCLA

CHICAGO (AP) — Tommy Prothro, seeking professional opportunity, is leaving Oregon State to take the head football coaching job at UCLA.

"Financially there's no advantage to the move," said the 44-year-old Prothro, who had assisted the late Red Sanders at UCLA before going to Oregon Staate for a successful 10-year tenure.

"But I feel there is professional opportunity at UCLA," he said Monday night.

Prothro, attending the NCAA convention in Chicago, indicated he would like to move his assistants to UCLA where they would probably receive bigger paychecks.

First place winners were: Eddy Frederick, Boys Class 5; Robby Rassmusen, Boys Class 2; Arv Erickson, Boys Class 3; and Debbie Haaser, Girls' Class 2; second place finishers were: Griff Freyschlag, Boys Class 4; and Al Schlafli, Boys Class 1; and third went to: Ken Adams, Boys Class 3.

Assistant Coaches Paid By Pros for Scouting

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN

CHICAGO (AP) — The moonlighting of assistant football coaches who allegedly are being paid on the side by the National and American Football Leagues for keeping tabs on outstanding collegiate players is expected to be an explosive item in a report scheduled for Tuesday before the policy-making council of the NCAA.

The report is to be presented by Jim Corbett, LSU athletic director and chairman of the Professional-Relations Committee of the NCAA.

It was touched off by premature signings of players which terminate their collegiate eligibility and brought the banning of several from participating in bowl games.

Corbett's review is said to put all the cards on the table "for safeguarding the integrity of college athletics."

This would be to the extent of admitting that possibly a large number of assistant coaches are being paid by the pros for specific scouting reports on outstanding prospects.

The pay varies, but rises accordingly for a few who are convincing enough to steer outstanding stars into pro camps.

It is not known if the report immediately will be made public. Any official action by the NCAA convention as a whole will come Wednesday.

Corbett last week met with Pete Rozelle, NFL commissioner. At the NCAA convention site he has talked with Joe Foss, AFL commissioner.

"I can't say anything about the report yet," said Foss. "Corbett's committee will make its recommendations and then I will be happy to comment."

Foss said he does not look with favor on a proposal by some college men that his conference and the NFL hold off their annual drafts until January from now on.

"I think this would be just too tempting for too many people," he said. "The longer you delay the draft, the more opportunity this is for cheating."

Meanwhile, the NCAA-AAU feud over control of amateur sports keeps boiling. The NCAA bacing the federation movement in track and field, basketball, baseball and gymnastics—will take action Wednesday on official restrictions of its members from competition in meets not sanctioned by the federations.

The NCAA Extra Events Committee has received application for sanction of a proposed Santa Claus football bowl game in Atlanta for Dec., 1966.

The surprise card in this shuffle came when Bud Jack of Utah, committee chairman, confirmed that Bill MacPhail, Columbia Broadcasting System vice president in charge of sports, had made the presentation of such a game to the Extra Events Committee.

Jack tried to explain why this connection had not come out earlier.

"We felt there are some implications, some complications that we didn't want to talk about until it was presented to the NCAA Council," he said. "One concerned the game being played on Christmas Day. The second concerned a TV network sponsoring a bowl game."

There also was surprising activity on the football rules floor. The Collegiate Commissioners Association of 11 conferences, including all the major ones, mapped a recommendation for abolishment of platoon football and the "messenger system"—the sending in of plays by coaches.

This stand opposes the concerted move of football coaches for free and unlimited substitution. The recommendation will be presented this weekend at the NCAA Football Rules Committee meeting in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

"I think the recommendation is highly significant and should have considerable impact," said Walter Byers, executive director of the NCAA.

It recommends that the rules be so revised as to guarantee:

1. Elimination of deliberate fouls to circumvent the rules.

2. That in order to develop the player's resourcefulness, the "messenger system" be eliminated.

3. That to fulfill the educational mission of football, college players learn the game of football by playing both ways (on offense and defense)".

Japanese To Wrestle In Springs

The Japanese wrestling team which is currently touring Colorado and battling several of the state's more powerful high school squads, will appear in Colorado Springs Jan. 23 against a combined squad from Palmer and Wasson.

Coach George Kalber of Wasson, who had been working with the officials in charge of the tour for several days, said Monday that plans had been firmed for the local appearance. Matches will be wrestled in eight weights, starting at 115 and continuing through 123, 130, 136, 141, 148, 157, and 168.

This is a deviation from Colorado high school competition which has 12 weights, starting at 95 and going through heavyweight which is over 180. The eight weights to be wrestled here are all three pounds above the Colorado classification which would start at 112 and end at 165 for the same group.

Kalber said the Japanese team will arrive here Fri., Jan. 22 and will appear at an assembly at each of the two local schools involved. The Colorado Springs Junior Chamber of Commerce will act as hosts and will arrange entertainment for the visitors while they are here. Members of the local teams will house the Japanese wrestlers.

Harrison's Tall Players Measure Up to Billing as WLR Loop Favorite

By CHARLIE DREUX
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

Harrison's Panthers measured up to their pre-season billing as the prime candidates for the Will Rogers League basketball championship when the towering Harrison roundballers, displaying outstanding rebounding and reserve strength, stormed past the loop's top challenger, Cheyenne Mountain, to highlight last weekend's slate.

It was sweet revenge for Harrison's new head coach Norm Sullivan and the Panthers because of an earlier non-conference loss to Cheyenne, as the WRL pennant seekers rolled over the Indians, 74-57, last Friday.

This established the Panthers' WRL title bid and even though the two teams will meet again in the double-round league chase, the Harrison team has a considerable edge. It is a considered opinion that Cheyenne is the only team that could defeat the Panthers, but on the other hand, the Indians are not a shoe-in choice to go undefeated against Academy High, Canon City and Widefield.

Sullivan's chargers have an open date this weekend and the Harrison coach is attempting to schedule a non-league game for Friday or Saturday. But at present the Panthers are uncommitted this weekend.

This week's schedule calls for two league games on Friday and two non-league games the following night. Friday's slate has Canon City at Cheyenne Mountain and Academy High at Widefield. Cheyenne travels to Pueblo Catholic and Widefield is the guest of Thornton to round out Saturday's agenda.

In other action last weekend, John Delventhal's small-but-potent Kadets of Academy High posted their second victory of the season as the Big Blue slipped past Canon City, 77-70, in the second WRL game last Friday.

Both Cheyenne and Widefield succumbed to their northern opponents on Saturday. Cheyenne lost to Mapleton, 85-77, while the Gladiators failed to post their second win in seven outings as Brighton dumped Widefield, 61-46.

In reviewing the Cheyenne-Harrison game, the Panthers over-all team height and field goal shooting proved fatal to the Indians. Despite a brilliant performance by their ace gunner and rebounder, Ron Graham who pumped in 25 points, the Cheyenne aggregation couldn't contain the taller Panters in the second half.

The Tribe managed to deadlock the contest on two occasions in the second period but the Panthers took a 42-39 lead at intermission. The Panthers jumped to a 19-point lead in the 3rd period and put the game on ice in the final period. For the Harrison five, 6-4 John Dalton paced the winning team with 16 points and 11 rebounds.

There were four other Panthers scoring in the double figures including Larry Gagnon with 15 points, Dick Rauschkolb with 13 points, Mike Obert with 11 points, and Eddie Hoook with 10 points. Harold Oldham added nine points and Jerry Williams scored one point to round out the seven players contributing to the WRL win.

In the Academy High-Canon City game, this was the second win over the Tigers for Academy's Big Blue cagers. And this was only the second victory for the Kadets in eight games. But the Kadets have played a rugged schedule, playing larger Triple-A schools.

Although Ray Wheeler's Tigers managed to contain the Kadets leading gunner Bert Spear to a mere seven points, the Academy roundballers put forth a team effort which saw all 10 players scoring at least four points apiece.

Roger Karolick, the Academy High's former fullback standout, pumped in 13 points to pace the victory.

BETWEEN THE LINES

Alphabetical Epithets

Just as though they had no problems of their own . That's the attitude the powerful National Collegia Athletic Association is taking in regard to its infamous w of words against the Amateur Athletic Union. And aft taping their own mouths shut for at least a few months that some sort of unity could weld a team together for the latest Olympics, the fight is beginning to flare again.

This time, however, the NCAA is being surprised by a lack of cooperation among its own members. Seeing the light and realizing that they can take only so much dictation from this far-flung group are a few schools that have taken a stand against the ruthless grab for control.

It was good news a few weeks ago when a quartet from the ancient and still influential Ivy League went on record of opposing the ban of collegians from track meets which were not sanctioned by the NCAA-backed National Track and Field Federation. Now a few more are joining their ranks, including cinder rich New York University and Manhattan.

More power to 'em. Too long the schools listing membership with the NCAA have tagged along with most anything the group's exclusive committees have decided or ignored. Maybe now all the members can rip a page from the nation's history and realize it's better to rule as a whole rather than be ruled.

On this current squabble between the NCAA and the AAU, it's the opinion here that there certainly is a place for both, although each could take a long look in the mirror and try to eliminate many of the mistakes of the past. There is a clear division between college athletes and post-grads or non-collegians and the AAU has no more business meddling in the school affairs than the NCAA has in wrapping its tentacles around those who have left the campus.

Outside of track, and a few sports which draw little attention other than during international competition, there are few crossings between the two groups. But if only the leaders of both organizations would act like adults for a change, there is no reason why cooperation can't be accomplished.

It's plainly a struggle for power—and both are likely to come out losers.

As far as the annual convention and meetings of the NCAA now going on in Chicago, instead of tossing epithets at their rivals these overgrown boys in men's clothing would do well to take a peek at their own house. They wouldn't have to look very hard to see several places where dirt has been swept under the rug.

Of major concern to the NCAA right now is the business of trying to stop the professional leagues from premature signings of players, such as tho off the Oklahoma team just b fore the Gator Bowl. I agr that it's deplorable to snat players away from a squad ju before the payoff game of th college careers, but haven't t schools bred this sort of acti by their own high pressure r cruiting and under-the-tab payments?

Typical of the short-sighte ness of the NCAA is their que for a ruling that players ca be signed by the pros until aft they have completed their eli bility in the sport in questio That would make it fine a dandy to those under-the-go post signatures at bowl gam which have become so popula

But why stop there? Is t purpose of college athletics rea ly to provide a training cam for pro rookies? I think not.

Wouldn't it be more logical discourage signing of professio al contracts until after gradu tion in June? Or perhaps it of little significance whether not an athlete does graduat If the facts were ever ma public, it would be flabbergas ing to find the number of at letes in major universities a colleges who never finis school.

Too often they leave the classes in basket weaving or course in inflating footballs co veniently taught by one of th members of the coaching sta as soon as the last game their senior season. And wha think you then of the high pu pose of the athletic grant-in-aid

Ah, but this practice amon nearly every major school the land is ignored by the NCA . . . and even the schools i volved. A far more worthwhi project for those smoke-fille rooms in Chicago this wee would be an investigation the drop-outs by tuition-pai slaves of the shower room.

That, of course, is but one thousands of problems that hav long existed within the fram work of the NCAA's own mem ber schools. And yet they woul rather blindfold themselves their own dirt and issue insinua tions of wrong doing at the cousins of the AAU.

It's the easy way out for the would have to admit some their own failings to ackno ledge the filth of collegiate at letics which goes disguised "amatuer" activities.

The NCAA is supposedly bui on a code of morals. But ho 'bout:

The "slush fund" of ma schools which pays for inciden als over and above the sala of scholarships. The "letter intent" described by one scrib as "promissory notes on th bodies of young athletes." Th practice of "red shirting" whic actually costs a boy a year his life all for the good of th stadium receipts. Or how abou the use of certain athletes (suc as in hockey) who have admi ted being paid to play and ye are hid behind a guise of a amatuer.

There are many more corner to look into. But it's much easie to call the pot black while th kettle soaks in its own grime.

Harney Grabs Second LA Open Championship

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There is this golfer, Paul Harney, who has a singular habit. He comes down here from the hills around Sacramento, extracts $12,000 from the local Junior Chamber of Commerce and disappears back in the hills of Sacramento

HARVEY WINS — Paul Harney wears a big smile after getting a $12,000 check for winning the 72-hole Los Angeles Open golf tournament Monday. It was Harney's second straight win in the $70,000 competition. He finished the four rounds in eight under par. (AP Wirephoto)

The fellow has done it two years running now and hopes to keep the custom going indefinitely.

Harney's secret? All you have to do is beat guys like Arnold Palmer, Ken Venturi, Bobby Nichols, Tony Lema—and yes, indeed, a man named Dan Sikes—and win the Los Angeles Open Golf Tournament.

Harney did just that Monday. He shot a final round 69, two under par, for a 72-hole score of 276, which is eight under par and four better than he used in winning a year ago.

The likeable Harney joined a pretty exclusive club with his back-to-back win. Only two other guys belong. Ben Hogan won twice in a row in 1947-48, and back in 1928-29 the late MacDonald Smith did it.

Sikes, a fugitive from the law profession from Ponte Vedra, Fla., finished second with a great comeback effort—a 70 in a round that began with three resounding bogeys, but a final score of 279.

"I was ready to go home," said the drawling 34-year-old Floridan. It was just as well he didn't. His consolation was $6,500.

Bill Casper's 71 for 281 was worth $4,000, really not to be sneered at even by a man who won more than $90,000 last year.

Going down the line of the better known pros, there was Champagne Tony Lema, the British Open champion, and PGA champion Bobby Nichols at 282 in a tie with Canada's George Knudson.

Arnold Palmer got in his best round, a 69 for 284 — $1,975 if the absent Jack Nicklaus is checking Arnie's bank account — but lost a decision to an unidentified but dedicated employee of the Rancho Municipal course.

Palmer, and other long hitters, were unhappy because they found the tee markers had not been moved back for the final 18. It developed that the PGA tournament supervisor, Jack Tuthill, had indeed carefully put the markers back.

But this innocent, dedicated worker figured something was amiss and had dutifully trailed Tuthill and moved the markers up. Undoubtedly he has a compassion for the golfing hacks who frequent Rancho for the 51 other weeks of the year.

National Open champion Ken Venturi had a 75 for 292, two shots out of the money.

Many observers felt the crucial hole was the ninth. Sikes, playing just ahead of Harney, birdied the hole. It put him just one shot back. But Harney came on to hole a snaking 15-foot putt for a birdie.

Harney, however, singled out No. 13 as the decider.

Sikes got his par 5 there. But Harney holed a difficult 20-footer for a Birdie.

Hawks Close Up NBA Gap

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The St. Louis Hawks, chasing Los Angeles in the National Basketball Association's Western Division race, got some help from an unexpected source Monday night.

The Hawks, playing the Philadelphia 76ers in Tulsa, Okla., as part of the NBA's road show, whipped the 76ers 100-90 and picked up a game on the Lakers, who lost to fourthplace Detroit 128-127 at Pittsburgh.

That leaves St. Louis 1½ games back of the division-leading Lakers.

Lennie Wilkens scored 23 points and had eight assists for the Hawks. St. Louis' Zelmo Beaty scored 17 points and grabbed 16 rebounds. Rookie Lucious Jackson scored 21 for Philadelphia.

Detroit, nine games back of the Lakers, led all the way before Los Angeles' Jerry West, who had 43 points for the night, hit a free throw with 36 seconds left.

The Pistons' Ray Scott put Detroit in front on a jump shot with 18 seconds remaining. The L.A.'s Dick Barnett and Elgin Baylor missed shots before Detroit player-coach Dave DeBusschere grabbed the rebound and held onto the ball as time ran out.

Reggie Harding had 29 and Scott 28 for Detroit.

Buffs Dump Kansas for Upset No. 2

By JIM VAN VALKENBURG
Associated Press Sports Writer

Surprising Colorado moved squarely into the Big Eight basketball title picture Monday night at Boulder by stopping a seven -game Kansas winning streak 61-59, leaving Oklahoma State with the only perfect league record.

It was fast-improving Chuck Gardner, a 6-foot-7 pivot with good moves, who made the difference for Sox Walseth's Colorado club.

Oklahoma State moved on top at 3-0 by outclassing Iowa State 67-48 at Stillwater, with Kansas dropping to a second place tie at 2-1 with Colorado. 89-82 at Norman, leaving the Huskers in last place, 0-3. Oklahoma is 1-2.

Kansas, the holiday tournament champ over Colorado in the finals, missed a chance to get a big edge in the race. Now it looks like a four-team title race.

Gardner got 21 for Colorado Monday, including a pair of foul shots that put the Buffs in front to stay, 52-51. Kansas had wiped out a 41-33 Buff lead and moved on top 51-46 before Colorado made its winning push.

Walt Wesley, 6-foot-11 Kansas pivot, scored 24 points against a zone defense but fouled out with 2:20 left. Gardner made the free throw for a 59-56 edge and Pat Frink added two more foul shots with 43 seconds left, making it 61-56.

The Buffs controlled the boards 34-28, shot .432 to .417 for Kansas and hit 17 of 22 free throws. Kansas had three more goals and was 9-for-12 at the line. Al Lopes of Kansas held Pat Frink to 13 points but Lopes had only one free throw for the night.

Wasson Skate Aids Palmer Win

By MORRIS FRASER
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

If Palmer should happen not to come up with the City Hockey League championship trophy, the Terrors might just settle for one of Wasson's skates to place in their trophy case. For it was by the margin of one blade that Palmer stopped the Thunderbirds, 3-2, Monday night.

The win boosted Palmer into second place in the league standings and pushed Wasson back to third. The Terrors are 4-2. Wasson is 3-3.

"I thought our defense played very well," Palmer coach Tommy Brennan said after the game. "I was worried because none of our defensemen has had much experience and we had Ken Rose out with the flu. But they came through for us."

Wasson fans were moaning after the game about the cheap goal that turned out to be the winner. With 10:38 gone in the first period, Jim McKinley, Palmer wing, dropped a pass from behind Wasson's net with the intention of setting up a shot. But the puck glanced off a T-Bird's foot and into the net for Palmer's first goal.

Wasson coach Harry Whitworth shook his head in commenting, "It was a cheap goal, no denying it .But they all count and we got beat on it."

Each team scored once more in each of the last two periods. Wasson tied the count with just 2:11 elapsed in the second stanza. Hugh Wallnutt slapped a left -side faceoff pass to Don Morrison on the right corner of the crease and Morrison put it past goalie Don Astley.

Palmer came back late in the second period on a pretty goal as Stan Traxler passed in front to McKinley, who had an easy shot through an open corner.

Palmer went ahead, 3-1, late in thethird period when center Ted Andrews passed from the net to defenseman Stan Johanson, standing alone in mid-ice near the blue line. Amid shouts of "Shoot it!" Johanson whipped the puck past a clogged middle and into the left corner shoulder high.

Wasson roared back just 22 seconds later as Tom Braun cleared all the way to the goal, only to have his shot stopped by Astley. But while Braun was sliding into the boards at the rear after losing his footing, Bruce Mahanke picked up the rebound and slammed it into the goal.

Wasson pulled goalie Rick Spencer after that goal and pressed the Terrors, but Palmer broke out with three shots, two at an unprotected goal. But all three were wide.

Spartans, Leadville Meet In Top PPL Cage Contest

Salida pulled off its second win of the year last week and the Spartans are faced with a much-improved Leadville team as the Pikes Peak League moves into its second week of competition.

The Spartans dumped Buena Vista easily, 85-53, last week while Leadville was manufacturing a come-from-behind 53-50 victory over Fowler. In other games, Fountain bounced Manitou Springs, 62-41, and Florence slipped by Crowley County, 64-63.

Salida had stumbled through a 1-5 pre-league schedule before taking the Demons to task. John Lantz, 6-7 center, showed marked improvement in scoring as he poured 28 points through the nets for the Spartans.

Leadville got a scare from the Grizzlies Saturday before pulling out its three-point win in the final quarter. Jack Hosley, No. 2 scorer in the league last year, came through with 16 points. Fowler's Bill Van Sickle pumped in 18 points.

The Panthers were last year's cellar-dwellers with no league victories, but took home their fifth win without a loss last week. They host Salida Friday night.

After two close-scoring contests, Fountain opened up against the Mustangs Friday for a 62-41 triumph. Bill Carne turned the high point game with 18 points for the Trojans. Terry Kent added 14 for Bert Feste's crew and Neil Fleischauer added 12. Bruce Heidenreich scored 17 for Manitou Springs.

Florence raised its overall record to 5-1 with a 64-63 nipping of Crowley County. Dave Zamarripa, one of the league's most consistent players, brought home 27 points. Terry Burmood of Crowley County added 22 to the total score.

League action continues Friday night, in addition to the Salida-Leadville headliner, with Manitou Springs hosting Fowler, Fountain travelling to Crowley County and Florence going to Buena Vista.

Fowler brings the league's top defense (44.9) into Manitou Springs, which totes the league's lowest scoring mark (48.6).

Despite the disparity in the win-loss column, Florence and Buena Vista have almost identical scoring marks. The Huskies average 58.5 points for its 5-1 record. Buena Vista's 2-3 record belies a 58.6 scoring average. But Florence's defensive record shows 20 points difference to the good, 52.8-72.8.

Fountain figures to be a good choice to card its second league win against the Chargers. The Trrjans have a respectable 3-4 record, losing to Widefield and Castle Rock, besides St. Mary's Tournament defeats by Holy Family and Manitou Springs. Crowley County carries a 1-7 record, scoring an average of over 52 points a game. But the Chargers have allowed 499 points in eight starts.

On Saturday Leadville travels to play strong Canon City Abbey, Manzanola hosts Fowler and Buena Vista is at Westcliffe.

Hoosiers Regain Pride At Iowa

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Indiana, which slipped three spots in this week's Associated Press college basketball poll to No. 5 after losing to unranked Illinois a week ago, made sure that lightning wouldn't strike twice.

The Hoosiers, leading Iowa by four points with three minutes to go Monday night, held the Hawkeyes to two points the rest of the way and won going away 85-76. A string of six points in the last 90 seconds wrapped it up for Indiana, now 11-1.

Three other members of this week's top ten played Monday night and all won. St. John's of New York, ranked No. 7, whipped visiting Creighton 72-66, third-ranked Wichita whacked Southern Illinois 94-81 and No. 8 Davidson trounced The Citadel 100-81.

UCLA, idle Monday night, continues to lead the poll. The defending national champions drew 33 first place ballots and 39 points in the voting by a regional panel of 42 sports writers and broadcasters.

Michigan climbed back into the runner-up spot which was vacated by Indiana. The Wolverines, who beat Illinois in their only start last week, drew 336 points.

Wichita jumped two slots into third place and had two first-place ballots included in its 251 points. St. Joseph's, Pa., with a 12-1 record, remained fourth with 242 points and one first-place vote.

AFL Stars To Perform In Penrose

HOUSTON (AP) —Houston hopeful of becoming the permanent home of the American Football League All-Star game in 1966, found itself today host of the game a year earlier than expected.

Joe Foss, league commissioner, pulled the Eastern and Western Division All-Stars out of New Orleans Monday after Negro players complained of racial discrimination in the Louisiana city.

Twenty Negro players refused to participate in the Saturday game, saying they were denied cab service and refused admission to night clubs in the French Quarter.

The contest will be played in 35,000-seat Jeppesen Stadium at 2 p.m., EST, Saturday.

The players began converging on Houston Monday, and by today nearly all were on hand for the opening workouts.

Coach Sid Gillman's West squad is to work twice daily—at 11 a.m. and 4 p.m., today, Wednesday and Thursday at Jeppesen.

Lou Saban's Easterners ,who will pse the Oiler practice field, scheduled the same practice times.

Both coaches left the plans open for Friday when they may work only once.

Oakland, which also has hopes of being the All-Star game's permanent host, and Houston were the cities bidding strongest for the game after the league turned its back on New Orleans.

A 50,000-seat stadium is scheduled for completion in the northern California city by 1966. Houston's revolutionary domed stadium is to be completed this spring.

Harney Grabs Second LA Open Championship

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There is this golfer, Paul Harney, who has a singular habit. He comes down here from the hills around Sacramento, extracts $12,000 from the local Junior Chamber of Commerce and disappears back in the hills of Sacramento

HARVEY WINS — Paul Harney wears a big smile after getting a $12,000 check for winning the 72-hole Los Angeles Open golf tournament Monday. It was Harney's second straight win in the $70,000 competition. He finished the four rounds in eight under par. (AP Wirephoto)

The fellow has done it two years running now and hopes to keep the custom going indefinitely.

Harney's secret? All you have to do is beat guys like Arnold Palmer, Ken Venturi, Bobby Nichols, Tony Lema—and yes, indeed, a man named Dan Sikes—and win the Los Angeles Open Golf Tournament.

Harney did just that Monday. He shot a final round 69, two under par, for a 72-hole score of 276, which is eight under par and four better than he used in winning a year ago.

The likeable Harney joined a pretty exclusive club with his back-to-back win. Only two other guys belong. Ben Hogan won twice in a row in 1947-48, and back in 1928-29 the late MacDonald Smith did it.

Sikes, a fugitive from the law profession from Ponte Vedra, Fla., finished second with a great comeback effort—a 70 in a round that began with three resounding bogeys, but a final score of 279.

"I was ready to go home," said the drawling 34-year-old Floridan. It was just as well he didn't. His consolation was $6,500.

Bill Casper's 71 for 281 was worth $4,000, really not to be sneered at even by a man who won more than $90,000 last year.

Going down the line of the better known pros, there was Champagne Tony Lema, the British Open champion, and PGA champion Bobby Nichols at 282 in a tie with Canada's George Knudson.

Arnold Palmer got in his best round, a 69 for 284 — $1,975 if the absent Jack Nicklaus is checking Arnie's bank account — but lost a decision to an unidentified but dedicated employee of the Rancho Municipal course.

Palmer, and other long hitters, were unhappy because they found the tee markers had not been moved back for the final 18. It developed that the PGA tournament supervisor, Jack Tuthill, had indeed carefully put the markers back.

But this innocent, dedicated worker figured something was amiss and had dutifully trailed Tuthill and moved the markers up. Undoubtedly he has a compassion for the golfing hacks who frequent Rancho for the 51 other weeks of the year.

National Open champion Ken Venturi had a 75 for 292, two shots out of the money.

Many observers felt the crucial hole was the ninth. Sikes, playing just ahead of Harney, birdied the hole. It put him just one shot back. But Harney came on to hole a snaking 15-foot putt for a birdie.

Harney, however, singled out No. 13 as the decider.

Sikes got his par 5 there. But Harney holed a difficult 20-footer for a Birdie.

Hawks Close Up NBA Gap

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The St. Louis Hawks, chasing Los Angeles in the National Basketball Association's Western Division race, got some help from an unexpected source Monday night.

The Hawks, playing the Philadelphia 76ers in Tulsa, Okla., as part of the NBA's road show, whipped the 76ers 100-90 and picked up a game on the Lakers, who lost to fourthplace Detroit 128-127 at Pittsburgh.

That leaves St. Louis 1½ games back of the division-leading Lakers.

Lennie Wilkens scored 23 points and had eight assists for the Hawks. St. Louis' Zelmo Beaty scored 17 points and grabbed 16 rebounds. Rookie Lucious Jackson scored 21 for Philadelphia.

Detroit, nine games back of the Lakers, led all the way before Los Angeles' Jerry West, who had 43 points for the night, hit a free throw with 36 seconds left.

The Pistons' Ray Scott put Detroit in front on a jump shot with 18 seconds remaining. The L.A.'s Dick Barnett and Elgin Baylor missed shots before Detroit player-coach Dave DeBusschere grabbed the rebound and held onto the ball as time ran out.

Reggie Harding had 29 and Scott 28 for Detroit.

Buffs Dump Kansas for Upset No. 2

By JIM VAN VALKENBURG
Associated Press Sports Writer

Surprising Colorado moved squarely into the Big Eight basketball title picture Monday night at Boulder by stopping a seven-game Kansas winning streak 61-59, leaving Oklahoma State with the only perfect league record.

It was fast-improving Chuck Gardner, a 6-foot-7 pivot with good moves, who made the difference for Sox Walseth's Colorado club.

Oklahoma State moved on top at 3-0 by outclassing Iowa State 67-48 at Stillwater, with Kansas dropping to a second place tie at 2-1 with Colorado. 89-82 at Norman, leaving the Huskers in last place, 0-3. Oklahoma is 1-2.

Kansas, the holiday tournament champ over Colorado in the finals, missed a chance to get a big edge in the race. Now it looks like a four-team title race.

Gardner got 21 for Colorado Monday, including a pair of foul shots that put the Buffs in front to stay, 52-51. Kansas had wiped out a 41-33 Buff lead and moved on top 51-46 before Colorado made its winning push.

Walt Wesley, 6-foot-11 Kansas pivot, scored 24 points against a zone defense but fouled out with 2:20 left. Gardner made the free throw for a 59-56 edge and Pat Frink added two more foul shots with 43 seconds left, making it 61-56.

The Buffs controlled the boards 34-28, shot .432 to .417 for Kansas and hit 17 of 22 free throws. Kansas had three more goals and was 9-for-12 at the line. Al Lopes of Kansas held Pat Frink to 13 points but Lopes had only one free throw for the night.

Wasson Skate Aids Palmer Win

By MORRIS FRASER
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

If Palmer should happen not to come up with the City Hockey League championship trophy, the Terrors might just settle for one of Wasson's skates to place in their trophy case. For it was by the margin of one blade that Palmer stopped the Thunderbirds, 3-2, Monday night.

The win boosted Palmer into second place in the league standings and pushed Wasson back to third. The Terrors are 4-2. Wasson is 3-3.

"I thought our defense played very well," Palmer coach Tommy Brennan said after the game. "I was worried because none of our defensemen has had much experience and we had Ken Rose out with the flu. But they came through for us."

Wasson fans were moaning after the game about the cheap goal that turned out to be the winner. With 10:38 gone in the first period, Jim McKinley, Palmer wing, dropped a pass from behind Wasson's net with the intention of setting up a shot. But the puck glanced off a T-Bird's foot and into the net for Palmer's first goal.

Wasson coach Harry Whitworth shook his head in commenting, "It was a cheap goal, no denying it .But they all count and we got beat on it."

Each team scored once more in each of the last two periods. Wasson tied the count with just 2:11 elapsed in the second stanza. Hugh Wallnutt slapped a left -side faceoff pass to Don Morrison on the right corner of the crease and Morrison put it past goalie Don Astley.

Palmer came back late in the second period on a pretty goal as Stan Traxler passed in front to McKinley, who had an easy shot through an open corner.

Palmer went ahead, 3-1, late in thethird period when center Ted Andrews passed from the net to defenseman Stan Johanson, standing alone in mid-ice near the blue line. Amid shouts of "Shoot it!" Johanson whipped the puck past a clogged middle and into the left corner shoulder high.

Wasson roared back just 22 seconds later as Tom Braun cleared all the way to the goal, only to have his shot stopped by Astley. But while Braun was sliding into the boards at the rear after losing his footing, Bruce Mahanke picked up the rebound and slammed it into the goal.

Wasson pulled goalie Rick Spencer after that goal and pressed the Terrors, but Palmer broke out with three shots, two at an unprotected goal. But all three were wide.

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

Indiana, which slipped three spots in this week's Associated Press college basketball poll to No. 5 after losing to unranked Illinois a week ago, made sure that lightning wouldn't strike twice.

The Hoosiers, leading Iowa by four points with three minutes to go Monday night, held the Hawkeyes to two points the rest of the way and won going away 85-76. A string of six points in the last 90 seconds wrapped it up for Indiana, now 11-1.

Three other members of this week's top ten played Monday night and all won. St. John's of New York, ranked No. 7, whipped visiting Creighton 72-66, third-ranked Wichita whacked Southern Illinois 94-81 and No. 8 Davidson trounced The Citadel 100-81.

UCLA, idle Monday night, continues to lead the poll. The defending national champions drew 33 first place ballots and 39 points in the voting by a regional panel of 42 sports writers and broadcasters.

Spartans, Leadville Meet In Top PPL Cage Contest

Salida pulled off its second win of the year last week and the Spartans are faced with a much-improved Leadville team as the Pikes Peak League moves into its second week of competition.

The Spartans dumped Buena Vista easily, 85-53, last week while Leadville was manufacturing a come-from-behind 53-50 victory over Fowler. In other games, Fountain bounced Manitou Springs, 62-41, and Florence slipped by Crowley County, 64-63.

Salida had stumbled through a 1-5 pre-league schedule before taking the Demons to task. John Lantz, 6-7 center, showed marked improvement in scoring as he poured 28 points through the nets for the Spartans.

Leadville got a scare from the Grizzlies Saturday before pulling out its three-point win in the final quarter. Jack Hosley, No. 2 scorer in the league last year, came through with 16 points. Fowler's Bill Van Sickle pumped in 18 points.

The Panthers were last year's cellar-dwellers with no league victories, but took home their fifth win without a loss last week. They host Salida Friday night.

After two close-scoring contests, Fountain opened up against the Mustangs Friday for a 62-41 triumph. Bill Carne turned the high point game with 18 points for the Trojans. Terry Kent added 14 for Bert Feste's crew and Neil Fleischauer added 12. Bruce Heidenreich scored 17 for Manitou Springs.

Florence raised its overall record to 5-1 with a 64-63 nipping of Crowley County. Dave Zamarripa, one of the league's more consistent players, brought home 27 points. Terry Burmood of Crowley County added 22 to the total score.

League action continues Friday night, in addition to the Salida-Leadville headliner, with Manitou Springs hosting Fowler, Fountain travelling to Crowley County and Florence going to Buena Vista.

Fowler brings the league's top defense (44.9) into Manitou Springs, which totes the league's lowest scoring mark (48.6).

Despite the disparity in the win-loss column, Florence and Buena Vista have almost identical scoring marks. The Huskies average 58.5 points for its 5-1 record. Buena Vista's 2-3 record belies a 58.6 scoring average. But Florence's defensive record shows 20 points difference to the good, 52.8-72.8.

Fountain figures to be a good choice to card its second league win against the Chargers. The Trrjans have a respectable 3-4 record, losing to Widefield and Castle Rock, besides St. Mary's Tournament defeats by Holy Family and Manitou Springs. Crowley County carries a 1-7 record, scoring an average of over 52 points a game. But the Chargers have allowed 499 points in eight starts.

On Saturday Leadville travels to play strong Canon City Abbey, Manzanola hosts Fowler and Buena Vista is at Westcliffe.

AFL Stars To Perform In Penrose

HOUSTON (AP) —Houston hopeful of becoming the permanent home of the American Football League All-Star game in 1966, found itself today host of the game a year earlier than expected.

Joe Foss, league commissioner, pulled the Eastern and Western Division All-Stars out of New Orleans Monday after Negro players complained of racial discrimination in the Louisiana city.

Twenty Negro players refused to participate in the Saturday game, saying they were denied cab service and refused admission to night clubs in the French Quarter.

The contest will be played in 35,000-seat Jeppesen Stadium at 2 p.m., EST, Saturday.

The players began converging on Houston Monday, and by today nearly all were on hand for the opening workouts.

Coach Sid Gillman's West squad is to work twice daily—at 11 a.m. and 4 p.m., today, Wednesday and Thursday at Jeppesen.

Lou Saban's Easterners ,who will pse the Oiler practice field, scheduled the same practice times.

Both coaches left the plans open for Friday when they may work only once.

Oakland, which also has hopes of being the All-Star game's permanent host, and Houston were the cities bidding strongest for the game after the league turned its back on New Orleans.

A 50,000-seat stadium is scheduled for completion in the northern California city by 1966. Houston's revolutionary domed stadium is to be completed this spring.

Viet Premier Denies U.S. Tries Dictation

By MALCOLM W. BROWNE

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Premier Tran Van Huong denied today that the United States tried to dictate a settlement of South Viet Nam's recent government crisis.

"The government and the armed forces of the Republic of Viet Nam," Huong told a news conference, "regard as their obligation the responsibility for resolving the internal affairs of their country, and reaffirm that there has been no demand made by the United States to follow any particular formula for the resolution of the past crisis."

Huong said rumors of undue American interference in South Viet Nam's affairs "were the results of misunderstanding between Vietnamese and American authorities, particularly during the conferences which took place following the event of Dec. 20, 1964." This was a reference to the purge of the legislative High National Council by the nation's military leaders.

Huong said "extensive and frank discussions conducted in an atmosphere of mutual concern and good will have dispelled whatever misunderstandings that might have been apparent."

"Vietnamese-American relations are now, as always, intimate and cordial," he declared.

U.S. Ambassador Maxwell D. Taylor strongly objected to the military purge, and the embassy suspended talks on plans to increase aid to South Viet Nam's war effort against the Communist Viet Cong.

Initially Taylor and his aides pressed for the generals to repudiate their purge and reinstate the High National Council. Last weekend, however, American officials softened their stand, and a settlement was announced Saturday.

In the settlement, the military said it had restored full authority to Huong and the civilian government and released the politicians it arrested Dec. 20. The legislative council was not reinstated, but the civilian government is supposed to organize a national assembly in the future.

In response to a question, Huong denied that the United States had ever broached the possibility of negotiating with the Communists to neutralize South Viet Nam.

"I don't know what information this question is based upon," he said. "To my knowledge, the United States has never spoken of negotiations."

Huong said he knew of only three types of neutrality, as practiced in Laos, India and Switzerland. Of these, only the Swiss type would be "ideal, but that would be only a dream for Viet Nam," he said.

Huong denied a recent report in the Japanese press which quoted him as saying he opposed expansion of the war into Communist North Viet Nam..

"What I said was that war is an evil no one wants," Huong declared.

"We will not escalate uselessly, unless required by circumstances. Besides, no one wants World War III."

Saigon was quiet, but a general strike continued for the third day in Hue, central Viet Nam's chief city 400 miles north of Saigon.

MOST NEGROES IN CITIES

ATLANTA (UPI) — Seventy per cent of the nation's 20 million Negroes live in urban centers.

This flight to the cities, much of it from the South, has caused new problems for civil rights leaders in trying to cope with education, jobs and housing.

Whitney Young Arm of the National Urban League says three of four urban Negroes are in unskilled jobs, compared to one out of three whites; Negro illiteracy is four times that of whites, and more than 10 per cent of the nation's negroes still have less than five years of schooling.

"Deadivory" is a name given to the tusks of mammoths and mastodons.

Twenty guests will be staying at the White House, mostly close relatives.

Mrs. Johnson has made plans to have a continuing buffet table service at the inauguration because everyone's schedule will be different.

The names of the presidential guests will be announced later the White House said, but one of them probably will be the President's brother, Sam Houston Johnson of Austin, Tex.

Dress Designer Oleg Cassini Shows Humor

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON

NEW YORK (AP) — At the end of his spring collection showing for the fashion press, Oleg Cassini hopped onto the runway and danced the Twist with one of his pretty models.

Many changes have occurred since the designer was appointed by Mrs. John F. Kennedy in 1961 as her official couturier. But witty commentary and gyrations to music continue to be a part of his show.

He used to say that his close relationship with the White House inhibited him. For example, he had to forego humorous labels for his creaitons with names such as "Missionary's Downfall."

The Missionary's Downfall was back in his vocabulary and his collection this season. It appeared Monday as a long-sleeved navy crepe dress with a deep scoop neckline with white ruffled collar and cuffs.

A fluttery red chiffon dress with a yellow slip under the skirt was called "Bloody Mary." The black number with a "V" neck plunging to the waist over a black bra shall go nameless.

These were a part of a youthful group of clothes called "Young America" which recently has replaced his couture line.

A sleeveless sheath in pale linen, long-waisted and with a side-buttoned bodice, was a Mrs. Kennedy-style dress, Cassini said. It was proof, he said, that the elegant lady still influenced his fashion thinking.

The show opened with shapely models in bathing suits. One mixed polka dots with stripes. Those designed for wolf whistles were black with backs and sides generously scooped away.

One girl in a black bikini seemed to have perfectly coiffed platinum hair. This turned out to be a waterproof wig that is the newest thing in bathing caps.

There were sunglasses, shoes, underpinnings, big straw brimmed hats, jewelry, even men's suits and ties designed by Cassini.

Earlier Ben Zuckerman previewed his spring collection as a part of the American designers series now in progress.

Zuckerman chose to remain with the slim sheath. He shaped his coats and jackets to follow the line of the body.

In contrast to Zuckerman was Sarmi, whose ballgowns shown included his famous bird dresses with bosoms covered by the plumage of jungle bird feathers.

War and Peace Drama Said Only Fitful

NEW YORK (AP) — A lot of sincere effort achieves only fitful dramatic results in the adaptation of "War and Peace" that premiered Monday night at off-Broadway's Phoenix Theater.

In tackling the stage condensation of the Tolstoy epic devised by Erwin Piscator and some Berlin colleagues, the youthful Association of Producing Artists has run into several severe casting problems.

As a further handicap, the scenic effects — a shadow box upper dais on which Napoleon periodically appears, a toy soldier enactment of the Battle of Borodino and portentous drapes — make this "War and Peace" more a museum curiosity than valid and vibrant drama.

A good deal of the story outline is preserved in the boildown (translated by Robert David MacDonald), with a narrator who roams among the costumed performers in a modern dinner jacket like a night club emcee providing the essential continuity.

At work under Ellis Rabb's direction in principal roles are Donald Moffat, Sydney Walker, Rosemary Harris, Ronald Bishop and, as the confencier, Clayton Corzatte.

For the martial tonal background, fragments of music by Shostakovitch, Prokofieff and other compatriots are heard.

"War and Peace," which goes into repertory performance with "Man and Superman," at least gives students and those who always meant to read the book an opportunity to plug one cultural gap.

BOMB

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — A bomb exploded in front of the Brazilian consular offices Monday, shattering walls and windows. No one was injured.

Police blamed a right-wing terrorist organization. They said the pattern of the explosion was similar to recent bombings of two U.S. airline offices here.

QUEEN RETURNS—The Queen of Ragtime, Juneau Hattie, returned to the Golden Bee English Pub in the Broadmoor International Center for a return engagement, Monday night. Hattie, who is 73 years old, has a repertoire of ragtime tunes that is as colorful as her attire which is "heavily" adorned with silver dollars. Coming to The Broadmoor from Juneau, Alaska, where she is known as the Silver Dollar Lady of the Red Dog Saloon, Hattie will be playing nightly in the Golden Bee except Sunday.

Film Industry Hopes Boom Will Continue

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The American film industry, riding the crest of renewed prosperity, has invested $105 million in 15 movies with hopes of continuing the boom.

"Think big" has been the keynote of recent industry practice, the theory being that big pictures can mean big profits while small pictures seldom do. The system can bring near-disaster, as in the cases of "Cleopatra" and "Mutiny on the Bounty."

But epics like "Ben-Hur" and "The 10 Commandments" can buoy a company's fortunes for a year or longer. Nearly all of the major studios invested last year in large-scale films which will soon be testing their value.

Some are the road-show or hard-ticket attraction, which means they will be exhibited on a reserved-seat, advanced-price basis. Others will go into general release. All represent multimillion-dollar gambles.

Twentieth Century-Fox is the most bullish on the road-show films and will release three in 1965. They are:

"The Sound of Music," the final Rodgers and Hammerstein collaboration, starring Julie Andrews and Christopher Plummer. Estimate: $8 million.

"The Agony and the Ecstasy," the Sistine Chapel portion of Irving Stone's book on Michaelangelo, with Charlton Heston and Rex Harrison. Estimate: $8 million.

"Those Magnificent Men in Their Flying Machines," an early-day air epic with an international cast. Estimate $7 million.

Biggest of the new epics is George Stevens' long-awaited "The Greatest Story Ever Told." He has steadfastly refused to reveal its cost, and United Artists also has been secretive about it. Trade observers place the eventual bill close to $20 million. The film premieres in Cinerama next month.

United Artists has another film planned for a Cinerama release, "The Hallelujah Trail," a knockabout Western with Burt Lancaster and Lee Remick. The cost is reported at $7 million. Another Lancaster film for United Artists, "The Train," ran far over its budget during shooting in France. The final tab: around $6 million.

Jubilant with returns from "My Fair Lady," Warner Brothers apparently felt few qualms about shelling out $12 million for "The Great Race." It is a wild chase with ancient automobiles and stars Jack Lemmon, Natalie Wood and Tony Curtis.

Universal has diverted from its steady diet of sex comedies to bankroll "The War Lord" at $5 million, the studio's biggest outlay since "Spartacus." It's a medieval adventure starring Charlton Heston.

MGM has three films in the $4 to 6 million class: "The Yellow Rolls-Royce" (Ingrid Bergman, Rex Harrison, Shirley Mac Laine, etc.); "The Flight of the Sandpiper" (Burtons); "Operation Crossbow" (Sophia Loren, George Peppard).

Columbia is releasing "Lord Jim" (Peter O'Toole), which cost $5 million, and "Genghis Khan" and "Ship of Fools" at $4 million apiece. Paramount will issue Otto Preminger's "In Harm's Way" with John Wayne, Kirk Douglas, et al, probably at a $5 to 6 million cost.

COSTLY CHANGE

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Columbia spent a fortune publicizing "The Traveling Lady" with Steve McQueen and Lee Remick, and now has changed the title to "Baby, The Rain Must Fall."

RABAT — Spanish is still used in Morocco.

Student Convicted Of Rat Poison Plot

CAMBRIDGE, England (AP) — An African student was convicted Monday of sprinkling rat poison on his landlady's cake.

Silas Nwakanma, 26, of Nigeria told the court he had been impelled to do it because someone put a curse on him before he left his native village.

The landlady's 14-year-old son ate a piece of the poisoned cake but suffered no serious aftereffects.

Nwakanma, a student at Cambridge Technical College, was committed to a hospital.

VIENNA — Austrian engineers have been asked by several Africa countries to assist on factory building projects.

Dress Designer Oleg Cassini Shows Humor

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON

NEW YORK (AP) — At the end of his spring collection showing for the fashion press, Oleg Cassini hopped onto the runway and danced the Twist with one of his pretty models.

Many changes have occurred since the designer was appointed by Mrs. John F. Kennedy in 1961 as her official couturier. But witty commentary and gyrations to music continue to be a part of his show.

He used to say that his close relationship with the White House inhibited him. For example, he had to forego humorous labels for his creaitons with names such as "Missionary's Downfall."

The Missionary's Downfall was back in his vocabulary and his collection this season. It appeared Monday as a long-sleeved navy crepe dress with a deep scoop neckline with white ruffled collar and cuffs.

A fluttery red chiffon dress with a yellow slip under the skirt was called "Bloody Mary." The black number with a "V" neck plunging to the waist over a black bra shall go nameless.

These were a part of a youthful group of clothes called "Young America" which recently has replaced his couture line.

A sleeveless sheath in pale linen, long-waisted and with a side-buttoned bodice, was a Mrs. Kennedy-style dress, Cassini said. It was proof, he said, that the elegant lady still influenced his fashion thinking.

The show opened with shapely models in bathing suits. One mixed polka dots with stripes. Those designed for wolf whistles were black with backs and sides generously scooped away.

One girl in a black bikini seemed to have perfectly coiffed platinum hair. This turned out to be a waterproof wig that is the newest thing in bathing caps.

There were sunglasses, shoes, underpinnings, big straw brimmed hats, jewelry, even men's suits and ties designed by Cassini.

Earlier Ben Zuckerman previewed his spring collection as a part of the American designers series now in progress.

Zuckerman chose to remain with the slim sheath. He shaped his coats and jackets to follow the line of the body.

In contrast to Zuckerman was Sarmi, whose ballgowns shown included his famous bird dresses with bosoms covered by the plumage of jungle bird feathers.

War and Peace Drama Said Only Fitful

NEW YORK (AP) — A lot of sincere effort achieves only fitful dramatic results in the adaptation of "War and Peace" that premiered Monday night at off-Broadway's Phoenix Theater.

In tackling the stage condensation of the Tolstoy epic devised by Erwin Piscator and some Berlin colleagues, the youthful Association of Producing Artists has run into several severe casting problems.

As a further handicap, the scenic effects — a shadow box upper dais on which Napoleon periodically appears, a toy soldier enactment of the Battle of Borodino and portentous drapes — make this "War and Peace" more a museum curiosity than valid and vibrant drama.

A good deal of the story outline is preserved in the boildown (translated by Robert David MacDonald), with a narrator who roams among the costumed performers in a modern dinner jacket like a night club emcee providing the essential continuity.

At work under Ellis Rabb's direction in principal roles are Donald Moffat, Sydney Walker, Rosemary Harris, Ronald Bishop and, as the confencier, Clayton Corzatte.

For the martial tonal background, fragments of music by Shostakovitch, Prokofieff and other compatriots are heard.

"War and Peace," which goes into repertory performance with "Man and Superman," at least gives students and those who always meant to read the book an opportunity to plug one cultural gap.

BOMB

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — A bomb exploded in front of the Brazilian consular offices Monday, shattering walls and windows. No one was injured.

Police blamed a right-wing terrorist organization. They said the pattern of the explosion was similar to recent bombings of two U.S. airline offices here.

QUEEN RETURNS—The Queen of Ragtime, Juneau Hattie, returned to the Golden Bee English Pub in the Broadmoor International Center for a return engagement, Monday night. Hattie, who is 73 years old, has a repertoire of ragtime tunes that is as colorful as her attire which is "heavily" adorned with silver dollars. Coming to The Broadmoor from Juneau, Alaska, where she is known as the Silver Dollar Lady of the Red Dog Saloon, Hattie will be playing nightly in the Golden Bee except Sunday.

Film Industry Hopes Boom Will Continue

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The American film industry, riding the crest of renewed prosperity, has invested $105 million in 15 movies with hopes of continuing the boom.

"Think big" has been the keynote of recent industry practice, the theory being that big pictures can mean big profits while small pictures seldom do. The system can bring near-disaster, as in the cases of "Cleopatra" and "Mutiny on the Bounty."

But epics like "Ben-Hur" and "The 10 Commandments" can buoy a company's fortunes for a year or longer. Nearly all of the major studios invested last year in large-scale films which will soon be testing their value.

Some are the road-show or hard-ticket attraction, which means they will be exhibited on a reserved-seat, advanced-price basis. Others will go into general release. All represent multimillion-dollar gambles.

Twentieth Century-Fox is the most bullish on the road-show films and will release three in 1965. They are:

"The Sound of Music," the final Rodgers and Hammerstein collaboration, starring Julie Andrews and Christopher Plummer. Estimate: $8 million.

"The Agony and the Ecstasy," the Sistine Chapel portion of Irving Stone's book on Michaelangelo, with Charlton Heston and Rex Harrison. Estimate: $8 million.

"Those Magnificent Men in Their Flying Machines," an early-day air epic with an international cast. Estimate $7 million.

Biggest of the new epics is George Stevens' long-awaited "The Greatest Story Ever Told." He has steadfastly refused to reveal its cost, and United Artists also has been secretive about it. Trade observers place the eventual bill close to $20 million. The film premieres in Cinerama next month.

United Artists has another film planned for a Cinerama release, "The Hallelujah Trail," a knockabout Western with Burt Lancaster and Lee Remick. The cost is reported at $7 million. Another Lancaster film for United Artists, "The Train," ran far over its budget during shooting in France. The final tab: around $6 million.

Jubilant with returns from "My Fair Lady," Warner Brothers apparently felt few qualms about shelling out $12 million for "The Great Race." It is a wild chase with ancient automobiles and stars Jack Lemmon, Natalie Wood and Tony Curtis.

Universal has diverted from its steady diet of sex comedies to bankroll "The War Lord" at $5 million, the studio's biggest outlay since "Spartacus." It's a medieval adventure starring Charlton Heston.

MGM has three films in the $4 to 6 million class: "The Yellow Rolls-Royce" (Ingrid Bergman, Rex Harrison, Shirley Mac Laine, etc.); "The Flight of the Sandpiper" (Burtons); "Operation Crossbow" (Sophia Loren, George Peppard).

Columbia is releasing "Lord Jim" (Peter O'Toole), which cost $5 million, and "Genghis Khan" and "Ship of Fools" at $4 million apiece. Paramount will issue Otto Preminger's "In Harm's Way" with John Wayne, Kirk Douglas, et al, probably at a $5 to 6 million cost.

COSTLY CHANGE

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Columbia spent a fortune publicizing "The Traveling Lady" with Steve McQueen and Lee Remick, and now has changed the title to "Baby, The Rain Must Fall."

RABAT — Spanish is still used in Morocco.

Student Convicted Of Rat Poison Plot

CAMBRIDGE, England (AP) — An African student was convicted Monday of sprinkling rat poison on his landlady's cake.

Silas Nwakanma, 26, of Nigeria told the court he had been impelled to do it because someone put a curse on him before he left his native village.

The landlady's 14-year-old son ate a piece of the poisoned cake but suffered no serious aftereffects.

Nwakanma, a student at Cambridge Technical College, was committed to a hospital.

VIENNA — Austrian engineers have been asked by several Africa countries to assist on factory building projects.

The Anti-Poverty Routine in Colorado

The "Great Society" has come to Colorado. By means of a letter dated December 26 of last year, Governor John Love has served notice that he is cooperating fully with the President of the United States in the establishment of local agencies for the purposes of conducting a war on poverty.

This high sounding verbiage means that the governor has addressed all county commissioners, the County Commissioners' Association, mayors, the mayor's associations, the Colorado Municipal League, chambers of commerce and boards of education, letting them know that he has established the "Colorado Office of Economic Opportunity" and that through this office considerable sums of money will be spent to establish "community action" programs, to assist groups in preparing applications for federal aid, to provide techinical advice for such groups, to distribute information (propaganda) concerning the Economic Opportunity Act, and to assist in coordinating the activities of all state agencies.

On this last point, something might be said in passing. Ever since we can remember, efforts have been made in legislation after legislation to "coordinate" the activities of various governmental agencies. Apparently it's a losing proposition. These agencies just can't seem to get themselves coordinated, which is why the governor is going to make another effort to accomplish the impossible.

But getting back to the whole "economic opportunity" bit, do you notice that all this money is to be spent, and all the experts drawn together, for the purpose of spending money AMONG THEMSELVES? There isn't a lick of productive work that is even considered in the whole proposal.

The governor was kind enough to include with his letter a mimeo outline called, "The war on poverty at a glance." Ten items are listed. If we were to classify these items we'd lump five of them into "education," three of them into "government loans" and two of them into "government employment."

In this whole anti-poverty campaign nothing is said about new products, new services to the consumer, about production, about making money. Everything is geared to service to the worker, not the customer. The whole approach is one that is intended to take money from the productive and spend it in ten different ways, not a one of which but is either non-productive, or is competitive to similar services available in the market place.

There's to be a "job corps." Now, if a real job corps could be formed it would be put together by employers who were looking for workers and who wanted workers of particular talents or background. But here the government is going to tax us to create a "coordinated" (that word again) program of "basic education," skill training and "constructive" work experience for young people ages 16 through 21. This "constructive" work experience doesn't mean anything. If actual work experience is going to be gained by anyone, it will be gained by people who get jobs in the market place. And government assistance in this area not only isn't required, it won't help a bit. Everything else in the "job corps" area is just so much training at taxpayer's expense.

Then there's a "work-training" program. Actually, this is the same program but worded differently so as to give more people a chance to get government jobs. It will create no new jobs in business or industry, nor will it hire anyone or produce anything. It's aimed at the same age group.

Next comes a "work - study program." This is the same as the job corps, too, except that it's aimed at the group beyond 21 years of age and includes college and university people.

Then there's an "adult basic education program." This is the same thing once more, but providing still more government at taxpayers' expense.

And finally there's the "work-experience program," which is the same thing, too, except that it is supposed to assist unemployed fathers and "needy" persons.

Summing up, the government proposes to tax the industrious to provide all kinds of educational experience to those who don't have jobs and to take a few who do have jobs and claim credit for those jobs.

Nor are the other programs any better. They are all of a kind, making it possible for small businessmen or non-business persons to get government loans, or just frankly setting up things like the "Vista Volunteers," which is a kind of racket in which you can get a government check, apparently for having a VISTA of what the future in the "Great Society" is to be like.

We doubt if John Love is particularly enamored of any of this but, since he got himself into his present job, he pretty well has to go along with it or secede.

Be prepared for a report in a few years to the effect that we have more poverty than ever and still bigger spending will have to occur to alleviate it.

BAN COMMUNISM?

To the Editor:

This letter is concerning the report J. Edgar Hoover made on the activities of the Communist Party among the youth of America.

After reading the article the first thing you think is: "Communism ought to be banned." But I suggest that you look further into the question. I say for one that banning communism would serve no purpose and that such a law would not succeed any more than the prohibition amendment of the 1920's. Banning something is not getting rid of it; the susceptibility to that something is still there, law or no law.

The only way we can solve this problem is to educate the children of America from littlest up that freedom is right and why it is right. If everyone in this country believed wholeheartedly that the individual and free enterprise was the root of all progress, we would have no such problems.

The way to fight communism in this country is not through the use of law playing the part of the censor, but through education. Everyone should be educated in the horrors of communism and in the great joy of freedom. Then one would look at these two things and decide which he wanted for himself and his children.

Communism only breeds on the grounds of ignorance. I say if the communists are going to set up such organizations on today's college campuses and elsewhere that we set up bigger and better organizations dedicated to freedom, the individual, and free enterprise, right to the side of them. Only then can we beat communism and win.

The youth of today are the leaders of tomorrow; if they do not believe in freedom, there will be no freedom of tomorrow, only slavery.

GUIDANCE

To the Editor:

Since Mr. LeFevre will soon not be writing the editorials, I am sure there are others, as well as I, who will miss some of his unique writings though yet we will still have access to good editorials. I wish Mr. LeFevre success in the operation of Freedom School. I am sure he will have if he seeks wisdom and guidance from The Omnipotent One of whom there is an abundant supply to overrule all the onslaughts of Satan, from whom comes many attacks on any good undertaking.

The Lord said nothing is impossible with Him if we have faith in Him. God is not nature because He is the inventor, the creator of nature. He made man a distinct creature from every other in that He created him with a soul, a spirit, with the freedom of choice. We are not to substitute the elements of nature for God. Those who worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth. God has always intervened in the affairs of men. We have David for an example. He prayed to God for revenge of Satan's people who hated him and God revenged him of his enemies. He still does for those who trust Him. He said vengeance belongs to Him.

Seems up to now voluntary prayer has not been outlawed at public schools, which is a very good thing for the simple reason it gives children a chance to learn about God and to reverence Him. Some of them, perhaps the majority of them never hear His name mentioned at home unless it's in profanity.

Our foreparents came to America to establish the right of freedom to worship God according to the dictates of one's conscience. The most important things in the history of man have been accomplished by prayer. Before America was founded our foreparents went to God in prayer and faith and through His wisdom and guidance we got the Bill of Rights and the Declaration of Independence. Anyone who wants to take away that right from anyone is not worthy to be called an American. They just have a form of religion but deny God's power. Had the succeeding generations kept the faith of our pioneer fathers we would not have government schools. The phrase "In God We Trust" being omitted from money would be of little importance because most people have more trust in money than in God.

Respect for Law

It is ironic that Governor Love chose to send us his letter on "economic opportunity" attached to an expensive report just completed by the governor's committee on "Respect for the Law."

It is obvious to any save the most obtuse that if law is to be respected, it must first of all be deserving of respect. And how in the world can we teach people to respect the law when the law is engaged in looting them and in paying out huge sums to the non-productive, the lazy, or even those who may temporarily be down on their luck?

It is, of course, a matter of record that disrespect for the law is growing by leaps and bounds. But it is not growing nearly as rapidly as the massive bundles of new law for which few of us can have any respect.

Now, the fact is that most of us have respect for people who are peacefully pursuing their own business. We have a great respect for organized efforts conducted in orderly, constructive and productive manner. We don't approve of criminal actions, invasions of human rights, violence and other anti-social and anti-moral procedures. And the only time that law ever deserves the slightest respect is when it is in harmony with natural law and the peaceful and orderly rights of individuals.

Certainly, crime is on the increase. But the sum total of all the illegal crime committed in this state, in terms of dollar costs, doesn't begin to equal the sum total of all the money taken from us legally by the very laws we are now told that we must respect.

Governments, it is claimed, perform one of their most useful functions by setting an example. This is the reason given for many utterly indefensible laws, such as the Civil Rights Act. Here is an invasion of the area of private prejudice in which the government proposes to punish anyone who doesn't evince "brotherly love." And we are advised that the real merit of this law is that by setting the example, the law will cause people to love those against whom they presently reveal an unreasoning prejudice.

Well, if governments set examples, then how can we hope to engender respect for law when, by law, governments lead the world in looting and plundering their unfortunate subjects? If this is an example, we need look no further to establish one of the reasons for the increase in crime. Crime is nothing more nor less than invasions against the private and property rights of persons. But if government is setting the example and leading in such invasions, how is it possible to prevent private persons from emulating this example?

Big crime and big government go hand in hand. They always have. As governments set ever larger examples of their ability to "get away" with property and money belonging to others, it is predictable that private persons, envious of this "easy money" route, will endeavor to do so, too. They will either seek to find loopholes in the law and thus avoid unpleasant consequences; or they will seek to find loopholes in the network of policing, and thus avoid detection.

Now, if government men are really and truly serious about getting people to respect the hundreds of thousands of pieces of paper they enact as law, they could begin by repealing the laws which simply aren't respectable.

As laws diminish in number and in scope, growing respect would accumulate for those remaining. And if government would repeal every single law which ran contrary to natural law and the rights of man, beginning with the tax laws, we suspect there would be an immediate improvement in the general moral outlook. As we stated before, respect is engendered naturally for PEOPLE, not for law. And the people who win respect are those who, by their conduct, inspire it.

It is interesting that among the remarks made to the governor's committee by persons interviewed was this: "The single standard (of morality) needs to be practiced as well as preached." Precisely so. And that means that if we are to have the same respect for law that we have for people, it will occur when those in government do not set themselves up in special categories, presuming that by some process they are above the law of nature and above the law of sanctity of property, including incomes, and conduct themselves accordingly.

It's Up to You

Like a Narcotic

By H. E. KERSHNER, L.H.D.

Socialism is like a narcotic; larger and larger doses are required to satisfy the craving of the addict. To administer the larger doses, a larger bureaucracy is required. Survival being the strongest instinct, the bureaucracy fights fiercely to retain and expand its vested interests. Its safety lies in continued expansion and greater measures of control.

Socialism is not only the ownership and control of the means of production, but it soon aspires to control and distribute that which is produced. It works its way into the economic activities of the people until it becomes embedded in their thinking, their customs, their traditions, and their way of life.

Like wine, socialism is attractive in the beginning, but when it asserts its full control and enslaves the people, "At the last, it bitteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder" (Proverbs 23:32). After it fastens itself upon a people, it becomes as difficult to remove as the suction discs of an octopus. When the resources of a state are exhausted by federal extravagance and monopoly of the principal sources of revenue, how can the states get along without federal aid to education? After farmers have grown accustomed to federalized agriculture, how can they do without the subsidies? No one has yet developed a formula for unscrambling an egg. Socialism appears to be a one-way street. Like a harpoon, it can penetrate but it cannot be withdrawn.

In the end, socialism is all control and distribution with little production and not much to distribute. We are reminded of the Soviet inspector who inquired of the collective farm worker about the potato crop. "It's fine", said the worker. "If we stacked our sacks of potatoes in one big pile, it would reach clear up to God." "You know there is no God," said the inspector. "Yes," said the worker, "but neither are there any potatoes."

So, we have a large measure of socialism and most of our political leaders are trying to bribe us with more in return for votes. Many of us, like Paul, are about ready to cry out:

"Oh wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" (Romans 7:24).

When one realistically takes stock of our situation including the astronomical indebtedness—federal, state, local and private — when he considers the adverse trade balance year after year and the fact that the foreign claims against our gold are nine times greater than our so called free gold available for payment, one may well have some feeling of kinship with the writer of Revelation when he said:

"Because thou sayest, I am rich, and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; and knoweth not that thou are wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked" (Rev. 3:17).

Wit and Whimsy

The Local Scene

Interesting News

By RUFUS L. PORTER

I was particularly intrigued tonight with the page of church pictures on 10-A of the Gazette Telegraph, and with the news items on page 11-A.

I find much to commend in the new forms of church architecture. A new trend is setting in which can be called distinctly American and the architects are showing great skill and imagination in these new designs in all sections of the country.

The Air Force Academy chapel was among the new-style churches pictured. This was the only taxbuilt structure on the page, and there was quite a controversy over the design before Congress authorized the money for the building. I was among the many who did not like the design, and also among those who believe the government has no business building churches.

I still do not like the looks of the chapel exterior, it does not fit at all into the mountain setting. And the same can be said for all the glass and aluminum buildings on the Academy site. They look as though they belong in some other setting. They do not blend into the scenery as they should. As an example of what I mean, take a good look at the former Woodmen Sanitorium. Those buildings, except the latest one added by the Sisters of St. Francis, who now own it, blend well into the setting and look very much as though they were designed with that intent.

The new building added by the Sisters rather spoils the effect. It is a chapel, I believe.

But, after seeing the interior of the Air Force Academy, I must admit that it is very beautiful inside.

But the chapel is not the only church in the Pikes Peak area that has the modern look. Most of the new churches in and around Colorado Springs have departed from the old traditional forms of architecture and advanced boldly and beautifully into the new. I predict that some mighty fine and inspiring churches are going to grow from the new American trend in church architecture.

As for page 11-A, the first thing I noticed was the headline in the upper lefthand corner: "Silver Price Reported in Hands of U.S. Government." The news item came from London and it stated that the price of silver for 1965, and for several years to come, depended on the United States government's policy towards its subsidiary coinage, meaning small change, especially dimes, quarters and half-dollars.

The article stated that if the government decides to retain the silver content of its change coinage, then "the world price will rise rather steeply in the not too distant future." But, if the government decides to make wooden, paper or plastic coins, "which seems likely," according to the item, then "no great change in the price of silver is envisaged for the next several years."

The article goes on to say that when our treasury is out of silver, or if and when we put restrictions on its sale or its export is forbidden, the price will immediately rise to above the $1.38 an ounce point and the U.S. subsidiary change would disappear into the melting pot.

A non-silver coinage decision on the part of Congress will affect adversely the world (London) silver market and silver would probably be bought at lower than the treasury's present selling price of $1.29 per ounce, says the article. This would cause those in London who have built up large reserves of silver to lose considerable money.

Whatever happens in the silver market, Uncle Sam is going to take the blame for it. And this time he will deserve it. The silver "shortage" would be quickly cured if the citizens could be convinced that we had a sound money. But the government has done several things in the recent past to make us all doubt the soundness of printing-press dollars that are no more than the promises of a government already on the verge of bankruptcy.

The government's decision on silver will affect, one way or another, the economy of the state of Colorado, which can produce silver in large quantities if it ever becomes profitable to do so.

'The Great Society'

By BUTLER D. SHAFFER

The framework for "The Great Society" has now been outlined, and few were the people who were surprised at its structure. True to the dictates of "smart politics," there will be something for everyone except, of course, for the man who wants his freedom. The new plan will further the system of mutual parasitism, where one group of men steal from another which in turn steals from yet another, and so forth, and where the only ones who can come out ahead are the politicians.

If the lettuce growers of Florida are not satisfied with the prices they receive (and who ever does receive as much money as they would like), they will presumably get a government subsidy for their crop, paid for in part by the Kansas wheat farmers. The wheat farmers will likewise demand a subsidy, paid for in part by—you guessed it—the Florida lettuce growers. Now if A takes $10 from B, who then turns around and takes $10 from A, it is easily seen that not only immoral acts of theft are involved, but that neither A nor B have benefitted by the process. But let a middle man come along—like the government—and the whole process becomes enshrouded with the aura and dignity of "statesmanship." Now the middle man, or the government, takes $10 from B and gives $7 to A, and also takes $10 from A and gives $7 to B. What happens to the $6 taken from A and B but not "re-distributed" back to them? Why, that's the fee that must be paid to the government for the fine "services" it performed in this transaction—just part of the price of living in our "progressive and civilized" Great Society.

This whole process is reminiscent of the old Chinese fable where every family was responsible for taking in the laundry of every other family, and makes just about as much sense. Men, over the centuries, have advanced to the point where they can fly to the stars, conquer innumerable diseases, transmit sights and sounds around the world, split the atom and use its power to propel airplanes and produce electrical power. With all of these wonders of man's rational, creative faculties, one can only wonder in shocked amazement that he yet clings, superstitiously and tenaciously, to the myth of government. It is an anachronism that should have been discarded with witch doctors, temple sacrifices, "flat-earth" geography, and sea serpents.

Just as any man who believes in war deserves a place in the front lines, so too any man who believes in government deserves all the coercion that he gets. But unfortunately, in both cases, the "non-believers" are made to suffer as well. So it will be with "The Great Society." While the parasites all seek to outbid each other for government favors, you and I will be forced to take our places on the auction block.

These are the sad truths concerning the ways of government—all governments. As long as men acknowledge the premise on which government rests—the premise of force—these same men will have to bear the consequences which follow. All government is force; all government is war, of some men against others, and such a permise cannot be the foundation of a peaceful society.

It is, therefore, with concern and resentment that I await the remainder of Mr. Johnson's programs, although I can certainly anticipate their content. But as I read through the outline of this man's dream of his "Great Society," I can only think upon an earlier generation of men, and of their vision of an even greater society, a "Free Society," and wonder if men shall ever achieve the maturity to deserve it.

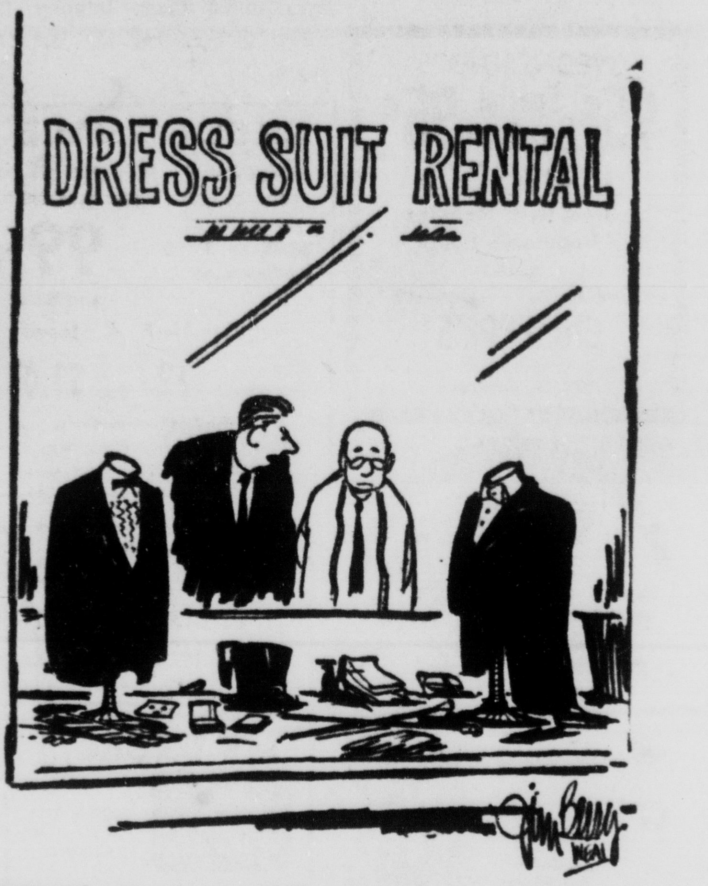
BERRY'S WORLD



"'Don't risk our prosperity,' you said . . . 'vote for Johnson,' you said . . ."

These Days

Tracing a Phrase

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

Since President Lyndon Johnson is becoming more and more committed to the phrase, "The Great Society," to describe the "substance of things hoped for" by his administration during the next four years and after, it might be good to have a look at the origins of the term. It did not spring full-blown from the head of anybody in the White House entourage. Its first use, so far as I have been able to determine, was by Graham Wallas, an English Fabian Socialist, who wrote a book back before World War I that was called "The Great Society."

Recalling my salad days (very green) as an undergraduate reader in political philosophy who had had a "Graham Wallas period" and had since passed beyond it, I concluded a column early last autumn with a somewhat sarcastic question, asking the President if he were aware of the Socialist origins of the term he had fixed upon. No answer was expected to my mild bit of campaign rhetoric, and none was forthcoming. The President, as a pragmatic sort of person, would not in any event care much about the past connotations of a phrase which he intends to pump full of new meaning.

HAZY THEORIES.

Nevertheless, it is enlightening to see the correspondences between Wallas's idea of the organization of a "Great Society" and Johnson's own theorizing about the same. To do Wallas complete justice, he was a very mild type of collectivist reformer. He was given to talk about the "will-organization" of human beings along lines that would blend the principles of individualism and socialism, and he was greatly preoccupied with "the organization of human happiness," which he considered much more important than the production of wealth.

He definitely had a "mixed economy" in mind, but his ideas about the proper methods of mixing private and public ownership and control were, to say the least, hazy. Contemplating the idea of "nationalizing" railroads and mines, he wonders about the practicality of creating new joint stock companies in which the state will have a dominating role, with the original shareholders becoming "receivers of a fixed annual sum" and taking "a temporary right to a minority of seats on a new 'governing body'." Trying to visualize for himself a "picture of the social system which I should desire for England and America," he recalls "those Norwegian towns and villages where everyone, the shopkeepers and the artisans, the schoolmaster, the boy who drove the post-ponies, and the student daughter of the innkeeper who took round the potatoes, seemed to respect themselves, to be capable of happiness as well as of pleasure and excitement, because they were nearer the mean in the employment of all their faculties."

'DEHUMANIZED'

He imagines "such people learning to exploit the electric power from their waterfalls, and the minerals in their mountains, without dividing themselves into dehumanized employers or officials, and equally dehumanized 'hands'." He also recollects that the "salt and savor of Norwegian life depends on the fact that poets, and artists, and statesmen have worked in Norway with a devotion which was not directed by any formula of moderation." (Shades of Barry Goldwater!)

Graham Wallas's text dates back to 1914, and it carries a dedication to the young Walter Lippmann, who was just emerging at the time from a chrysalis of socialism as a disciple of Wallas and the late muckraker, Lincoln Steffens. What is interesting about it now is the tone-feeling of the work, with its preoccupation with spreading happiness around. Wallas wanted to create small parks in our industrial cities, he wanted to provide special transportation services to get working men out into the green fields of the countryside. He wanted more beauty everywhere. Whether by imitation of Graham Wallas or because he comes by his ideas naturally, Lyndon Johnson stressed the same preoccupation with spreading happiness around in his State of the Union message.

Whether the big state can "organize happiness" is, of course, a question that has still to be settled.

The Anti-Poverty Routine in Colorado

The "Great Society" has come to Colorado. By means of a letter dated December 26 of last year, Governor John Love has served notice that he is cooperating fully with the President of the United States in the establishment of local agencies for the purposes of conducting a war on poverty.

This high sounding verbiage means that the governor has addressed all county commissioners, the County Commissioners' Association, mayors, the mayor's associations, the Colorado Municipal League, chambers of commerce and boards of education, letting them know that he has established the "Colorado Office of Economic Opportunity" and that through this office considerable sums of money will be spent to establish "community action" programs, to assist groups in preparing applications for federal aid, to provide techinical advice for such groups, to distribute information (propaganda) concerning the Economic Opportunity Act, and to assist in coordinating the activities of all state agencies.

On this last point, something might be said in passing. Ever since we can remember, efforts have been made in legislation after legislation to "coordinate" the activities of various governmental agencies. Apparently it's a losing proposition. These agencies just can't seem to get themselves coordinated, which is why the governor is going to make another effort to accomplish the impossible.

But getting back to the whole "economic opportunity" bit, do you notice that all this money is to be spent, and all the experts drawn together, for the purpose of spending money AMONG THEMSELVES? There isn't a lick of productive work that is even considered in the whole proposal.

The governor was kind enough to include with his letter a mimeo outline called, "The war on poverty at a glance." Ten items are listed. If we were to classify these items we'd lump five of them into "education," three of them into "government loans" and two of them into "government employment."

In this whole anti-poverty campaign nothing is said about new products, new services to the consumer, about production, about making money. Everything is geared to service to the worker, not the customer. The whole approach is one that is intended to take money from the productive and spend it in ten different ways, not a one of which but is either non-productive, or is competitive to similar services available in the market place.

There's to be a "job corps." Now, if a real job corps could be formed it would be put together by employers who were looking for workers and who wanted workers of particular talents or background. But here the government is going to tax us to create a "coordinated" (that word again) program of "basic education," skill training and "constructive" work experience for young people ages 16 through 21. This "constructive" work experience doesn't mean anything. If actual work experience is going to be gained by anyone, it will be gained by people who get jobs in the market place. And government assistance in this area not only isn't required, it won't help a bit. Everything else in the "job corps" area is just so much training at taxpayer's expense.

Then there's a "work-training" program. Actually, this is the same program but worded differently so as to give more people a chance to get government jobs. It will create no new jobs in business or industry, nor will it hire anyone or produce anything. It's aimed at the same age group.

Next comes a "work-study program." This is the same as the job corps, too, except that it's aimed at the group beyond 21 years of age and includes college and university people.

Then there's an "adult basic education program." This is the same thing once more, but providing still more government at taxpayers' expense.

And finally there's the "work-experience program," which is the same thing, too, except that it is supposed to assist unemployed fathers and "needy" persons.

Summing up, the government proposes to tax the industrious to provide all kinds of educational experience to those who don't have jobs and to take a few who do have jobs and claim credit for those jobs.

Nor are the other programs any better. They are all of a kind, making it possible for small businessmen or non-business persons to get government loans, or just frankly setting up things like the "Vista Volunteers," which is a kind of racket in which you can get a government check, apparently for having a VISTA of what the future in the "Great Society" is to be like.

We doubt if John Love is particularly enamored of any of this but, since he got himself into his present job, he pretty well has to go along with it or secede.

Be prepared for a report in a few years to the effect that we have more poverty than ever and still bigger spending will have to occur to alleviate it.

Respect for Law

It is ironic that Governor Love chose to send us his letter on "economic opportunity" attached to an expensive report just completed by the governor's committee on "Respect for the Law."

It is obvious to any save the most obtuse that if law is to be respected, it must first of all be deserving of respect. And how in the world can we teach people to respect the law when the law is engaged in looting them and in paying out huge sums to the non-productive, the lazy, or even those who may temporarily be down on their luck?

It is, of course, a matter of record that disrespect for the law is growing by leaps and bounds. But it is not growing nearly as rapidly as the massive bundles of new law for which few of us can have any respect.

Now, the fact is that most of us have respect for people who are peacefully pursuing their own business. We have a great respect for organized efforts conducted in orderly, constructive and productive manner. We don't approve of criminal actions, invasions of human rights, violence and other anti-social and anti-moral procedures. And the only time that law ever deserves the slightest respect is when it is in harmony with natural law and the peaceful and orderly rights of individuals.

Certainly, crime is on the increase. But the sum total of all the illegal crime committed in this state, in terms of dollar costs, doesn't begin to equal the sum total of all the money taken from us legally by the very laws we are now told that we must respect.

Governments, it is claimed, perform one of their most useful functions by setting an example. This is the reason given for many utterly indefensible laws, such as the Civil Rights Act. Here is an invasion of the area of private prejudice in which the government proposes to punish anyone who doesn't evince "brotherly love." And we are advised that the real merit of this law is that by setting the example, the law will cause people to love those against whom they presently reveal an unreasoning prejudice.

Well, if governments set examples, then how can we hope to engender respect for law when, by law, governments lead the world in looting and plundering their unfortunate subjects? If this is an example, we need look no further to establish one of the reasons for the increase in crime. Crime is nothing more nor less than invasions against the private and property rights of persons. But if government is setting the example and leading in such invasions, how is it possible to prevent private persons from emulating this example?

Big crime and big government go hand in hand. They always have. As governments set ever larger examples of their ability to "get away" with property and money belonging to others, it is predictable that private persons, envious of this "easy money" route, will endeavor to do so, too. They will either seek to find loopholes in the law and thus avoid unpleasant consequences; or they will seek to find loopholes in the network of policing, and thus avoid detection.

Now, if government men are really and truly serious about getting people to respect the hundreds of thousands of pieces of paper they enact as law, they could begin by repealing the laws which simply aren't respectable.

As laws diminish in number and in scope, growing respect would accumulate for those remaining. And if government would repeal every single law which ran contrary to natural law and the rights of man, beginning with the tax laws, we suspect there would be an immediate improvement in the general moral outlook. As we stated before, respect is engendered naturally for PEOPLE, not for law. And the people who win respect are those who, by their conduct, inspire it.

It is interesting that among the remarks made to the governor's committee by persons interviewed was this: "The single standard (of morality) needs to be practiced as well as preached." Precisely so. And that means that if we are to have the same respect for law that we have for people, it will occur when those in government do not set themselves up in special categories, presuming that by some process they are above the law of nature and above the law of sanctity of property, including incomes, and conduct themselves accordingly.

BAN COMMUNISM?

To the Editor:

This letter is concerning the report J. Edgar Hoover made on the activities of the Communist Party among the youth of America.

After reading the article the first thing you think is: "Communism ought to be banned." But I suggest that you look further into the question. I say for one that banning communism would serve no purpose and that such a law would not succeed any more than the prohibition amendment of the 1920's. Banning something is not getting rid of it; the susceptibility to that something is still there, law or no law.

The only way we can solve this problem is to educate the children of America from littlest up that freedom is right and why it is right. If everyone in this country believed wholeheartedly that the individual and free enterprise was the root of all progress, we would have no such problems.

The way to fight communism in this country is not through the use of law playing the part of the censor, but through education. Everyone should be educated in the horrors of communism and in the great joy of freedom. Then one would look at these two things and decide which he wanted for himself and his children.

Communism only breeds on the grounds of ignorance. I say if the communists are going to set up such organizations on today's college campuses and elsewhere that we set up bigger and better organizations dedicated to freedom, the individual, and free enterprise, right to the side of them. Only then can we beat communism and win.

The youth of today are the leaders of tomorrow; if they do not believe in freedom, there will be no freedom of tomorrow, only slavery.

GUIDANCE

To the Editor:

Since Mr. LeFevre will soon not be writing the editorials, I am sure there are others, as well as I, who will miss some of his unique writings though yet we will still have access to good editorials. I wish Mr. LeFevre success in the operation of Freedom School. I am sure he will have if he seeks wisdom and guidance from The Omnipotent One of whom there is an abundant supply to overrule all the onslaughts of Satan, from whom comes many attacks on any good undertaking.

The Lord said nothing is impossible with Him if we have faith in Him. God is not nature because He is the inventor, the creator of nature. He made man a distinct creature from every other in that He created him with a soul, a spirit, with the freedom of choice. We are not to substitute the elements of nature for God. Those who worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth. God has always intervened in the affairs of men. We have David for an example. He prayed to God for revenge of Satan's people who hated him and God revenged him of his enemies. He still does for those who trust Him. He said vengeance belongs to Him.

Seems up to now voluntary prayer has not been outlawed at public schools, which is a very good thing for the simple reason it gives children a chance to learn about God and to reverence Him. Some of them, perhaps the majority of them never hear His name mentioned at home unless it's in profanity.

Our foreparents came to America to establish the right of freedom to worship God according to the dictates of one's conscience. The most important things in the history of man have been accomplished by prayer. Before America was founded our foreparents went to God in prayer and faith and through His wisdom and guidance we got the Bill of Rights and the Declaration of Independence. Anyone who wants to take away that right from anyone is not worthy to be called an American. They just have a form of religion but deny God's power. Had the succeeding generations kept the faith of our pioneer fathers we would not have government schools. The phrase "In God We Trust" being omitted from money would be of little importance because most people have more trust in money than in God.

It's Up to You

By H. E. KERSHNER, L.H.D.

Socialism is like a narcotic; larger and larger doses are required to satisfy the craving of the addict. To administer the larger doses, a larger bureaucracy is required. Survival being the strongest instinct, the bureaucracy fights fiercely to retain and expand its vested interests. Its safety lies in continued expansion and greater measures of control.

Socialism is not only the ownership and control of the means of production, but it soon aspires to control and distribute that which is produced. It works its way into the economic activities of the people until it becomes embedded in their thinking, their customs, their traditions, and their way of life.

Like wine, socialism is attractive in the beginning, but when it asserts its full control and enslaves the people, "At the last, it bitteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder" (Proverbs 23:32). After it fastens itself upon a people, it becomes as difficult to remove as the suction discs of an octopus. When the resources of a state are exhausted by federal extravagance and monopoly of the principal sources of revenue, how can the states get along without federal aid to education? After farmers have grown accustomed to federalized agriculture, how can they do without the subsidies? No one has yet developed a formula for unscrambling an egg. Socialism appears to be a one-way street. Like a harpoon, it can penetrate but it cannot be withdrawn.

In the end, socialism is all control and distribution with little production and not much to distribute. We are reminded of the Soviet inspector who inquired of the collective farm worker about the potato crop. "It's fine", said the worker. "If we stacked our sacks of potatoes in one big pile, it would reach clear up to God." "You know there is no God," said the inspector. "Yes," said the worker, "but neither are there any potatoes."

So, we have a large measure of socialism and most of our political leaders are trying to bribe us with more in return for votes. Many of us, like Paul, are about ready to cry out:

"Oh wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" (Romans 7:24).

When one realistically takes stock of our situation including the astronomical indebtedness—federal, state, local and private — when he considers the adverse trade balance year after year and the fact that the foreign claims against our gold are nine times greater than our so called free gold available for payment, one may well have some feeling of kinship with the writer of Revelation when he said:

"Because thou sayest, I am rich, and increased with goods, and have need of nothing; and knoweth not that thou are wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind, and naked" (Rev. 3:17).

Wit and Whimsy

A new maid had been employed for a special occasion. The mistress was a little dubious about her.

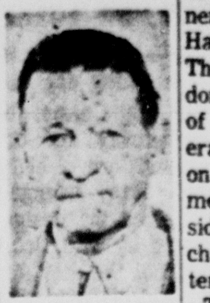
Mistress: "Now, Mary, when you are in the dining room tonight I want you to be careful and not spill anything."

Mary: "You can count on me, ma'am. I don't talk much."

The Local Scene

Interesting News

By RUFUS L. PORTER



I was particularly intrigued tonight with the page of church pictures on 10-A of the Gazette Telegraph, and with the news items on page 11-A.

I find much to commend in the new forms of church architecture. A new trend is setting in which can be called distinctly American and the architects are showing great skill and imagination in these new designs in all sections of the country.

The Air Force Academy chapel was among the new-style churches pictured. This was the only taxbuilt structure on the page, and there was quite a controversy over the design before Congress authorized the money for the building. I was among the many who did not like the design, and also among those who believe the government has no business building churches.

I still do not like the looks of the chapel exterior, it does not fit at all into the mountain setting. And the same can be said for all the glass and aluminum buildings on the Academy site. They look as though they belong in some other setting. They do not blend into the scenery as they should. As an example of what I mean, take a good look at the former Woodmen Sanitorium. Those buildings, except the latest one added by the Sisters of St. Francis, who now own it, blend well into the setting and look very much as though they were designed with that intent.

The new building added by the Sisters rather spoils the effect. It is a chapel, I believe.

But, after seeing the interior of the Air Force Academy, I must admit that it is very beautiful inside.

But the chapel is not the only church in the Pikes Peak area that has the modern look. Most of the new churches in and around Colorado Springs have departed from the old traditional forms of architecture and advanced boldly and beautifully into the new. I predict that some mighty fine and inspiring churches are going to grow from the new American trend in church architecture.

As for page 11-A, the first thing I noticed was the headline in the upper lefthand corner: "Silver Price Reported in Hands of U.S. Government." The news item came from London and it stated that the price of silver for 1965, and for several years to come, depended on the United States government's policy towards its subsidiary coinage, meaning small change, especially dimes, quarters and half-dollars.

The article stated that if the government decides to retain the silver content of its change coinage, then "the world price will rise rather steeply in the not too distant future." But, if the government decides to make wooden, paper or plastic coins, "which seems likely," according to the item, then "no great change in the price of silver is envisaged for the next several years."

The article goes on to say that when our treasury is out of silver, or if and when we put restrictions on its sale or its export is forbidden, the price will immediately rise to above the $1.38 an ounce point and the U.S. subsidiary change would disappear into the melting pot.

A non-silver coinage decision on the part of Congress will affect adversely the world (London) silver market and silver would probably be bought at lower than the treasury's present selling price of $1.29 per ounce, says the article. This would cause those in London who have built up large reserves of silver to lose considerable money.

Whatever happens in the silver market, Uncle Sam is going to take the blame for it. And this time he will deserve it. The silver "shortage" would be quickly cured if the citizens could be convinced that we had a sound money. But the government has done several things in the recent past to make us all doubt the soundness of printing-press dollars that are no more than the promises of a government already on the verge of bankruptcy.

The government's decision on silver will affect, one way or another, the economy of the state of Colorado, which can produce silver in large quantities if it ever becomes profitable to do so.

'The Great Society'

By BUTLER D. SHAFFER

The framework for "The Great Society" has now been outlined, and few were the people who were surprised at its structure. True to the dictates of "smart politics," there will be something for everyone except, of course, for the man who wants his freedom. The new plan will further the system of mutual parasitism, where one group of men steal from another which in turn steals from yet another, and so forth, and where the only ones who can come out ahead are the politicians.

If the lettuce growers of Florida are not satisfied with the prices they receive (and who ever does receive as much money as they would like), they will presumably get a government subsidy for their crop, paid for in part by the Kansas wheat farmers. The wheat farmers will likewise demand a subsidy, paid for in part by—you guessed it—the Florida lettuce growers. Now if A takes $10 from B, who then turns around and takes $10 from A, it is easily seen that not only immoral acts of theft are involved, but that neither A nor B have benefitted by the process. But let a middle man come along—like the government—and the whole process becomes enshrouded with the aura and dignity of "statesmanship." Now the middle man, or the government, takes $10 from B and gives $7 to A, and also takes $10 from A and gives $7 to B. What happens to the $6 taken from A and B but not "re-distributed" back to them? Why, that's the fee that must be paid to the government for the fine "services" it performed in this transaction—just part of the price of living in our "progressive and civilized" Great Society.

This whole process is reminiscent of the old Chinese fable where every family was responsible for taking in the laundry of every other family, and makes just about as much sense. Men, over the centuries, have advanced to the point where they can fly to the stars, conquer innumerable diseases, transmit sights and sounds around the world, split the atom and use its power to propel airplanes and produce electrical power. With all of these wonders of man's rational, creative faculties, one can only wonder in shocked amazement that he yet clings, superstitiously and tenaciously, to the myth of government. It is an anachronism that should have been discarded with witch doctors, temple sacrifices, "flat-earth" geography, and sea serpents.

Just as any man who believes in war deserves a place in the front lines, so too any man who believes in government deserves all the coercion that he gets. But unfortunately, in both cases, the "non-believers" are made to suffer as well. So it will be with "The Great Society." While the parasites all seek to outbid each other for government favors, you and I will be forced to take our places on the auction block.

These are the sad truths concerning the ways of government—all governments. As long as men acknowledge the premise on which government rests—the premise of force—these same men will have to bear the consequences which follow. All government is force; all government is war, of some men against others, and such a permise cannot be the foundation of a peaceful society.

It is, therefore, with concern and resentment that I await the remainder of Mr. Johnson's programs, although I can certainly anticipate their content. But as I read through the outline of this man's dream of his "Great Society," I can only think upon an earlier generation of men, and of their vision of an even greater society, a "Free Society," and wonder if men shall ever achieve the maturity to deserve it.

QUICK QUIZ

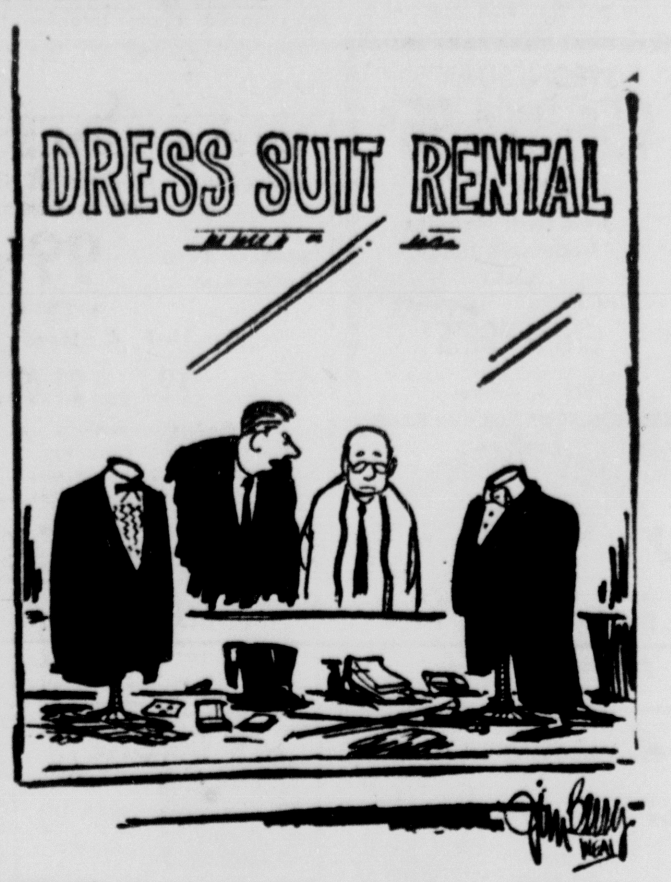
Q—What was the largest meteor ever seen to fall in the United States?

A—A stony meteorite which fell in Furnas County, Nebraska, on Feb. 18, 1948. It weighed more than a ton.

Q—Where is the original home of the Gypsies?

A—The origin of the people we call Gypsies is obscure, but anthropologists believe their early roots were in India. For a long time it was believed they originated in Egypt — hence the misnomer, "Egyptian," or "Gypsy."

BERRY'S WORLD



"'Don't risk our prosperity,' you said . . . 'vote for Johnson,' you said . . ."

These Days

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

Since President Lyndon Johnson is becoming more and more committed to the phrase, "The Great Society," to describe the "substance of things hoped for" by his administration during the next four years and after, it might be good to have a look at the origins of the term. It did not spring full-blown from the head of anybody in the White House entourage. Its first use, so far as I have been able to determine, was by Graham Wallas, an English Fabian Socialist, who wrote a book back before World War I that was called "The Great Society."

Recalling my salad days (very green) as an undergraduate reader in political philosophy who had had a "Graham Wallas period" and had since passed beyond it, I concluded a column early last autumn with a somewhat sarcastic question, asking the President if he were aware of the Socialist origins of the term he had fixed upon. No answer was expected to my mild bit of campaign rhetoric, and none was forthcoming. The President, as a pragmatic sort of person, would not in any event care much about the past connotations of a phrase which he intends to pump full of new meaning.

HAZY THEORIES.

Nevertheless, it is enlightening to see the correspondences between Wallas's idea of the organization of a "Great Society" and Johnson's own theorizing about the same. To do Wallas complete justice, he was a very mild type of collectivist reformer. He was given to talk about the "will-organization" of human beings along lines that would blend the principles of individualism and socialism, and he was greatly preoccupied with "the organization of human happiness," which he considered much more important than the production of wealth.

He definitely had a "mixed economy" in mind, but his ideas about the proper methods of mixing private and public ownership and control were, to say the least, hazy. Contemplating the idea of "nationalizing" railroads and mines, he wonders about the practicality of creating new joint stock companies in which the state will have a dominating role, with the original shareholders becoming "receivers of a fixed annual sum" and taking "a temporary right to a minority of seats on a new 'governing body'." Trying to visualize for himself a "picture of the social system which I should desire for England and America," he recalls "those Norwegian towns and villages where everyone, the shopkeepers and the artisans, the schoolmaster, the boy who drove the post-ponies, and the student daughter of the innkeeper who took round the potatoes, seemed to respect themselves, to be capable of happiness as well as of pleasure and excitement, because they were nearer the mean in the employment of all their faculties."

'DEHUMANIZED'

He imagines "such people learning to exploit the electric power from their waterfalls, and the minerals in their mountains, without dividing themselves into dehumanized employers or officials, and equally dehumanized 'hands'." He also recollects that the "salt and savor of Norwegian life depends on the fact that poets, and artists, and statesmen have worked in Norway with a devotion which was not directed by any formula of moderation." (Shades of Barry Goldwater!)

Graham Wallas's text dates back to 1914, and it carries a dedication to the young Walter Lippmann, who was just emerging at the time from a chrysalis of socialism as a disciple of Wallas and the late muckraker, Lincoln Steffens. What is interesting about it now is the tone-feeling of the work, with its preoccupation with spreading happiness around. Wallas wanted to create small parks in our industrial cities, he wanted to provide special transportation services to get working men out into the green fields of the countryside. He wanted more beauty everywhere. Whether by imitation of Graham Wallas or because he comes by his ideas naturally, Lyndon Johnson stressed the same preoccupation with spreading happiness around in his State of the Union message.

Whether the big state can "organize happiness" is, of course, a question that has still to be settled.

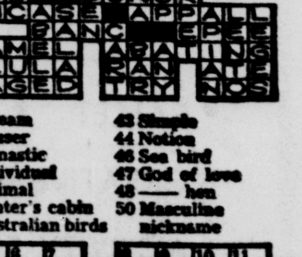
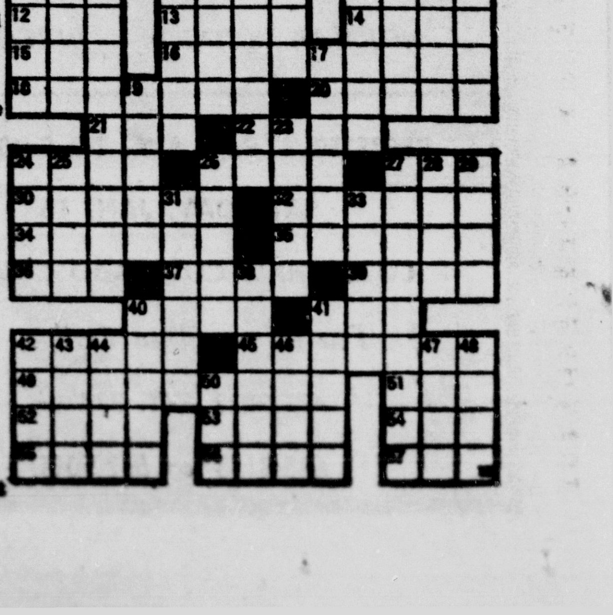
Answer to Previous Puzzle





– Text of LBJ's Education Message –

WASHINGTON (AP) — The text of President Johnson's message to Congress on education:

To the Congress of the United States:

In 1787, the Continental Congress declared in the Northwest Ordinance:

"Schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged."

America is strong and prosperous and free because for 178 years we have honored that commitment.

In the United States today:

One-quarter of all Americans are in the nation's classrooms

High school attendance has grown 18-fold since the turn of the century — six times as fast as the population.

College enrollment has advanced 80-fold. Americans today support a fourth of the world's institutions of higher learning and a third of its professors and college students.

In the life of the individual, education is always an unfinished task.

And in the life of this nation, the advancement of education is a continuing challenge.

There is a darker side to education in America:

One student out of every three now in the fifth grade will drop out before finishing school — if the present rate continues.

Almost a million young people will continue to quit school each year — if our schools fail to stimulate their desire to learn.

Over 100,000 of our brightest high school graduates each year will not go to college — and many others will leave college — if the opportunity for higher education is not expanded.

The cost of this neglect runs high — both for the youth and the nation.

Unemployment of young people with an eighth-grade education or less is four times the national average.

Jobs filled by high school graduates rose by 40 per cent in the last ten years. Jobs for those with less schooling decreased by nearly 10 per cent.

We can measure the cost in even starker terms. We now spend about $450 a year per child in our public schools. But we spend $1,800 a year to keep a delinquent youth in a detention home, $2,500 a year for a family on relief, $3,500 a year for a criminal in state prison.

The growing numbers of young people reaching school age demand that we move swiftly even to stand still.

Attendance in elementary and secondary schools will increase by four million in the next five years. Four hundred thousand new classrooms will be needed to meet this growth. But over 1½ million of the nation's existing classrooms are already more than 30 years old.

The post-World War II boom in babies has now reached college age. And by 1970, our colleges must be prepared to add 50 per cent more enrollment to their presently overcrowded facilities.

In the past, Congress has supported an increasing commitment to education in America. Last year, I signed historic measures passed by the 88th Congress to provide:

Facilities badly needed by universities, colleges and community colleges;

Major new resources for vocational training;

More loans and fellowships for students enrolled in higher education;

Enlarged and improved training for physicians, dentists and nurses.

I propose that the 89th Congress join me in extending the commitment still further. I propose that we declare a national goal of full educational opportunity.

Every child must be encouraged to get as much education as he has the ability to take.

We want this not only fo his sake — but for the nation's sake.

Nothing matters more to the future of our country: not our military preparedness — for armed might is worthless if we lack the brain power to build a world of peace; not our productive economy — for we cannot sustain growth without trained manpower; not our democratic system of government — for freedom is fragile if citizens are ignorant.

We must demand that our schools increase not only the quantity but the quality of America's education. For we recognize that nuclear age problems cannot be solved with horse-and-buggy learning. The three R's of our school system must be supported by the three T's—teachers who are superior, techniques of instruction that are modern, and thinking about education which places it first in all our plans and hopes.

Specifically, four major tasks confront us:

To bring better education to millions of disadvantaged youth who need it most;

To put the best educational equipment and ideas and innovations within reach of all students;

To advance the technology of teaching and the training of teachers;

To provide incentives for those who wish to learn at every stage along the road to learning.

Our program must match the magnitude of these tasks. The budget on education which I request for fiscal year 1966 will contain a total of $4.1 billion. This includes $1.1 billion to finance programs established by the 88th Congress.

I will submit a request for $1.5 billion in new obligational authority to finance the programs described in this message.

This expenditure is a small price to pay for developing our nation's most priceless resource.

In all that we do, we mean to strengthen our state and community education systems. Federal assistance does not mean federal control — as past programs have proven.

The late Sen. Robert Taft declared: "Education is primarily a state function — but in the field of education, as in the fields of health, relief and medical care, the federal government has a secondary obligation to see that there is a basic floor under those essential services for all adults and children in the United States."

In this spirit, I urge that we now push ahead with the No. 1 business of the American people -- the education of our youth in preschools, elementary and secondary schools, and in the colleges and universities

I. Preschool program

My budget will include up to $150 million for preschool projects under the community action program of the Economic Opportunity Act.

Education must begin with the very young. The child from the urban or rural slum frequently misses his chance even before he begins school.

Tests show that he is usually a year behind in academic attainment by the time he reaches eighth grade.

By then the handicap has grown too great for many children. Their horizons have narrowed; their prospects for lifetimes of failure have hardened. A large percentage of our young people whose family incomes are less than $2,000 do not go beyond the eighth grade.

Preschool programs have demonstrated marked success in overcoming this initial handicap:

In New York City, children from slum neighborhoods who attended nursery school have performed better when tested in the third and fourth grades than those who did not attend.

In Baltimore, children with language and cultural handicaps are being helped greatly by a preschool program. According to preliminary reports, 2-3 of them are in the top 50 per cent of their kindergarden and first-grade classes on a citywide measure; 1-6 of them are in the top quarter.

But today, almost half of our school districts conduct no kindergarten classes. Public nursery schools are found in only about 100 of our 26,000 school districts. We must expand our preschool program in order to reach disadvantaged children early.

Action on a wide front will begin this summer through a special "head-start" program for children who are scheduled to begin school next fall. In addition, funds for low - income schools, regional education laboratories, and supplementary educational centers and services (recommended below) will be devoted to these vital preschool programs.

II. Elementary and secondary schools

Elementary and secondary schools are the foundation of our education system.

Forty-eight million students are now in our grade and high schools. Seventy-one per cent of the nation's expenditures for education are spent on elementary and secondary schooling.

If these schools are to do their job properly, they need help and they need it now. I propose that we give first priority to a program of:

A. Aid to low-income school districts.

I recommend that legislation be enacted to authorize a major program of assistance to public elementary and secondary schools serving children of low-income families. My budget for fiscal year 1966 will request a billion dollars for this new program.

One hundred years ago, a man with six or seven years of schooling stood well above the average. His chances to get ahead were as good as the next man's. But today, lack of formal education is likely to mean low wages, frequent unemployment, and a home in an urban or rural slum.

Poverty has many roots but the tap root is ignorance.

Poverty is the lot of two-thirds of the families in which the family head has had eight years or less of schooling.

Twenty per cent of the youth aged 18-24 with an eighth-grade education or less are unemployed — four times the national average.

Just as ignorance breeds poverty, poverty all too often breeds ignorance in the next generation.

Nearly half the youths rejected by Selective Service for educational deficiency have fathers who are unemployed or else working in unskilled and low-income jobs.

Fathers of more than one-half of the draft rejectees did not complete the eighth grade.

The burden on the nation's schools is not evenly distributed. Low-income families are heavily concentrated in particular urban neighborhoods or rural areas. This imbalance has been increased by the movement of high-income families from the center of cities to the suburbs — and their replacement by low-income families from rural areas.

The five states with the lowest incomes spend only an average of $276 per pupil, less than half the average of the five highest income states.

Desipe a massive effort, our big cities generally spend only about 2-3 as much per pupil as their adjacent suburbs.

In our fifteen largest cities, 60 per cent of the tenth-grade students from poverty neighborhoods drop out before finishing high school.

This is a national problem. Federal action is needed to assist the states and localities in bringing the full benefits of education to children of low-income families.

Assistance will be provided.

On the basis of census data showing the distribution of low-income families among the counties or school districts within states.

Through payments made to states for distribution to school districts.

With the assurance that the funds will be used for improving the quality of education in schools serving low-income areas.

On the condition that federal funds will not be used to reduce state and local fiscal efforts.

For the benefit of all children within the area served, including those who participate in shared services or other special educational projects.

B. School library resources and instructional materials.

I recommend legislation to authorize federal grants to states to assist in the purchase of books for school libraries and for student use, to be made available to children in public and private nonprofit elementary and secondary schools.

Thomas Carlyle once said, "All that mankind has done, thought, gained or been: it is lying as in magic preservation in the pages of books."

Yet our school libraries are limping along.

Almost 70 per cent of the public elementary schools have no libraries. Eighty-four per cent lack librarians to teach children the value of learning through good books.

Many schools have an average of less than ½ book per child.

To meet the accepted standards for library materials would require a four-fold increase in current expenditures in our major cities.

The explosion of knowledge and the rapid revision of curricula in the schools has created new demands for school textbooks. The obsolete text can suffocate the learning process. Yet the cost of purchasing textbooks at increasing prices puts a major obstacle in the path of education — an obstacle that can and must be eliminated.

C. Supplementary educational centers and services

I recommend a program of federal grants for supplementary education centers and services within the community.

We think of schools as places where youth learns, but our schools also need to learn.

The educational gap we face is one of quality as well as quantity.

Exciting experiments in education and other government ported by the National Science Foundation, by the Office of Education and other government agencies, and by private philanthropic foundations. Many of our children have studied the "new" math. There are highly effective ways of teaching high school physics, biology, chemistry, and foreign languages.

We need to take full advantage of these and other innovations. Specialists can spark the interest of disadvantaged students. Remedial reading courses open up new vistas for slow learners. Gifted students can be bought along at a faster pace.

Yet such special educational services are not available in many communities. A limited local tax base cannot stand the expense. Most individual schools are not large enough to justify the services.

The supplementary center can provide such services as:

Special courses in science, foreign languages, literature, music, and art.

Programs for the physically handicapped and mentally retarded.

Instruction in the sciences and humanities during the summer for economically and culturally deprived children.

Special assistance after regular school hours.

A system by which gifted persons can teach part time to provide scarce talents.

A means of introducing in the school system new courses, instructional materials, and teaching practices.

A way of tapping the community's extracurricular resources for the benefit of students — museums, concert and lecture programs, and industrial laboratories.

Within each community, public and private nonprofit schools and agencies will cooperate to devise the plan and administer the program for these supplementary centers. Their services should be adapted to meet the pressing needs of each locality.

D. Regional education laboratories.

I recommend the establishment under the Cooperative Research Act of regional educational laboratories which will undertake research, train teachers, and implement tested research findings.

Further recommend amendments to the act to:

Broaden the types of research organizations now eligible for educational projects.

Train educational research personnel.

Provide grants for research, development of new curricula, dissemination of information, and implementation of educational innovations.

Support construction of research facilities and the purchase of research equipment.

Under auspices of the National Science Foundation, educators have worked with scientists — including Nobel laureates — to develop courses which capture the excitement of contemporary science.

They have prepared totally new instructional materials — laboratory equipment, text books, teachers' guides, films, supplementary reading and examinations. After testing, they are made available to public and private schools.

We need to extend our research and development — to history, literature, and economics; to art and music ;to reading, writing, and speaking; to occupational, vocational, and technical education.

We need to extend it to all stages of learning — preschool, elementary and secondary schools, college and graduate training.

Regional laboratories for education offer great promise. They draw equally upon educators and the practitioners in all fields of learning — mathematicians, scientists, social scientists, linguists, musicians, artists, and writers.

E. Strengthening state educational agencies.

I recommend a program of grants to state educational agencies.

State leadership becomes increasingly important as we seek to improve the quality of elementary and secondary education.

We should assist the states by strengthening state departments of education in their efforts to:

Provide consultative and technical assistance for local school districts and local school leadership.

Improve local and state information about education.

Identify emerging educational problems.

Provide for the training of state and local education personnel.

Conduct periodic evaluation of educational programs.

Promote teacher improvement courses.

These new programs will substantially augment community resources in the war against poverty. As provided by Sections 611 and 612 of the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964, I will see that the new efforts are kept in step with our other antipoverty efforts.

In those localities where the community has undertaken a community action program under the Economic Opportunity Act, the community agency should participate in the planning of these new educational programs and in their coordination with on-going and developing antipoverty efforts.

Enactment of these proposals for elementary and secondary education is of utmost urgency. I urge early and favorable consideration by the Congress.

III. Higher education

Higher education is no longer a luxury, but a necessity.

Programs enacted by Congress in the past have contributed greatly to strengthening our colleges and universities. These will be carried forward under my 1966 budget, which includes:

An additional $179 million to assist construction of college classrooms, libraries and laboratories.

An additional $25 million for 4,500 more graduate fellowships to overcome college teaching shortages.

An additional $110 million to further basic research in the universities; to provide science fellowships and to promote science education.

But we need to do more:

To extend the opportunity for higher education more broadly among lower-and middle-income families.

To help small and less well-developed colleges improve their programs.

To enrich the library resources of colleges and universities.

To draw upon the unique and inavaluable resources of our great universities to deal with national problems of poverty and community development.

A. Assistance to students

1. Scholarships

I recommend a program of scholarships for needy and qualified high school graduates to enable them to enter and to continue in college.

Loans authorized by the National Defense Education Act currently assist nearly 300,000 college students. Still the following conditions exist:

Each year an estimated 100,000 young people of demonstrated ability fail to go on to college because of lack of money. Many thousands more from low-income families must borrow heavily to meet college costs:

Only one out of three young people from low-income families attend college compared with four out of five from high-income families.

For many young people from poor families loans are not enough to open the way to higher education.

Under this program, a special effort will be made to identify needy students of promise early in their high school careers. The scholarship will serve as a building block, to be augmented by work-study and other support, so that the needy student can chart his own course in higher studies.

My 1966 budget provides sufficient funds for grants to help up to 140,000 students in the first year.

2. Expansion of work - study opportunity and guaranteed low-interest loans.

I recommend:

That the existing college work-study program be made available to more students and that authority for the program be transferred to the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

That a part of he cost of interest payments on guaranteed private loans to college students be paid by the federal government.

Going to college is increasingly expensive. A student must pay nearly $2,400 a year in a private college and about $1,600 in a public college. These costs may rise by one-third over the next decade.

Two aids should be extended o meet the heavy costs of college education. First, the existing work-study program should be expanded for students from low-income families and extended to students from middle-income families. Under this program the federal government pays 90 per cent of the wages earned by students on useful projects. This will enable a student to earn on the average of $450 during a school year, and up to $500 more during the summer.

Second, many families cannot cover all of college expenses on an out-of-pocket basis. We should assure greater availability of private credit on reasonable terms and conditions. This can best be done by paying part of interest cost of guaranteed loans made by private lenders—a more effective, fairer, and far less costly way of providing assistance than the various tax credit devices which have been proposed.

B. Aid to smaller colleges

I recommend that legislation be enacted to strengthen less-developed colleges.

Many of our smaller colleges are battling for survival. About 10 per cent lack proper accreditation, and others face constantly the threat of losing accreditation. Many are isolated from the main currents of academic life.

Private sources and states alone cannot carry the whole burden of doing what must be done for these important units in our total educational system. Federal aid is essential.

Universities should be encouraged to enter into cooperative relationships to help less-developed colleges, including such assistance as:

A program of faculty exchanges.

Special programs to enable faculty members of small colleges to renew and extend knowledge of their fields.

A national fellowship program to encourage highly qualified young graduate students and instructors in large universities to augment the teaching resources of small colleges.

The development of joint programs to make more efficient use of available facilities and faculty.

In union there is strength. This is the basic premise of my recommendation.

C. Support for college library resources.

I recommend enactment of legislation for purchase of books and library materials to strengthen college teaching and research.

Fifty per cent of our four-year institutions and 82 per cent of our two-year institutions fall below accepted professional standards in the number of volumes possessed.

As student enrollment mounts, we must look not only to the physical growth of our colleges and universities, they must be developed as true centers of intellectual activity. To construct a library building is meaningless unless there are books to bring life to the library.

D. University-community extension program.

I recommend a program of grants to support university extension concentrating on the problems of the community.

Institutions of higher learning are being called on ever more frequently for public service — for defense research in foreign development, and countless other programs. They have performed magnificently, We must now call upon them to meet new needs.

Once, 90 per cent of our population earned its living from the land.

A wise Congress enacted the Morrill Act of 1862 and the Hatch Act of 1887 which helped the state universities help the American people. With the aid of the land grant colleges, American agriculture produced overwhelming abundance.

Today, 70 per cent of our people live in urban communities. They are confronted by problems of poverty, residential blight, polluted air and water, inadequate mass transportation and health services, strained human relations, and overburdened municipal services.

Our great universities have the skills and knowledge to match these mountainous problems. They can offer expert guidance in community planning; research and development in pressing educational problems; economic and job market studies; continuing education of the community's professional and business leadership; and programs for the disadvantaged.

The role of the university must extend far beyond the ordinary extension-type operation. Its research findings and talents must be made available to the community. Faculty must be called upon for consulting activities. Pilot projects, seminars, conferences, TV programs and task forces drawing on many departments of the university — all should be brought into play.

This is a demanding assignment for the universties, and many are not now ready for it. The time has come for us to help the university to face problems of the city as it once faced problems of the farm.

E. Specal manpower needs.

We must also ask the colleges and universities to help overcome certain acute deficiencies in trainod manpower. At least 100,000 more professional librarians are needed for service in public libraries and in schools and colleges. We need 140,000 more teachers for handicapped children.

I recommend:

Grants to institutions of higher education for training of school, college, and community librarians and related services.

Extension and expansion of grants for training teachers and handicapped children.

In 1838, Mirabeau B. Lamar, the second president of the Republic of Texas and the father of Texas education, declared: "The cultivated mind is the guardian genius of democracy. It is the only dictator that free man acknowledges. It is the only security that free man desires."

Throughout the history of our nation, the United States has recognized this truth. But during the periods when the country has been most astir with creative activity, when it most keenly sensed the sturdiness of the old reaching out for the vigor of the new, it has given special attention to its educational system.

This was true in the expansive 1820's and 30's, when the American people acted decisively to build a public school system for the lower grades.

It was no less true at the vigorous turn of the 20th century, when high schools were developed for the millions.

Again, during the questing 1930's, fresh ideas stirred the traditions of the ruler and blackboard.

We are now embarked on another venture to put the American dream to work in meeting the new demands for a new day. Once again we must start where men who would improve the society have always known they must begin — with an educational system restudied, reinforced, and revitalized.

Africans Still Don't Want Whites to Leave

By WILLIAM L. Ryan

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The black African seems to be telling the white man: "Get out -- but please don't go."

In a continent so vast, so diverse, made up of so many nations, languages and cultures, all generalizations are dangerous. But conversations with African leaders indicate it is safe to make a few:

— There is an ambivalent attitude toward Europeans and Americans. Many African leaders say privately they want and need cooperation from the white world. Some — again in private — frankly criticized African vilifcation of the West after the rescue of hostages from the Congolese rebels. Publicly, however, those who deplored the vituperation preferred to remain silent.

— There is bewilderment among some Africans at being thrust suddenly onto the world stage, blinded by a limelight to which they are unaccustomed; befuddled at sudden enormous problems confronting new countries.

— There is resentment at the idea that Africans are incapable of managing themselves, at the idea that ignorance and illiteracy preclude self-management.

— The slogan of "African unity" is mostly an empty one. There is little prospect of unity. Africa is many different nations wrapped up in one huge continent, with innumerable languages. Sub-Sahara Africa has ancient, local tribal customs which set one group apart from another. The tribal makeup affects the problems of new nations which retain paternalistic traditions and lean naturally toward one-man rule.

— There are frustrations for intellectuals from whose thin ranks the leaders must come. The frustrations seem to feed an inferiority complex impelling some to bristle even at a question which, however carefully phrased, implies African shortcomings.

A substantial number of Africans, say their representatives, want to remain on good terms with Europe and the United States. They may want the white man to get out, in the sense that he should have no rights to influence policies or interfere in African affairs. But they want him to stay in Africa with his known-how and his technology, to guide them toward viability.

Those representatives of Africa who are fearful of cutting ties with the West will say so, however, only to those they know and trust. Expressing such ideas aloud can lead to difficulties.

Those representatives of Africa who are fearful of cutting ties with the West will say so, however, only to those they know and trust. Expressing such ideas aloud can lead to difficulties.

Jaja Wachuku of Nigaria gratified some of his African colleagues last month when he went counter to a chorus of Anti-American condemnation at the United Nations. He paid a price: angry repudiation by his own political party at home. Public defense of the U.S. role in the Congo can create issues between one African country and another and feed ammunition to politicians.

U.N. — Gal 2 African relations

African diplomats who have kind words for the United States often decline to be identified by name or nation, an even these are critical of Americans.

"The United States," says one, "agreed the Congo should be isolated from the Cold War. We worked for this. But the effort collapsed because of the Americans."

He referred to U.S. support for Moise Tshombe as Congo premier. He held it incomprehensible that Americans could do this after the U.N. — with American blessing — fought to oust Tshombe as a secessionist leader of Katanga Province.

African intellectuals refer time and again to events in Mississippi.

"Americans have friends," said one diplomat, "but their friends are embarrassed. When bullets are fired at people trying to rebuild a burned church in Mississippi, is that any more excusable than the killing of missionaries in the Congo? I was ashamed of the Congo killing, and no sane African approved it. but can you talk about the Congo in view of the things that happened in Missis- things that happened in Mississippi"

African leaders and intellectuals have adopted many ready-made labels — imperialism, colonialism, neocolonialism — in lodging their complaints against the United States. But they, in turn, accuse Americans of being victims of cliches: leftism, Communist infiltration, Communist subversion, anti-Americanism.

"No country in Africa is Communist," said one diplomat. "You are the victim of labels. Your whole policy is negative.

Some leaders express gratification for such efforts as the Peace Corps. But, said one, U.S. policy seems to demand a flatchoice: pro-West or anti-West.

Conversation with African representatives in the United States gives the impression that they are worried about their small corps of intellectuals and students at home. Frustrations often impel young men to adopt the prefabricated slogans, to associate themselves with Communist ideas because they blame all their troubles on a history of colonialism, and thus to seek common cause with Communists against the West. They are familiar only with the West's brand of colonialism.

Independence — often in nations far from prepared for it — has burdened the small intellectual elite with infuriating problems. Many have found that independence is an expensive affair, profitable for a small group but requiring all the trappings of nationhood.

In many cases, African democracy turns out to be another form of dictatorship, or at least of "planned development." Thrust into the 20th Century with stunning suddenness, Africans have had no time to build foundations for representative government.

"Give us time," says one of their representatives. "Try to understand. We are doing the best we can with what little we have."

Edison's Home May Become Monument

MILAN, Ohio (AP) — As a boy, Thomas A. Edison could look out from the red brick house on Choate's Lane and see prairie schooners headed for California.

The house hasn't changed much since Edison's father built it in the early 1840's. The Department of the Interior now has it listed as one of 27 sites eligible for national historical status.

Edison was born there in 1847. He moved away with his parents seven years later, but the house still remains the property of the Edison family.

The house is stocked with Edison memorabilia and is maintained by an association under Edison's daughter, Mrs. John E. Sloan, and curator Albert E. Galbraith Jr.

Rare Malay Bear Cub Gets Attention

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — The rare Malay sun bear cub at the Cincinnati Zoo is getting a lot of attention, but not from its papa. The papa bear probably would kill it.

The cub — only the second ever to be born in the United States and survive — was taken from its mother Monday and placed in the zoo's nursery. It has never been allowed to get close to papa bear.

A cub was born to the same pair here last year. It was killed almost immediately by the male.

"We don't know why the male does this," said zoo director William Hoff. "He probably just thinks it's a strange animal in the cage."

The second cub was born Oct. 8. Hoff said its sex was to be determined today.

DEATH TOLL RISES

– Text of LBJ's Education Message –

WASHINGTON (AP) — The text of President Johnson's message to Congress on education:

To the Congress of the United States:

In 1787, the Continental Congress declared in the Northwest Ordinance:

"Schools and the means of education shall forever be encouraged."

America is strong and prosperous and free because for 178 years we have honored that commitment.

In the United States today:

One-quarter of all Americans are in the nation's classrooms

High school attendance has grown 18-fold since the turn of the century — six times as fast as the population.

College enrollment has advanced 80-fold. Americans today support a fourth of the world's institutions of higher learning and a third of its professors and college students.

In the life of the individual, education is always an unfinished task.

And in the life of this nation, the advancement of education is a continuing challenge.

There is a darker side to education in America:

One student out of every three now in the fifth grade will drop out before finishing school — if the present rate continues.

Almost a million young people will continue to quit school each year — if our schools fail to stimulate their desire to learn.

Over 100,000 of our brightest high school graduates each year will not go to college — and many others will leave college — if the opportunity for higher education is not expanded.

The cost of this neglect runs high — both for the youth and the nation.

Unemployment of young people with an eighth-grade education or less is four times the national average.

Jobs filled by high school graduates rose by 40 per cent in the last ten years. Jobs for those with less schooling decreased by nearly 10 per cent.

We can measure the cost in even starker terms. We now spend about $450 a year per child in our public schools. But we spend $1,800 a year to keep a delinquent youth in a detention home, $2,500 a year for a family on relief, $3,500 a year for a criminal in state prison.

The growing numbers of young people reaching school age demand that we move swiftly even to stand still.

Attendance in elementary and secondary schools will increase by four million in the next five years. Four hundred thousand new classrooms will be needed to meet this growth. But over 1½ million of the nation's existing classrooms are already more than 30 years old.

The post-World War II boom in babies has now reached college age. And by 1970, our colleges must be prepared to add 50 per cent more enrollment to their presently overcrowded facilities.

In the past, Congress has supported an increasing commitment to education in America. Last year, I signed historic measures passed by the 88th Congress to provide:

Facilities badly needed by universities, colleges and community colleges;

Major new resources for vocational training;

More loans and fellowships for students enrolled in higher education;

Enlarged and improved training for physicians, dentists and nurses.

I propose that the 89th Congress join me in extending the commitment still further. I propose that we declare a national goal of full educational opportunity.

Every child must be encouraged to get as much education as he has the ability to take.

We want this not only for his sake — but for the nation's sake.

Nothing matters more to the future of our country: not our military preparedness — for armed might is worthless if we lack the brain power to build a world of peace; not our productive economy — for we cannot sustain growth without trained manpower; not our democratic system of government — for freedom is fragile if citizens are ignorant.

We must demand that our schools increase not only the quantity but the quality of America's education. For we recognize that nuclear age problems cannot be solved with horse-and-buggy learning. The three R's of our school system must be supported by the three T's—teachers who are superior, techniques of instruction that are modern, and thinking about education which places it first in all our plans and hopes.

Specifically, four major tasks confront us:

To bring better education to millions of disadvantaged youth who need it most;

To put the best educational equipment and ideas and innovations within reach of all students;

To advance the technology of teaching and the training of teachers;

To provide incentives for those who wish to learn at every stage along the road to learning.

Our program must match the magnitude of these tasks. The budget on education which I request for fiscal year 1966 will contain a total of $4.1 billion. This includes $1.1 billion to finance programs established by the 88th Congress.

I will submit a request for $1.5 billion in new obligational authority to finance the programs described in this message.

This expenditure is a small price to pay for developing our nation's most priceless resource.

In all that we do, we mean to strengthen our state and community education systems. Federal assistance does not mean federal control — as past programs have proven.

The late Sen. Robert Taft declared: "Education is primarily a state function — but in the field of education, as in the fields of health, relief and medical care, the federal government has a secondary obligation to see that there is a basic floor under those essential services for all adults and children in the United States."

In this spirit, I urge that we now push ahead with the No. 1 business of the American people -- the education of our youth in preschools, elementary and secondary schools, and in the colleges and universities

I. Preschool program

My budget will include up to $150 million for preschool projects under the community action program of the Economic Opportunity Act.

Education must begin with the very young. The child from the urban or rural slum frequently misses his chance even before he begins school.

Tests show that he is usually a year behind in academic attainment by the time he reaches eighth grade.

By then the handicap has grown too great for many children. Their horizons have narrowed; their prospects for lifetimes of failure have hardened. A large percentage of our young people whose family incomes are less than $2,000 do not go beyond the eighth grade.

Preschool programs have demonstrated marked success in overcoming this initial handicap:

In New York City, children from slum neighborhoods who attended nursery school have performed better when tested in the third and fourth grades than those who did not attend.

In Baltimore, children with language and cultural handicaps are being helped greatly by a preschool program. According to preliminary reports, 2-3 of them are in the top 50 per cent of their kindergarden and first-grade classes on a citywide measure; 1-6 of them are in the top quarter.

But today, almost half of our school districts conduct no kindergarten classes. Public nursery schools are found in only about 100 of our 26,000 school districts. We must expand our preschool program in order to reach disadvantaged children early.

Action on a wide front will begin this summer through a special "head--start" program for children who are scheduled to begin school next fall. In addition, funds for low - income schools, regional education laboratories, and supplementary educational centers and services (recommended below) will be devoted to these vital preschool programs.

II. Elementary and secondary schools

Elementary and secondary schools are the foundation of our education system.

Forty-eight million students are now in our grade and high schools. Seventy-one per cent of the nation's expenditures for education are spent on elementary and secondary schooling.

If these schools are to do their job properly, they need help and they need it now. I propose that we give first priority to a program of:

A. Aid to low-income school districts.

I recommend that legislation be enacted to authorize a major program of assistance to public elementary and secondary schools serving children of low-income families. My budget for fiscal year 1966 will request a billion dollars for this new program.

One hundred years ago, a man with six or seven years of schooling stood well above the average. His chances to get ahead were as good as the next man's. But today, lack of formal education is likely to mean low wages, frequent unemployment, and a home in an urban or rural slum.

Poverty has many roots but the tap root is ignorance.

Poverty is the lot of two-thirds of the families in which the family head has had eight years or less of schooling.

Twenty per cent of the youth aged 18-24 with an eighth-grade education or less are unemployed — four times the national average.

Just as ignorance breeds poverty, poverty all too often breeds ignorance in the next generation.

Nearly half the youths rejected by Selective Service for educational deficiency have fathers who are unemployed or else working in unskilled and low-income jobs.

Fathers of more than one-half of the draft rejectees did not complete the eighth grade.

The burden on the nation's schools is not evenly distributed. Low-income families are heavily concentrated in particular urban neighborhoods or rural areas. This imbalance has been increased by the movement of high-income families from the center of cities to the suburbs — and their replacement by low-income families from rural areas.

The five states with the lowest incomes spend only an average of $276 per pupil, less than half the average of the five highest income states.

Desipe a massive effort, our big cities generally spend only about 2-3 as much per pupil as their adjacent suburbs.

In our fifteen largest cities, 60 per cent of the tenth-grade students from poverty neighborhoods drop out before finishing high school.

This is a national problem. Federal action is needed to assist the states and localities in bringing the full benefits of education to children of low-income families.

Assistance will be provided.

On the basis of census data showing the distribution of low-income families among the counties or school districts within states.

Through payments made to states for distribution to school districts.

With the assurance that the funds will be used for improving the quality of education in schools serving low-income areas.

On the condition that federal funds will not be used to reduce state and local fiscal efforts.

For the benefit of all children within the area served, including those who participate in shared services or other special educational projects.

B. School library resources and instructional materials.

I recommend legislation to authorize federal grants to states to assist in the purchase of books for school libraries and for student use, to be made available to children in public and private nonprofit elementary and secondary schools.

Thomas Carlyle once said, "All that mankind has done, thought, gained or been: it is lying as in magic preservation in the pages of books."

Yet our school libraries are limping along.

Almost 70 per cent of the public elementary schools have no libraries. Eighty-four per cent lack librarians to teach children the value of learning through good books.

Many schools have an average of less than ½ book per child.

To meet the accepted standards for library materials would require a four-fold increase in current expenditures in our major cities.

The explosion of knowledge and the rapid revision of curricula in the schools has created new demands for school textbooks. The obsolete text can suffocate the learning process. Yet the cost of purchasing textbooks at increasing prices puts a major obstacle in the path of education — an obstacle that can and must be eliminated.

C. Supplementary educational centers and services

I recommend a program of federal grants for supplementary education centers and services within the community.

We think of schools as places where youth learns, but our schools also need to learn.

The educational gap we face is one of quality as well as quantity.

Exciting experiments in education and other government ported by the National Science Foundation, by the Office of Education and other government agencies, and by private philanthropic foundations. Many of our children have studied the "new" math. There are highly effective ways of teaching high school physics, biology, chemistry, and foreign languages.

We need to take full advantage of these and other innovations. Specialists can spark the interest of disadvantaged students. Remedial reading courses open up new vistas for slow learners. Gifted students can be bought along at a faster pace.

Yet such special educational services are not available in many communities. A limited local tax base cannot stand the expense. Most individual schools are not large enough to justify the services.

The supplementary center can provide such services as:

Special courses in science, foreign languages, literature, music, and art.

Programs for the physically handicapped and mentally retarded.

Instruction in the sciences and humanities during the summer for economically and culturally deprived children.

Special assistance after regular school hours.

A system by which gifted persons can teach part time to provide scarce talents.

A means of introducing in the school system new courses, instructional materials, and teaching practices.

A way of tapping the community's extracurricular resources for the benefit of students — museums, concert and lecture programs, and industrial laboratories.

Within each community, public and private nonprofit schools and agencies will cooperate to devise the plan and administer the program for these supplementary centers. Their services should be adapted to meet the pressing needs of each locality.

D. Regional education laboratories.

I recommend the establishment under the Cooperative Research Act of regional educational laboratories which will undertake research, train teachers, and implement tested research findings.

Further recommend amendments to the act to:

Broaden the types of research organizations now eligible for educational projects.

Train educational research personnel.

Provide grants for research, development of new curricula, dissemination of information, and implementation of educational innovations.

Support construction of research facilities and the purchase of research equipment.

Under auspices of the National Science Foundation, educators have worked with scientists — including Nobel laureates — to develop courses which capture the excitement of contemporary science.

They have prepared totally new instructional materials — laboratory equipment, text books, teachers' guides, films, supplementary reading and examinations. After testing, they are made available to public and private schools.

We need to extend our research and development — to history, literature, and economics; to art and music ;to reading, writing, and speaking; to occupational, vocational, and technical education.

We need to extend it to all stages of learning — preschool, elementary and secondary schools, college and graduate training.

Regional laboratories for education offer great promise. They draw equally upon educators and the practitioners in all fields of learning — mathematicians, scientists, social scientists, linguists, musicians, artists, and writers.

E. Strengthening state educational agencies.

I recommend a program of grants to state educational agencies.

State leadership becomes increasingly important as we seek to improve the quality of elementary and secondary education.

We should assist the states by strengthening state departments of education in their efforts to:

Provide consultative and technical assistance for local school districts and local school leadership.

Improve local and state information about education.

Identify emerging educational problems.

Provide for the training of state and local education personnel.

Conduct periodic evaluation of educational programs.

Promote teacher improvement courses.

These new programs will substantially augment community resources in the war against poverty. As provided by Sections 611 and 612 of the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964, I will see that the new efforts are kept in step with our other antipoverty efforts.

In those localities where the community has undertaken a community action program under the Economic Opportunity Act, the community agency should participate in the planning of these new educational programs and in their coordination with on-going and developing antipoverty efforts.

Enactment of these proposals for elementary and secondary education is of utmost urgency. I urge early and favorable consideration by the Congress.

III. Higher education

Higher education is no longer a luxury, but a necessity.

Programs enacted by Congress in the past have contributed greatly to strengthening our colleges and universities. These will be carried forward under my 1966 budget, which includes:

An additional $179 million to assist construction of college classrooms, libraries and laboratories.

An additional $25 million for 4,500 more graduate fellowships to overcome college teaching shortages.

An additional $110 million to further basic research in the universities; to provide science fellowships and to promote science education.

But we need to do more:

To extend the opportunity for higher education more broadly among lower-and middle-income families.

To help small and less well-developed colleges improve their programs.

To enrich the library resources of colleges and universities.

To draw upon the unique and invaluable resources of our great universities to deal with national problems of poverty and community development.

A. Assistance to students

1. Scholarships

I recommend a program of scholarships for needy and qualified high school graduates to enable them to enter and to continue in college.

Loans authorized by the National Defense Education Act currently assist nearly 300,000 college students. Still the following conditions exist:

Each year an estimated 100,000 young people of demonstrated ability fail to go on to college because of lack of money. Many thousands more from low-income families must borrow heavily to meet college costs:

Only one out of three young people from low-income families attend college compared with four out of five from high-income families.

For many young people from poor families loans are not enough to open the way to higher education.

Under this program, a special effort will be made to identify needy students of promise early in their high school careers. The scholarship will serve as a building block, to be augmented by work-study and other support, so that the needy student can chart his own course in higher studies.

My 1966 budget provides sufficient funds for grants to help up to 140,000 students in the first year.

2. Expansion of work - study opportunity and guaranteed low-interest loans.

I recommend:

That the existing college work-study program be made available to more students and that authority for the program be transferred to the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare.

That a part of he cost of interest payments on guaranteed private loans to college students be paid by the federal government.

Going to college is increasingly expensive. A student must pay nearly $2,400 a year in a private college and about $1,600 in a public college. These costs may rise by one-third over the next decade.

Two aids should be extended o meet the heavy costs of college education. First, the existing work-study program should be expanded for students from low-income families and extended to students from middle-income families. Under this program the federal government pays 90 per cent of the wages earned by students on useful projects. This will enable a student to earn on the average of $450 during a school year, and up to $500 more during the summer.

Second, many families cannot cover all of college expenses on an out-of-pocket basis. We should assure greater availability of private credit on reasonable terms and conditions. This can best be done by paying part of interest cost of guaranteed loans made by private lenders—a more effective, fairer, and far less costly way of providing assistance than the various tax credit devices which have been proposed.

B. Aid to smaller colleges

I recommend that legislation be enacted to strengthen less-developed colleges.

Many of our smaller colleges are battling for survival. About 10 per cent lack proper accreditation, and others face constantly the threat of losing accreditation. Many are isolated from the main currents of academic life.

Private sources and states alone cannot carry the whole burden of doing what must be done for these important units in our total educational system. Federal aid is essential.

Universities should be encouraged to enter into cooperative relationships to help less-developed colleges, including such assistance as:

A program of faculty exchanges.

Special programs to enable faculty members of small colleges to renew and extend knowledge of their fields.

A national fellowship program to encourage highly qualified young graduate students and instructors in large universities to augment the teaching resources of small colleges.

The development of joint programs to make more efficient use of available facilities and faculty.

In union there is strength. This is the basic premise of my recommendation.

C. Support for college library resources.

I recommend enactment of legislation for purchase of books and library materials to strengthen college teaching and research.

Fifty per cent of our four-year institutions and 82 per cent of our two-year institutions fall below accepted professional standards in the number of volumes possessed.

As student enrollment mounts, we must look not only to the physical growth of our colleges and universities, they must be developed as true centers of intellectual activity. To construct a library building is meaningless unless there are books to bring life to the library.

D. University-community extension program.

I recommend a program of grants to support university extension concentrating on the problems of the community.

Institutions of higher learning are being called on ever more frequently for public service — for defense research in foreign development, and countless other programs. They have performed magnificently, We must now call upon them to meet new needs.

Once, 90 per cent of our population earned its living from the land.

A wise Congress enacted the Morrill Act of 1862 and the Hatch Act of 1887 which helped the state universities help the American people. With the aid of the land grant colleges, American agriculture produced overwhelming abundance.

Today, 70 per cent of our people live in urban communities. They are confronted by problems of poverty, residential blight, polluted air and water, inadequate mass transportation and health services, strained human relations, and overburdened municipal services.

Our great universities have the skills and knowledge to match these mountainous problems. They can offer expert guidance in community planning; research and development in pressing educational problems; economic and job market studies; continuing education of the community's professional and business leadership; and programs for the disadvantaged.

The role of the university must extend far beyond the ordinary extension-type operation. Its research findings and talents must be made available to the community. Faculty must be called upon for consulting activities. Pilot projects, seminars, conferences, TV programs and task forces drawing on many departments of the university — all should be brought into play.

This is a demanding assignment for the universties, and many are not now ready for it. The time has come for us to help the university to face problems of the city as it once faced problems of the farm.

E. Specal manpower needs.

We must also ask the colleges and universities to help overcome certain acute deficiencies in trainod manpower. At least 100,000 more professional librarians are needed for service in public libraries and in schools and colleges. We need 140,000 more teachers for handicapped children.

I recommend:

Grants to institutions of higher education for training of school, college, and community librarians and related services.

Extension and expansion of grants for training teachers and handicapped children.

In 1838, Mirabeau B. Lamar, the second president of the Republic of Texas and the father of Texas education, declared: "The cultivated mind is the guardian genius of democracy. It is the only dictator that free man acknowledges. It is the only security that free man desires."

Throughout the history of our nation, the United States has recognized this truth. But during the periods when the country has been most astir with creative activity, when it most keenly sensed the sturdiness of the old reaching out for the vigor of the new, it has given special attention to its educational system.

This was true in the expansive 1820's and 30's, when the American people acted decisively to build a public school system for the lower grades.

It was no less true at the vigorous turn of the 20th century, when high schools were developed for the millions.

Again, during the questing 1930's, fresh ideas stirred the traditions of the ruler and blackboard.

We are now embarked on another venture to put the American dream to work in meeting the new demands for a new day. Once again we must start where men who would improve the society have always known they must begin — with an educational system restudied, reinforced, and revitalized.

Africans Still Don't Want Whites to Leave

By WILLIAM L. Ryan

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The black African seems to be telling the white man: "Get out — but please don't go."

In a continent so vast, so diverse, made up of so many nations, languages and cultures, all generalizations are dangerous. But conversations with African leaders indicate it is safe to make a few:

— There is an ambivalent attitude toward Europeans and Americans. Many African leaders say privately they want and need cooperation from the white world. Some — again in private — frankly criticized African vilifcation of the West after the rescue of hostages from the Congolese rebels. Publicly, however, those who deplored the vituperation preferred to remain silent.

— There is bewilderment among some Africans at being thrust suddenly onto the world stage, blinded by a limelight to which they are unaccustomed; befuddled at sudden enormous problems confronting new countries.

— There is resentment at the idea that Africans are incapable of managing themselves, at the idea that ignorance and illiteracy preclude self-management.

— The slogan of "African unity" is mostly an empty one. There is little prospect of unity. Africa is many different nations wrapped up in one huge continent, with innumerable languages. Sub-Sahara Africa has ancient, local tribal customs which set one group apart from another. The tribal makeup affects the problems of new nations which retain paternalistic traditions and lean naturally toward one-man rule.

— There are frustrations for intellectuals from whose thin ranks the leaders must come. The frustrations seem to feed an inferiority complex impelling some to bristle even at a question which, however carefully phrased, implies African shortcomings.

A substantial number of Africans, say their representatives, want to remain on good terms with Europe and the United States. They may want the white man to get out, in the sense that he should have no rights to influence policies or interfere in African affairs. But they want him to stay in Africa with his known-how and his technology, to guide them toward viability.

Those representatives of Africa who are fearful of cutting ties with the West will say so, however, only to those they know and trust. Expressing such ideas aloud can lead to difficulties.

Those representatives of Africa who are fearful of cutting ties with the West will say so, however, only to those they know and trust. Expressing such ideas aloud can lead to difficulties.

Jaja Wachuku of Nigaria gratified some of his African colleagues last month when he went counter to a chorus of Anti-American condemnation at the United Nations. He paid a price: angry repudiation by his own political party at home. Public defense of the U.S. role in the Congo can create issues between one African country and another and feed ammunition to politicians.

U.N. — Gal 2 African relations

African diplomats who have kind words for the United States often decline to be identified by name or nation, an even these are critical of Americans.

"The United States," says one, "agreed the Congo should be isolated from the Cold War. We worked for this. But the effort collapsed because of the Americans."

He referred to U.S. support for Moise Tshombe as Congo premier. He held it incomprehensible that Americans could do this after the U.N. — with American blessing — fought to oust Tshombe as a secessionist leader of Katanga Province.

African intellectuals refer time and again to events in Mississippi.

"Americans have friends," said one diplomat, "but their friends are embarrassed. When bullets are fired at people trying to rebuild a burned church in Mississippi, is that any more excusable than the killing of missionaries in the Congo? I was ashamed of the Congo killing, and no sane African approved it, but can you talk about the Congo in view of the things that happened in Missis- things that happened in Mississippi"

African leaders and intellectuals have adopted many ready-made labels — imperialism, colonialism, neocolonialism — in lodging their complaints against the United States. But they, in turn, accuse Americans of being victims of cliches: leftism, Communist infiltration, Communist subversion, anti-Americanism.

"No country in Africa is Communist," said one diplomat. "You are the victim of labels. Your whole policy is negative.

Some leaders express gratification for such efforts as the Peace Corps. But, said one, U.S. policy seems to demand a flatchoice: pro-West or anti-West.

Conversation with African representatives in the United States gives the impression that they are worried about their small corps of intellectuals and students at home. Frustrations often impel young men to adopt the prefabricated slogans, to associate themselves with Communist ideas because they blame all their troubles on a history of colonialism, and thus to seek common cause with Communists against the West. They are familiar only with the West's brand of colonialism.

Independence — often in nations far from prepared for it — has burdened the small intellectual elite with infuriating problems. Many have found that independence is an expensive affair, profitable for a small group but requiring all the trappings of nationhood.

In many cases, African democracy turns out to be another form of dictatorship, or at least of "planned development." Thrust into the 20th Century with stunning suddenness, Africans have had no time to build foundations for representative government.

"Give us time," says one of their representatives. "Try to understand. We are doing the best we can with what little we have."

Edison's Home May Become Monument

MILAN, Ohio (AP) — As a boy, Thomas A. Edison could look out from the red brick house on Choate's Lane and see prairie schooners headed for California.

The house hasn't changed much since Edison's father built it in the early 1840's. The Department of the Interior now has it listed as one of 27 sites eligible for national historical status.

Edison was born there in 1847. He moved away with his parents seven years later, but the house still remains the property of the Edison family.

The house is stocked with Edison memorabilia and is maintained by an association under Edison's daughter, Mrs. John E. Sloan, and curator Albert E. Galbraith Jr.

Rare Malay Bear Cub Gets Attention

CINCINNATI, Ohio (AP) — The rare Malay sun bear cub at the Cincinnati Zoo is getting a lot of attention, but not from its papa. The papa bear probably would kill it.

The cub — only the second ever to be born in the United States and survive — was taken from its mother Monday and placed in the zoo's nursery. It has never been allowed to get close to papa bear.

A cub was born to the same pair here last year. It was killed almost immediately by the male.

"We don't know why the male does this," said zoo director William Hoff. "He probably just thinks it's a strange animal in the cage."

The second cub was born Oct. 8. Hoff said its sex was to be determined today.

TOO HEAVY TO MOVE

PHILADELPHIA (AP) —The huge bronze and crystal chandelier in the marble lobby of the Philadelphia mint weighs 3,400 pounds. It cost $3,400 when it was installed in 1900 and burns a total of 128 bulbs. Its value would be almost inestimable today. It is not expected to be moved to the new Mint building — construction of which will be started in 1965—because it is an integral part of the lobby and the cost of moving it would be prohibitive.

Judge Asher set Smith's bond at $50 and ordered him to post a $10 jury docket fee.

James Szweakman, 40, Ft. Carson, was fined $100 on a guilty finding of riotous conduct. Judge Asher suspended $75 on condition the soldier is involved in no further trouble with his ex-wife, Mrs. Virginia Szweakman, 1024 N. Corona St., who signed the complaint.

Mrs. Perlene Carpenter, 40, 505 Norman Dr., Security, failed to appear in court for her trial on a drunk charge. Testimony was taken by the judge and a guilty finding was handed down. Mrs. Carpenter was fined $50 and a writ of execution was ordered issued.

Billy Salaz, 20, 120 N. Pine St., also failed to appear for his trial on charges of riotous conduct and breach of peace. He was found guilty, a $50 fine was imposed, and a writ of execution ordered issued. In the companion case, Judge Asher levied a $25 fine against Michael Kearney, 24, Ft. Carson, who has pleaded guilty to identical charges.

Charges were dismissed against the following: Wayne Simmons, 26, 2422 W. Vermijo St., riotous conduct and drunk; James Ward, 71, 425 W. Colorado Ave., riotous conduct; and John Gulley, 24, 833 W. Colorado Ave., disorderly conduct, riotous conduct, drunkennness, and injury to private property.

Mrs. Margie Gomez, 24, 720 N. Iowa Ave., was found guilty of breach of peace and was fined $15.

Charges of riotous conduct, breach of peace and drunkenness were dismissed by the judge against Al Garza, 41, 707 S. Tejon St.

The charges had been brought against Garza by Clarinda Keller, 123 W. Rio Grande St., who testified that on Dec. 31 Garza came to her house and she asked him to hold her key while she went to a market. She said when she returned, Garza told her he misplaced the key. She said she thought he was "just playing" but she called the police, and he then returned the key to her.

"All this over a key?" Judge Asher asked, and Mrs. Keller said, "Yes." "Was he drunk?" the judge asked, and Mrs. Keller said she didn't know. "Because a man wouldn't give you a key, you had him arrested?" the judge persisted, and Mrs. Keller said, "yes."

Judge Asher said the charges would be dismissed against Garza, but added: "I'm going to see that some action is taken against Mrs. Keller."

Fulton Named Canon City Police Officer

Canon City Police Chief Kenneth Owens has announced that Glen Fulton, 31, a former Canon City resident, has been appointed as an officer of the Canon City force.

Fulton fills the vacancy left by the resignation of Eugene Cater, who recently joined the Colorado State Patrol.

Fulton was reared in Canon City, coming here with his parents when he was three years old. He was graduated from Canon City High School in 1950, and joined the Navy in 1952, serving four years.

In working for the city, Fulton joins his brother, Dean, who is a member of the Canon City fire department. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Fulton, live at 403 West New York Ave., Canon City, and three sisters, Mrs. Fred Helton, Mrs. Leroy Schneider, and Mrs. George Elley, all live in Canon City.

TOO HEAVY TO MOVE

PHILADELPHIA (AP) —The huge bronze and crystal chandelier in the marble lobby of the Philadelphia mint weighs 3,400 pounds. It cost $3,400 when it was installed in 1900 and burns a total of 128 bulbs. Its value would be almost inestimable today. It is not expected to be moved to the new Mint building — construction of which will be started in 1965— because it is an integral part of the lobby and the cost of moving it would be prohibitive.

Man Asks Jury Trial in City Court Case

Harold Smith, 46, 617 Valley Rd., asked for a jury trial Monday in Municipal Court after he pleaded not builty to charges of disorderly conduct, riotous conduct, breach of peace, and injury to private property.

Smith said he would be represented by attorney Gordon Cooper. His trial date will be set today.

Judge Asher set Smith's bond at $50 and ordered him to post a $10 jury docket fee.

James Szweakman, 40, Ft. Carson, was fined $100 on a guilty finding of riotous conduct. Judge Asher suspended $75 on condition the soldier is involved in no further trouble with his ex-wife, Mrs. Virginia Szweakman, 1024 N. Corona St., who signed the complaint.

Mrs. Perlene Carpenter, 40, 505 Norman Dr., Security, failed to appear in court for her trial on a drunk charge. Testimony was taken by the judge and a guilty finding was handed down. Mrs. Carpenter was fined $50 and a writ of execution was ordered issued.

Billy Salaz, 20, 120 N. Pine St., also failed to appear for his trial on charges of riotous conduct and breach of peace. He was found guilty, a $50 fine was imposed, and a writ of execution ordered issued. In the companion case, Judge Asher levied a $25 fine against Michael Kearney, 24, Ft. Carson, who has pleaded guilty to identical charges.

Charges were dismissed against the following: Wayne Simmons, 26, 2422 W. Vermijo St., riotous conduct and drunk; James Ward, 71, 425 W. Colorado Ave., riotous conduct; and John Gulley, 24, 833 W. Colorado Ave., disorderly conduct, riotous conduct, drunkennness, and injury to private property.

Mrs. Margie Gomez, 24, 720 N. Iowa Ave., was found guilty of breach of peace and was fined $15.

Charges of riotous conduct, breach of peace and drunkenness were dismissed by the judge against Al Garza, 41, 707 S. Tejon St.

The charges had been brought against Garza by Clarinda Keller, 123 W. Rio Grande St., who testified that on Dec. 31 Garza came to her house and she asked him to hold her key while she went to a market. She said when she returned, Garza told her he misplaced the key. She said she thought he was "just playing" but she called the police, and he then returned the key to her.

"All this over a key?" Judge Asher asked, and Mrs. Keller said, "Yes." "Was he drunk?" the judge asked, and Mrs. Keller said she didn't know. "Because a man wouldn't give you a key, you had him arrested?" the judge persisted, and Mrs. Keller said, "yes."

Judge Asher said the charges would be dismissed against Garza, but added: "I'm going to see that some action is taken against Mrs. Keller."

INCOME PROPERTY

A very exceptional opportunity for an employed or retired person to secure a large income from property which has enjoyed full occupancy for past 21 years, because it is ideally located and contains a large number of small highly improved units, each complete with kitchen and bath. These units are of the popular demand type and are moderately priced which is possible because of the large number of units in the property. Our experience proves that there is a constant, unsatisfied demand for this type of apartment. Will yield a high percentage on investment. 634-2706.

INCOME PROPERTY

A very exceptional opportunity for an employed or retired person to secure a large income from property which has enjoyed full occupancy for past 21 years, because it is ideally located and contains a large number of small highly improved units, each complete with kitchen and bath. These units are of the popular demand type and are moderately priced which is possible because of the large number of units in the property. Our experience proves that there is a constant, unsatisfied demand for this type of apartment. Will yield a high percentage on investment. 634-2706.

How to Cut Your Own Income Tax

BY RAY DE CRANE
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

It probably was an Internal Revenue auditor who first said: "There would be no mortgages outstanding on churches today if churches actually received all the money people claimed they contributed on their tax returns."

Perhaps that is why so many church officials are being queried by tax auditors these days to confirm contributions being reported on tax returns.

As in all other statements and deductions claimed on tax forms the burden of proof is on the taxpayer and it is a wise man who has a statement from his church or canceled checks to support his contributions.

Furthermore, there is no "rule of thumb" or "average amount" to be listed as a contribution. List what you actually gave. That amount is your deduction.

Of course, for the overly generous there are maximum limitations. Contributions are generally limited to 20 per cent of total income. An additional 10 per cent may be taken if the money went to religious, charitable, scientific, literary or educational organizations. This does not include tuition to a school or college but an outright gift.

In addition to your contributions to church you may deduct all contributions to nonprofit schools and hospitals, Salvation Army, Red Cross, Community Chest, Camp Fire Girls, Boy Scouts, the various health funds and societies for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals.

There are other items that are also properly considered as deductible charitable contributions.

Say you go to a theater party where all the proceeds go to a recognized charity. If the cost of the ticket is $50 and the usual charge for the entertainment or play is $5, then the additional $45 is treated as a contribution.

Or you go to a church affair and bid $10 for a box lunch. If the fair market value of the lunch is $1.50, you have an $8.50 charitable contribution.

Should you give articles of clothing or household goods to a church or charitable agency then the fair market value of the items so given is deductible.

If you are a volunteer worker at a hospital, a den mother to a Brownie or Cub Scout pack or the Boy Scouts or Girl Scouts you may have some deductible expenses which never occurred to you.

As a volunteer worker, your cost of transportion to and from the hospital or welfare institution is deductible. If you used your own car the cost of gas and oil plus parking may be itemized. Or you may simply use a Treasury-approved allowance of five cents a mile on the car.

Cost of meals and lodging while performing your donated service are also deductible. Should you be required to wear a distinctive uniform which is not readily adatable to general use its original cost and laundering expenses may also be included.

Den mothers who take turns holding meetings for Scout groups may charge off the cost of snacks served at meetings as well as transportation expenses when taking such groups on field trips.

Delegates to a church convention who are not compensated for their services or reimbursed for their expenses may deduct the transportation charges plus the cost of meals and lodging while attending to convention business.

Under no circumstances may you charge off any value placed on your time or services while performing such volunteer work.

Should you donate painting, a work of art, a bond, securities or anything of value to a religious or charitable institution, the fiar market value of the item — it may be more or less than your original cost — is fully deductible.

Astronauts Try To Tramp on Hawaiian Lava

VOLCANO, Hawaii (AP) — Eight U.S. astronauts tramped Monday through lava flows formed as recently as 1960 on this island 200 miles southeast of Honolulu.

Dr. Howard Powers, scientist-in-charge of the volcano observatory on Hawaii Island, said he was "tremendously impressed by the astronauts' interest" at the end of the first day of the American spacemen's five-day trip on this "moon-like landscape."

Astronaut David Scott said it was his group's first experience with the clinker-type lava on Hawaii Island's volcanic flows. On previous field trips on the American mainland, they had seen older flows mainly of the high quartz rhyolite lava, he said.

Today the astronauts will hike through to the crater floor of Kilauea-Iki, the 300-foot-deep lava lake deposited in a 1959 eruption, and on to the rim of Halemaumau fire pit.

They will also drive down the Chain of Craters road where they will be shown a series of pit craters.

Show Business, Showmanship Part of Politics

By JOHN CHAMBERLAIN

In practically every reference to George Murphy, the new senator from California, he is ticketed as the "song and dance man." There is always a tinge patronizing in such a description. Yet show business is part of politics, as Ronald Reagan, a theatrical friend of George Murphy's, demonstrated when he made the most potent conservative speech of the entire 1964 campaign. People forget that Tom Dewey was a singer, that the elder Bob La Follette yearned to be a Shakespearean actor and that the success of the late President Kennedy's campaigns was at least partially due to the advice of his father, a trick or two about the arts of showmanship in his career as a Hollywood impresario.

But if George Murphy need not apologize for being a showman, he has a right to resent any implication that he is just an ex-hoofer and no more. Actually, he has had more types of experience than most aspirants to important political careers. His father was Mike Murphy, a famous college and Olympic track coach. George himself had three years of Yale, leaving for economic reasons, and his first job was in Wall Street as a runner in the days of the great madness of the late twenties. He got into show business because he married a dancer who could carry an act sufficiently well to keep the family afloat during the perilous years of the great depression.

What really makes George Murphy an exciting prospect in politics is his experience as a labor leader. He found himself president of the Screen Actors Guild at a time when the Communists, in collaboration with some fellow - traveling liberals, were making a big pitch to infiltrate the key positions of power in Hollywood. There have been many complaints about the "backlisting" of Communist screen writers, but what is forgotten is the period in which the Communists and their sympathizers tried with all sorts of dirty maneuvers to force patriotic authors such as the humorous playwright Morrie Ryskind into a limbo of fashionable contempt.

George Murphy was too tough, too wise and too patriotic on his own part to let the leftists succeed in their attempted takeover of the Screen Actors Guild. He remembers ruefully his period as a labor leader. "Those Hollywood liberals," he has said. "If you didn't fit their viewpoint, they tried to destroy you."

After a long strugle the anti-Communists won their particular fight to take over the leadership of the Time Guild chapter. Those of us who witnessed the fight from close up — and the group included the late Whittaker Chambers, who always knew when the Communists were likely to pull a parliamentary trick — would never be fooled for long in later contacts with the fellow - traveling left.

George Murphy has had lots of experience in California Republican politics ever since he left the Democratic party to support Wendell Willkie. In 1953 he was state chairman of his party, a difficult job which he performed with some brilliance at a time when the various factions of Senator Knowland, Governor Knight and Vice-President Nixon were trying to cut each other's throat. But the thing that has really prepared George Murphy for the Senate is his labor leader experience with the sort of leftist that always strikes from ambush.

Senator George Murphy will not be folled as he watches the Communists maneuver on the world stage.

College Projects Of 'Casuals' Help Negroes

United Press International

"The Casuals" brought somewhat unorthodox education methods to Princeton University, but they got the job done.

Membership of "The Casuals" came from among the 40 under-educated youths, most of them Negroes, who were invited to Princeton last summer in one of several university pilot programs attempting to give intensive remedial education to young Americans who need it.

Distrustful and suspicious at first, "The Casuals" considered faking their way through the course, all the while throwing the entire program out of operation by various kinds of mischief.

Somewhere along the line, according to Princeton Associate English Professor Laurence B. Holland, "The Casuals" concluded the program was sincere and they decided to help.

From then on, their "tutors" appeared nightly in the rooms of less diligent students.

"Without helping, the tutor simply sat on his bed until the assignment was finished," Holland wrote in the Princeton Alumni Weekly.

School Dropouts

The special programs have as their main emphasis curing the high school dropout problem, often stimulated by hopelessness over inability to learn, and preparing worthwhile students for college work. All the institutions surveyed are optimistic over results from last summer but emphasize they are too tentative for evaluation thus far.

At Swarthmore College, a summer project drew students fom the racially-tense Chester, Pa. area.

"We think it was outstandingly successful both educationally and in terms of human understanding," said Gilmore Stott, co-chairman of the program. "One testimony is provided by the fact that we had no dropouts whatever and nearly 100 per cent attendance."

Swarthmore selected 30 boys and girls who had completed the ninth grade, all from low income families but who show potential for education beyond high school.

Dartmouth College at Hanover, N.H., called its summer program "Project ABC" and enrolled 55 pupils, all with the mental capacity for college work but who might not qualify if left in present surroundings. All but six now are enrolled in preparatory schools.

"We found much to admire about these young people," said Charles F. Dey, project director. "There was openness, sincerity, and willingess to stretch."

Kansas Woman May Have Fallen Overboard

NEW YORK (AP) — A Kansas woman disappeared from the liner United States at sea and is believed to have fallen overboard, a spokesman for the U.S. Lines said Monday night.

The woman was identified as Estelle Sebastien. The line spokesman said her husband, Louis, identified their home only as "a small town in Kansas."

The couple were traveling with their three children, the spokesman said.

The liner docked Monday afternoon from Bremerhaven, Germany, and it was disclosed that Mrs. Sebastien had vanished early in the morning.

The ship's officers instituted a search after her husband reported she had been missing for two hours.

There are more than 180,000 election districts in the nation.

How to Cut Your Own Income Tax

BY RAY DE CRANE
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

It probably was an Internal Revenue auditor who first said: "There would be no mortgages outstanding on churches today if churches actually received all the money people claimed they contributed on their tax returns."

Perhaps that is why so many church officials are being queried by tax auditors these days to confirm contributions being reported on tax returns.

As in all other statements and deductions claimed on tax forms the burden of proof is on the taxpayer and it is a wise man who has a statement from his church or canceled checks to support his contributions.

Furthermore, there is no "rule of thumb" or "average amount" to be listed as a contribution. List what you actually gave. That amount is your deduction.

Of course, for the overly generous there are maximum limitations. Contributions are generally limited to 20 per cent of total income. An additional 10 per cent may be taken if the money went to religious, charitable, scientific, literary or educational organizations. This does not include tuition to a school or college but an outright gift.

In addition to your contributions to church you may deduct all contributions to nonprofit schools and hospitals, Salvation Army, Red Cross, Community Chest, Camp Fire Girls, Boy Scouts, the various health funds and societies for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals.

There are other items that are also properly considered as deductible charitable contributions.

Say you go to a theater party where all the proceeds go to a recognized charity. If the cost of the ticket is $50 and the usual charge for the entertainment or play is $5, then the additional $45 is treated as a contribution.

Or you go to a church affair and bid $10 for a box lunch. If the fair market value of the lunch is $1.50, you have an $8.50 charitable contribution.

Should you give articles of clothing or household goods to a church or charitable agency then the fair market value of the items so given is deductible.

If you are a volunteer worker at a hospital, a den mother to a Brownie or Cub Scout pack or the Boy Scouts or Girl Scouts you may have some deductible expenses which never occurred to you.
